BRITAIN SPLIT ON KING'S FATE

30 PLANES BOMB MADRID; WRECK PREMIER'S HOME

Explosives Rain on City During Siesta.

MADRID, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Bomb-scarred Madrid reverberated under the fiercest aerial onslaught of the siege today as thirty rebel planes, droning high over the city, unleased death from the skies.

One explosive bomb wrecked the apartment of Premier Francisco Largo Caballero on Viriato street. Largo Caballero was in Valencia with other government ministers.

Shattering the afternoon lull of siesta time, the raiders appeared without warning over the Rosales sector and dropped scores of high explosives. Anti-aircraft guns and machine guns set up in the streets sent volley after volley at the invaders.

Casualties could not be immediately ascertained.

Defenders' Lines Intact.

Three previous air raids had given Madrid's citizens a sleepless night, but encouragement arose from reports that Socialist troops had come through the bitter fighting of the last forty-eight hours with their lines intact.

Insurgent attempts to steam-roller their way into the capital by way of Pozuelo de Alarcon, northwest of Madrid, were temporarily balked, government sources said, and loyalist fighters maintained the newly won ground at Real Casa de Campo, due west of the capital.

The feeling was abroad in the capital that the "final battle" must soon break in full fury to end the siege—one way or another.

With the pinch of hunger beginning to affect the populace, troops pouring back to the firing lines after a brief rest from battle exhorted their weary comrades to renewed efforts.

"Our lines are holding—everywhere," one officer, fresh from the front, said exultantly.

Foreign Volunteers Hold Ground.

A war office report said 1,200 bombs and shells had taken a heavy toll of life and property damage in a combined aerial and artillery bombardment on rebel lines at Pozuelo de Alarcon, in the Casa del Campo and in University City.

The international "foreign legion" of volunteers, fighting with the Madrid forces, held their ground against a savage attack near Pozuela and Aravaca, where the rebels were reported trying to cut the main highway to France.

Loyalists claimed they had captured several parapets on Fascist trenches on the southern rim of Madrid, near the Puente Princesa.

On the western edge of the city, between the Puente de la Florida and Frenchman's bridge, government dynamite squads blew up sewer sections on the city side of the Manzanares river. The deliberate destruction was carried out to thwart a reported insurgent plan to make a surprise attack through the underground sewer system.

Claim Many Loyalists Slain.

SALAMANCA, Spain, Dec. 4.—(AP)—A Fascist insurgent communique today asserted Spanish loyalist losses in intense fighting south of Santander were so heavy 200 trucks were required to transport thousands of casualties.

The loyalists struggled for the possession of the village of Montecelli in a raging conflict around El Espinosa del Tomares and rebels reported the loyalist losses to have been "most heavy." The loyalist effort to break through the insurgent northern front in a drive on Burgos, seat of the Fascist junta, was held by the insurgents to have failed.

Rebels Seize Soviet Ship.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Spanish insurgent armed vessels stopped a Russian steamer in the Strait of Gibraltar today by firing two shots across her bows and compelled the soviet ship to head for Spanish Morocco. The Russian steamer was identified as the Stepankhalturim.

[The Bureau Veritas shipping registry lists a Russian steamer named Stepanhalturin, of 2,498 gross tons, built by the Russian government in 1921 and registered at Archangel, U. S. S. R.]

A rebel gunboat and four armed trawlers halted the Russian ship within sight of Gibraltar. Insurgent officers went on board and headed the steamer toward Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, with the five Fascist vessels acting as a convoy.

WALLY'S ROLE

VIVIAN PROVES A VALUABLE GIRL TO HAVE AROUND

Eleven years ago Vivian Daly, then about 6 years old, complained of an ache in her right ear. At the same time her mother, Mrs. Margaret F. Daly, discovered that the $355 diamond in her engagement ring had been broken from its setting and had disappeared.

In the excitement over the missing stone, Vivian's earache, which was slight, was overlooked. Mrs. Daly and her husband, John, searched the house for the gem. They called in a plumber. He took the drain pipes apart. But neither he nor the Dalys could find the diamond.

Several weeks ago Vivian, now 17 years old, a pupil in the Englewood High school and living at 306 West 61st street, complained again of an ache in her right ear. Yesterday her father took her to the office of Dr. Evan A. Miller, 6458 South Halsted street. Dr. Miller probed into the ear. He found an obstruction. With forceps he extracted it. It was the missing diamond.

CASTOR OIL CURE FOR DRUNK FAILS; HE GETS 30 DAYS

In the lineup of police cases, most of them drunks, was Walter Crisler, who, by all of Yuse's calculations, should not have been there.

Walter was one of seven men who took Yuse's "sure cure" for drunkenness—four ounces of castor oil—in preference to a 10-day jail sentence yesterday. Yuse fought the city council, police department, corporation counsel's office and all-comers for the right to prescribe the purge to two-time drunks.

"I just took a couple of 'snifters,'" Crisler apologized. "I'd like to take some more castor oil, then I'll leave town."

"You will not," exploded the judge. "It's 30 days in jail for you. I gave you your chance!"

Dog Has His Day; Makes a Night of It

A temperamental dog caused a long trafic tieup in North Ashland avenue last night, regardless of friendly policemen, cookies, candy, and sausages. It all began when a passing automobile brushed the dog underneath a north bound Ashland avenue street car at Altgard street. The motorman stopped quickly, thinking he had killed the animal. Instead he found the dog lying alert, alive, and unhurt under the street car just in front of the rear trucks.

The motorman called the dog. The dog wouldn't come out. The motorman started to crawl under the car after him, but backed out quickly when the dog growled. A call for help was then phoned to Desk Sergeant Jack Deshong of the Sheffield avenue police station. He sent Sergt. David Mulchrome and a squad to the scene.

Get Plenty of Advice.

Meantime, northbound trafic was being stalled. A dozen street cars strung out behind the dog-bound car. Hundreds of people, including passengers, gathered around. Sergt. Mulchrome, helpless, called Policeman Barney McGovern, a dog expert.

"Get me some cookies, candy, and sausage," McGovern commanded.

The articles of bait procured, McGovern held them out one at a time temptingly, but the dog merely sniffed at them.

McGovern gave up. Except to start the car and kill the pesky dog, there was only one last move. That was to call the wreck wagon.

Two wreck wagons responded. The crews, after trying to shoo the dog out and failing, jacked up the car. The dog walked out.

THIS DOG'S DIFFERENT

The foregoing concerns an attempt to get a dog. An attempt to get rid of one also came to light last night.

It was learned that Mrs. Martha Benson of Gage's Lake, Lake county, will go on trial this afternoon before Police Magistrate Fred Smith in Libertyville on a charge of abandoning a dog in the Libertyville Memorial park last Nov. 3. The complainant is Mrs. Gladys Young, secretary of the Orphans of the Storm, the dog haven maintained by Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin in Deerfield.

An Uninvited Guest.

Mrs. Benson, who is about 50 years old, is the widow of Alfred S. Benson, former head of the Chicago Cartage company. She said last night that the dog, a mongrel, wandered into her estate, Gagemere, on Nov. 3. As she did not want the animal, Mrs. Benson said, she took it to the park and let it out of her car.

The park is just across the street from the Libertyville police station and Mrs. Benson was observed by Charles Ling, janitor of the station and caretaker of the park. He took the dog to the Orphans of the Storm.

Mrs. Young swore out a warant against Mrs. Benson under the anti-cruelty to animals statute and she was arrested last Monday night. She was released on her own bond pending the trial this afternoon.

If Mrs. Benson is found guilty of the abandonment charge by Magistrate Smith she can be fined any amount from $3 to $200 under the statute.

PREMIER'S FALL SEEN AS LONDON CHEERS RULER

Monarch and 'His Missus' Hailed.

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1936, By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Stanley Baldwin's days as prime minister of Great Britain are believed numbered as a result of the crisis over King Edward's romance with Mrs. Wallis Simpson. Whatever may be the outcome of the sudden flareup of the dilemma over the king's possible marriage, it is believed that the rising tide of rebellion against the king's abdication, even though it is unsuccessful, will make it impossible for Baldwin to remain as head of the government. Street demonstrations for the king in London tonight added to this belief.

The situation seems to be that while the majority opinion of the British people may disapprove of the king's marrying the twice divorced American woman and especially of making her queen, they are not likely to pardon the ministers for not finding some way out of the crisis. Furthermore, they are likely to rebel if they get the idea that there was any maneuver to make their sovereign renounce his throne.

Call Baldwin a "Victorian."

Partisan politics and the animosity of rival groups, of course, come into play. Baldwin is openly charged with representing Victorian thought. Sir Oswald Mosley, Fascist leader, tonight declared that Whitehall "politicians created this crisis by interfering in the king's life."

Mosley got great cheers at a rally when he declared:

"Before a junta of politicians forces the king to abdicate, the issue should be submitted to the people."

Forcing out Baldwin as a result of the prominence he has had to take in the present crisis would lead to a further delicate situation, it is generally agreed. It has been noted that Winston Churchill, Conservative statesman, has figured conspicuously in the parliamentary situation with questions during the last two days. He has been suggested as one of those who would undertake to form a government if called upon to do so.

CHEER KING AND WALLY

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Shouting "three cheers for the new queen," a huge crowd jostled police in Trafalgar square, in the heart of London, tonight as clamorous demonstrations in behalf of King Edward VIII. swept through the city like wildfire.

Blue coated bobbies, sweating and shoving, dispersed a crowd attempting to demonstrate noisily in front of the residence of the heir-presumptive duke of York.

"Let the king know you are with him!" they roared, and waved banners bearing the same legend. Under police pressure, the crowd marched away singing "God Save the King!" at the top of their lungs.

Shout "Edward Is Right!"

Nimble footed demonstrators scaled the base of towering Nelson monument, in Trafalgar square, and drew volleying cheers from the great crowd with their shouts: "Edward is right! Baldwin is wrong!"

Police came running. "'Ere now! Move along!" They grunted wedging their way through the sardine formation to reach the impromptu orators.

The crowd, good natured, moved. "Three cheers for the new queen! Three cheers for Mrs. Simpson!" they cried, again and again.

Thousands strong they swung along historic Haymarket en route to Piccadilly Circus, blocking trafic every few minutes to stop and sing the national anthem.

Down Whitehall, away from Trafalgar square toward old "Big Ben" and the houses of parliament, marched another column. They stopped at the alleylike entrance to famed

Vatican officials said the pope had canceled all activities and audiences and spent his first day in bed since becoming head of the Catholic church. Some prelates declared he might never walk again.

Dr. Amanti Milani was called to attend the pontiff and has remained constantly at the pope's bedside, prelates said.

Discovered by His Valet.

The pope's condition was discovered early this morning by his valet, Malvestiti, when he attempted to assist the holy father in arising, church officials reported.

The prelates declared the pope was unable to get out of bed. Doctor Milani was called and made an immediate examination.

The result, persons close to the Vatican declared, was the determination that the holy father had been stricken with paralysis, which it was said, is feared to be progressive.

Follows Report of Improvement.

The report of paralysis followed a statement from persons close to the Vatican that the pope was "somewhat indisposed" at the conclusion of a week's annual spiritual retreat.

A high Vatican official disclosed the 79 year old pontiff said a week ago as he began the spiritual exercises:

"Owing to our great age, we must always be ready and prepared for the final call."

Consequently, the holy father ordered that the exercises this year be conducted with the greatest thoroughness. He gave orders he did not wish to grant any audiences in opposition to his usual custom of receiving a few persons even during the retreat.

During the last week, the high official declared, the pope has not been seen by any one except the immediate prelates and attendants of his household.

Laid to Heart Inflammation.

The paralysis was attributed by the attending physicians to inflammation of the heart. Some recalled that both the pontiff's mother and elder brother, Fermo, were stricken in the same way. Fermo spent the last year of his life in an arm chair which, some believed, may be the case with the pope.

This morning, the pope was to have attended the closing ceremony of the retreat which he began last Sunday night. When it was found he could not arise, six cardinals and a group of bishops and prelates who had gathered for the ceremony, went to his bedroom and held the service there.

Sermon Read at Bedside.

The jesuit preacher, Father Magni, who was to have read the last sermon of the retreat in the Sistine chapel, read it instead standing beside the pope's bed. The pontiff listened intently, prelates said, apparently in possession of all his mental faculties.

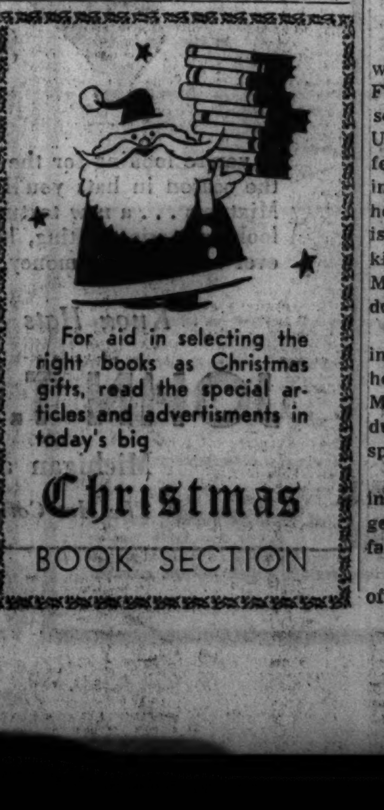
Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, papal secretary of state, read a message signed by the pope himself.

In the message, the pontiff called attention to the importance of the spiritual exercise just concluded and excused himself for not attending, owing to a "local disturbance."

News Causes Consternation.

News of the pope's illness spread quickly throughout the Vatican, causing consternation in all quarters.

It was announced at noon that all audiences had been canceled. The pope was to have received hundreds of persons, mostly newly married couples who had been sent invitations. They were told the audiences might begin Monday. Private sources said, however, there was no definite time set for the receptions.



CABINET MEETS AND ADJOURNS; NO STATEMENT

Edward's Plans Remain Secret.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Dec. 5 (Saturday).—(Special.)—The British cabinet went into special session at 10 a. m. to hear Prime Minister Baldwin's account of discussions with King Edward yesterday and last night. It was said by high sources that the king sent notice that he would not yield to the government's ultimatum that he renounce Mrs. Simpson.

A few minutes after the cabinet assembled, news flashed to Downing street that the king's big black automobile had swung out the gates of Fort Belvedere on the London road with a single occupant sunk in its deep cushions, and although the king couldn't definitly be recognized it was assumed his majesty was en route to Buckingham palace.

The cabinet was in session 40 minutes and then adjourned without making any statement. It was announced it will meet again at 10:30 a. m. Monday.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 5 (Saturday).—The Daily Mirror, powerful tabloid paper belonging to the Lord Rothermere group, banishes pictures from the front page this morning to demand in huge headlines, "Tell us facts, Mr. Baldwin. The nation insists upon knowing the king's full demands and conditions. The country will give you the verdict." In the center in heavy type is an extract from Baldwin's speech in the commons and the top page carries the line, "God Save the King."

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The British nation was warned tonight to prepare for "momentous events" over this coming week-end. These events are believed to be the abdication of King Edward VIII. of England and the succession to the throne of his brother, the duke of York.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, following his statement to parliament, in which he was supported by the dominions, opposing unalterably King Edward's morganatic marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, twice divorced American woman, spent an hour with his sovereign this evening at Fort Belvedere, the king's country home. The king was said to have given the prime minister his "last word" in the controversy.

Cabinet Meets Today.

When Baldwin returned to London he called a cabinet meeting for 10 a. m. tomorrow, at which the abdication message and plans for the duke of York's assumption to the throne will be dealt with. After the cabinet meeting, it was understood, Baldwin will again visit the king at Fort Belvedere.

The center of this empire shaking drama, meantime, had secretly left London. Mrs. Simpson was at Blois, France, tonight. One report said she had consented to go only after she had been promised by the king that he would not abdicate.

Baldwin Shows Strain.

Baldwin looked worn and weary when he arrived in London from Fort Belvedere, accompanied by his secretary and a private detective. Upon his arrival he went into conference for two hours at 10 Downing street with Sir John Simon, home secretary and legal expert, who is said to oppose thwarting the king's marriage. Later Baldwin saw Malcolm MacDonald, secretary for dominions.

King Edward spent the entire day in seclusion at Fort Belvedere, where he was in consultation with W. T. Monckton, attorney general of the duchy of Cornwall. Monckton had spent the night at Fort Belvedere.

King Edward was said to be showing signs of nervous strain, but his general health was reported to be fairly good.

The course to be followed in event of the king's abdication is understood already to have been determined. The king, according to the Morning Post, would sign a deed of abdication on the assumption that he is constitutionally entitled to abdicate by his own act. The deed of abdication would make the duke of York successor to the throne.

Parliament, nevertheless, would be asked by the government to pass a declaratory act so as to avoid doubt of the legality of the abdication and the succession of the duke of York and to secure the succession formally to the duke of York's heirs.

The desirability of a declaratory act, it is pointed out, arises from the fact that the Act of Succession of 1701 limits the right of succession to Protestant heirs of Princess Sophia, duchess of Hanover and granddaughter of James II.

Procedure Is Explained.

In the absence of a declaratory act, it is argued, it might be open to King Edward or any of his supporters to press his claims to the throne after the abdication on the ground that his signature to the deed of abdication could not annul an act of parliament.

During today's session of the house of commons, Winston Churchill, Conservative leader, again demanded that the king should not be allowed to abdicate without a previous vote by the house. He voiced a similar demand yesterday. This development led experienced members to fear that serious consequences might arise if the house should be presented by the government with the abdication as a fait accompli.

Archbishop Issues Appeal.

Much significance was attached to an appeal issued tonight by the archbishop of Canterbury, bitter enemy of King Edward's association with Mrs. Simpson, to all the clergy in England. It said:

"At this moment of deep anxiety and bewilderment in the public mind I venture to express two earnest hopes.

"The first is that during this critical week-end, especially on Sunday, those who have the duty to speak to the people from the pulpit or otherwise will refrain from speaking directly on matters which have arisen affecting the king himself and his subjects.

"Words spoken with imperfect knowledge of an extremely difficult and delicate situation can give no helpful guidance and may only mislead or confuse public thought and feeling.

"I hope, indeed I take it for granted, that on Sunday prayers will be offered in all our churches, as surely they must be continually offered in the hearts of all Christian people, that God in these momentous hours rule over the decisions of the king and of his government for the lasting good of the realm and empire."

Door Seen Closed on King.

Baldwin's statement in the house of commons was interpreted by high officials to amount to an announcement that Edward would have to give up his throne. Baldwin said his government, supported by the dominions, would refuse to pass special legislation enabling Edward to marry Mrs. Simpson morganatically.

The duke of York visited his mother, Queen Mary, twice today. There appears no doubt in the minds of government leaders that he will be the successor, with the title of Albert I., although Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard tonight advocated avoidance of abdication at any cost and declared that the duke of York might not want to accept the succession. The duke's movements, however, do not seem to suggest this.

Wally Is Issue Before Public.

Baldwin's announcement has posed an issue before the public not on whether the people approve the king's desire to live his own private life and marry the woman of his choice but on whether the British people and those of the dominions want Mrs. Simpson to become queen of England.

The king received at Fort Belvedere tonight a letter from sixty members of parliament "assuring your majesty we are prepared to support you in any action you may think it necessary to take to defend your constitutional rights."

Churchill Leader of Group.

Winston Churchill was one of the signers of this letter. His associates represent all the political parties in the house of commons, in which there are a total of 615 members.

Churchill is expected to be called upon to form a new cabinet should the Baldwin government resign. Churchill already has the vigorous support of the Rothermere and Beaverbrook press.

The liberal Evening Star today printed a page of letters from readers expressing sympathy for the king and his wish to marry his American friend, and many newspapers published editorials demanding that there be no abdication.

Especially significant, perhaps, was the fact that Sir Eric Mieville, private secretary to the duke of York, visited the prime minister's office and stayed twenty minutes just before the cabinet meeting.

The argument of constitutional experts that under the statute of Westminster the dominion governments have as much to say as the British government in the matter of abdication makes the king's position much more difficult. This means that to keep the throne he will have also to overcome dominion opposition to his marriage to Wally. This opposition, according to newspapers here, is intense.

One chance for the king to delay his abdication was seen should he dissolve parliament and call a new general election on the issue. After the dissolution he could get along without a parliament for four months, because appropriations for financing government departments have already been made for the fiscal year ending March 31, and the money is available.

Adding to the bewilderment of the British public is the contradiction between Baldwin's statement and the report published by the London Times, and picked up by other papers, that it was the king and not the cabinet who started the present crisis by asking permission to marry Mrs. Simpson on condition that any children from the union would be made ineligible to succeed to the throne.

Baldwin admitted there are no fetters on the king's marriage beyond the ban forbidding a Roman Catholic queen.

Many Britons, including some members of parliament, are said to feel that the cabinet has put the king in an unfair position by forcing him to give up the Simpson marriage entirely or abdicate.

Blow to Monarchy.

James Maxton, leader of the Independent Labor party, was among this section of opinion.

"However this matter ends," Maxton said, "a major blow will have been dealt to the British monarchial system and to the nobility if the people as a whole have a chance to deal with this issue. The outcome will depend on how it is placed before them. If it is presented as an issue between the king and the court circles and the peerage, the king will win. If it is presented as a fight between the king and the house of commons, the king will lose. But the government game is to get rid of him and so won't let him have a fair chance to appeal to the people on his own terms.

"They are doing their best to create the public opinion that the king is a dangerous factor who is determined to govern as well as to reign. They want to build up the impression that he is a potential dictator who would establish a Fascist system in this country.

"The king's dramatic appearances in the distressed areas as a ruler who wants to do more for his people than his government has done does not interfere in the least with the government's desire to picture the king as a Fascist. It is part of the technique of a dictator to gain power at the outset by convincing the people he will give them a more benevolent government than they can get under a democracy."

Chiefly on the basis of this argument, certain commentators declared that a compromise was expected and that a "public announcement may be expected in a day or two." Baldwin's intransigeance seemed to doom these hopes.

Sir John Simon, home secretary, and Alfred Duff Cooper, war secretary, are the only cabinet members who supported the king at the start. They are understood now to have weakened somewhat.

The dominion governments are reported to be determined to give all the advice and swing all the influence to which they are entitled by the Westminster statute. In other words, they want just as much to say in the matter as the Baldwin cabinet.

The state of nerves into which financial circles were plunged by the crisis seemed partly calmed today, with a general attitude of waiting for the outcome without the apprehension of the last day or two. Like the rest of London, financiers are getting over the first shock of the word "abdication." They now take the optimistic attitude that the empire might go on even if Edward steps down.

The affair has also aroused demands here that the practice of the Church of England and the laws of England covering divorce should be brought into alignment.

"Divorce is a matter of law," the Evening Standard pointed out. "Neither bishop nor priest has any right to refuse to marry a divorced person. Yet, almost with unanimity, they do so refuse."

This is an issue, the Standard said, that must be faced and understood by the public.

Another vital issue is the constitutional one.

"Constitutionally," the Standard continued, "the king is on sure ground. He has shown no intention to deny the right of his ministers to advise him. But it is his constitutional right and privilege to choose his own wife. Were it not so there would be a provision in the constitution for parliament to advise on the matter.

"Cabinet Position Unsound."

"It is the position of his ministers which is unsound. The unnecessary harshness of their advice has been responsible for precipitating a crisis when nothing of the sort was needed."

The Standard pointed out that for legal reasons—presumably the fact that the decree nisi granted Mrs. Simpson does not become absolute until April 27, 1937—it is impossible for the king to marry Mrs. Simpson for some time to come.

"The situation is not new to the readers of newspapers in the United States and the empire," the Standard said. "Probably it would not have startled Great Britain either if it had not been proclaimed in so stormy a fashion. It is for the cabinet, who found the way into the dilemma, to find the way out."

The Standard stressed the confusion which would result from the king's abdication and urged that no hasty steps be taken in the hope that "time will satisfactorily solve the problem which hasty consideration could only intensify and enlarge."

Col. Josiah Wedgwood, privy councilor and Labor member of parliament, received hundreds of letters today voicing public approval of the motion he has tabled in the house of commons reaffirming support of the king. Wedgwood today described his motion as "one to prevent the king's abdication and to secure for him the right of an ordinary decent citizen."

See Peace Alliance.

One letter to Wedgwood suggested an empire wide general election on the question, with the assurance that the king would win and that a "British-American alliance would assure world peace."

War veterans of Wembley, London, wrote that they are furious with what they consider the "interference" of the bishops, while another message said that "every one supports the king except the church, the smug, and those politicians who are frightened by both."

After reading the pile of telegrams and letters, Wedgwood declared:

"I want a debate in the house. I am perfectly certain that the house of commons is for the king."

The "hands off the king" campaign begun by Wedgwood found support also in letters to various newspapers. Typical was a letter from W. A. E. Hurlock of Glevering Hall, Suffolk, which said:

Wedgwood Has Support.

"He has dared to follow the courage of his convictions. He wants to marry an American lady. The cabinet ministers say no. You will lose this great Englishman as your king unless it is at once shown that the British people welcome such a union. Think well what it would achieve. We are the largest two English speaking nations in the world. We both must, in consequence, become closer united."

One letter urged that a public rebuke be administered the bishop of Bradford, who is generally blamed for having stirred up the crisis by his recent speech criticizing the king's alleged "lack of piety."

"Baldwin in declining to consider the idea of a compromise is not altogether understandable except for the Victorian forces behind him," the Star declared. "The modern and democratic ways of King Edward have created prejudice, of course, in aristocratic and official quarters."

Both were overcome by the fumes, but Siedlecki regained consciousness soon afterward. He opened the door for air, then ran to firehouse 67 at 4666 Fulton street for aid. A fire inhalator squad revived Wojcik.

MRS. SIMPSON UP AT 3 A. M.; RACES TO HAVEN

Bound for Mystery Place 'Somewhere in France.'

BLOIS, France, Dec. 5 [Saturday]. —(AP)—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, en route to a secret haven while King Edward VIII. of England struggles with his problems in London, left here hurriedly and unexpectedly early today. She had arrived here late last night. After asking that she be called at 7 a. m. Mrs. Simpson arose at 3 a. m. and continued her automobile journey. She still kept her destination a closely guarded secret.

It was reported, however, that she is on the way to Cannes, where she will stay with Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rodgers, American friends.

Heavy fog overhung the road and a penetrating cold added to the discomfort of travel. Mrs. Simpson, however, apparently preferred to hasten on through the night to a permanent resting place rather than wait longer in her hotel suite.

Halts Four Hours.

After a brief four hour stop she climbed into her automobile at 3:20 a. m. and was speedily started away. She was bundled up heavily against the damp coldness and accompanied by three men who have shielded her throughout her journey.

The manager of the hotel said he knew only that "everybody is gone." He said he did not know the party's destination.

The departure of Mrs. Simpson's big black automobile was so hasty even the direction it took was not known. It was assumed she was still speeding south.

She left just before the arrival of a motorcade of automobiles bearing newspaper men, photographers, and others attracted by her presence.

Travels by Devious Routes.

Mrs. Simpson landed in France at Dieppe from a channel boat last night and sped southward by devious routes to Rouen, where she spent the night at the Hotel de la Poste. She resumed the journey this morning.

Once, in a little rural hamlet, she stopped to telephone back to England —to Fort Belvedere, where the king was pondering his prime minister's challenge to choose between her and his throne.

Mrs. Simpson traveled through the day. Those who said they saw her car rushing through towns told of three persons inside, including the chauffeur. They said a second car followed, containing two French speaking British detectives.

Some who said they saw her from not too great a distance said she appeared to be in radiant health, with no apparent indications that she had recently been ill, as some London reports said. She was smartly turned out in a rust brown traveling suit.

STORY OF FLIGHT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson and Scotland Yard outwitted all the reporters, photographers and busybodies of England last night with a perfect getaway to France. Details of her flight leaked out only late this afternoon after she had been in France for many hours.

While a crowd of newspaper men, acting on a well authenticated tip, waited at Victoria station in London to see her take the ferry train leaving there at 10 o'clock last night she boarded the steamer Newhaven at Newhaven after a fast trip from London in a Scotland Yard squad car.

Even the porter of the train whispered excitedly to a colleague and a reporter that he believed "Mrs. Simpson has a reservation on the train."

While photographers stood nervously poised; while a burly policeman stood guard between them and the end door of the Pullman, carefully placed within a yard of the platform gate; while travelers watched excitedly for their important fellow passenger, and while the train slowly pulled out without her, she was being smuggled aboard the Newhaven, where not a single passenger recognized her.

Two "special branch" officers of Scotland Yard jumped from the squad car as it rushed up to the pier. A heavily veiled woman walked quickly between them to the passport window, where they passed immediately without formalities upon showing their credentials. Once aboard, she went directly to her cabin, where she remained.

Hotel Man Spills Beans.

A private car had been put aboard the ship early in the evening by Mrs. Simpson's chauffeur, and immediately upon her arrival at Dieppe, France, she was driven to Rouen—an hour and a half away—where she spent the rest of the night at the Hotel de la Poste before continuing on to Paris.

How she got away was first learned when the hotel proprietor at Rouen spilled the secret this afternoon after reports here had been that King Edward's private airplane had taken her across the English channel.

By the simple expedient of taking reservations on the Dover-Dunkerque ferry train without an attempt at secrecy, and then using an anonymously made reservation on the other line, she outwitted every one.

Northern Lights or Meteor Trail Viewed Over Lake

Streaks of light in the sky above Lake Michigan, at about the northern limits of the city, were noticed by many Chicagoans last night. At Yerkes observatory in Williams Bay, Wis., 80 miles north of Chicago, the streaks could not be seen because of a fogginess in the air, but scientists said they might be the northern lights or a meteor trail.

Goes to France as Storm Rages in Britain

She departed from Blois, France, early today after the monarch talked with Prime Minister Baldwin concerning crisis created by romance. TEXT OF BALDWIN SPEECH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's statement today to the house of commons on King Edward VIII. and Mrs. Wallis [Wally] Simpson follows:

"In view of widely circulated suggestions as to certain possibilities in event of the king's marriage, I think it would be advisable for me to make a statement.

"Suggestions have appeared in certain organs of the press yesterday and again today that if the king decided to marry his wife would not need to become queen. Those ideas are without any legislative foundation.

"There is no such thing as what is called a morganatic marriage known to our law. The royal marriages act of 1772 has no application toward the sovereign himself. Its only effect is that a marriage of any other member of the royal family is null and void unless the sovereign's consent, declared under the great seal, is first obtained. This act, therefore, has nothing to do with the present case.

"The king himself requires no consent from any other authority to make his marriage legal, but, as I have said, the lady he marries, by the fact of her marriage to the king, necessarily becomes queen.

"She herself, therefore, would enjoy all the status, rights and privileges which both by positive law and custom attach to that position and with which we are familiar in the cases of her majesty the late Alexandra and her majesty Queen Mary, and her children would be in direct line of succession to the throne.

"The only possible way this result could be avoided would be by legislation dealing with a particular case. His majesty's government is not prepared to introduce such legislation [cheers].

"Moreover, the matters to be dealt with are of common concern to the commonwealth as a whole, and such a change could not be effected without the assent of all the dominions. I am satisfied from the inquiries I have made that this assent would not be forthcoming. I felt it right that I should make this statement before the house adjourns today in order to remove a widespread misunderstanding. At this moment I have no other statement to make."

KING'S ROMANCE IS DEFENDED BY A WOMAN M. P.

Toledo, O., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Miss Agnes MacPhail, first woman member of the Canadian parliament, today said the romance of King Edward VIII. of England and Mrs. Wallis [Wally] Simpson should not be shattered. Miss MacPhail will deliver a lecture here tomorrow.

"I believe that Mrs. Simpson is the person most responsible for all these difficulties," she said. "I believe that I, as a woman, would have withdrawn from the picture as soon as I saw that complications were arising. However, from a woman's viewpoint, I think that if two persons love each other so very much, the heart should rule because any frustration of such an ardent love would leave the lives of both less rich.

"Even though the king should marry Mrs. Simpson and abdicate, Canadians still would be loyal to him. The business of being king is a lonely one and King Edward is lonely."

ENGLAND'S 'FREE CHURCHES' WON'T SUPPORT CABINET

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(AP)—England's "free churches"—Baptists and Methodists, to which a majority of the working and middle classes belong—are not pressing King Edward to abandon his friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, their leaders disclosed today.

The attitude of the "free churches" was stated by the Rev. Dinsdale T. Young, pastor of Westminster Central hall, a Methodist church, and the Rev. M. E. Aubrey, secretary of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

The church officials acknowledged they view Mrs. Simpson's two divorces in a more tolerant light than does the church of England, which is supporting the cabinet.

U. S. Requests Nanking to Probe Slaying of American

NANKING, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The United States embassy asked the government of China today to investigate the fatal shooting of George Hobart Newsome, 40, American Tobacco executive, by a Chinese last night. The embassy appealed also for protection for other Americans in the Hsuchang area. Foreign tobacco buyers have experienced trouble there because of the efforts of native interests to collect percentages on all sales and to prevent direct transactions with farmers.

KING'S BROTHER GETS READY TO ASSUME CROWN

Duke of York Described as Shy and Colorless.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The shy, slender duke of York, who some think will be king of England before the week is out, tonight was believed by many to have spent the day in preparation for the possible new dignity.

They read this "preparation" into the visits of his private secretary, Sir Eric Mieville, to 10 Downing street to see Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin before the latter spoke in the house of commons, and to Queen Mary.

Many said they considered that King Edward's less colorful younger brother, who will be 41 years of age on Dec. 14, would not stand back if he were called to the throne.

Wife a Commoner.

The duke's wife, the former Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, was a commoner like Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the king's friend, but there was a different reception in the country and empire to the duke's romance than to King Edward's.

The duchess was unmarried when the duke led her to the altar. She was Scottish born. Though she was a commoner, she came of an aristocratic stock.

Golden-haired Princess Elizabeth, next after her father in the succession to the throne, and her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, went for their usual automobile ride this afternoon. A crowd which spotted them sent up cheers for the two little girls, one of whom is ten and the other six years old.

Their father, the duke, is an unassuming man whose shyness has kept him less in the public eye than his more aggressive elder brother.

Likened to Great-Grandfather.

Englishmen liken him to his great-grandfather, Prince Albert "the good," consort of Queen Victoria.

During the silence on the case of Mrs. Simpson, the British press carried special articles extolling the industry of the duke of York and his blameless life.

Most recent of the publications to treat of him was the weekly magazine, News-Week. The magazine gave a full page to the duke's career, his marriage and his reported recovery from stuttering. The page was headed: "Busy Pair."

"As busy as ever last week was 'the little duchess,' as the public loves to call her," said the magazine, in referring to the duke's wife.

It made particular mention of her "modest household," pointing out she does not have a resident governess and has only two footmen.

EDWARD VII.'S STRANGE PROPHECY OF BRITAIN'S 'LAST KING' RECALLED

London, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Loyal-hearted Britons, torn by the throne-shaking clash between King Edward VIII of England and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, looked back tonight on a strange prophecy voiced by England's Edward VII. The dictum assumed sudden significance tonight as Edward VIII faced possible abdication and there was no certainty that his brother, the heir presumptive duke of York, would accept the throne if Edward were forced out.

The prophecy was made more than a quarter of a century ago. Edward VII was on the throne. His son, later to become George V., was then Duke of York. And Britain's present-day monarch was a wistful-eyed little lad with golden curly locks.

The three talked of dynasty and destiny. Bluff old Edward VII gazed long at his grandson. He placed his hands on the shoulders of the little Prince Edward and said solemnly:

"You will be the last king of England."

Two days ago the prophecy would have sounded fantastic. Now, if Edward abdicates and the Duke of York goes with him, the mantle of sovereignty—as forecast by Edward VII—would fall not on a king, but on the 10 year old Princess Elizabeth.

ONE MAN IS ABLE TO END CRISIS BY SINGLE WORD, 'NO'

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The one man in the world who can solve the constitutional crisis between King Edward VIII. and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin—and solve it with the single word "No!"—faced a history making decision tonight.

Others may argue, pro and con. The British parliament may demand the throne as the price of Edward's defiance. Edward himself may dissolve that parliament—or abdicate.

But only one man, neither cabinet minister nor politician, can end the chaotic conflict—temporarily at least —with a single stroke. He is the king's proctor, Sir Thomas Barnes. By simply refusing to Grant Mrs. Wallis Simpson her final decree of divorce, Sir Thomas could stamp a legal "finis" to the dispute which has rocked the British empire.

Sir Thomas might refuse the decree because of defiance of his office, or because of evidence of "collusion" between Mrs. Simpson and her husband, Ernest Aldrich Simpson, in obtaining her decree nisi.

British Lords Deal with Highways as Throne Rocks

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The house of lords met briefly today as members of the house of commons, just across the lobby, engaged in debate on the constitutional crisis. The lords sat in silence for two minutes during the reading of a bill dealing with arterial highways and then adjourned. No word of the dispute between the king and cabinet has yet seeped into the upper house officially.

CHICAGO WOMAN FRIENDS OF KING ICY TO WALLY

St. James's Presentees Half Silent, Half Hostile.

BY MARCIA WINN.

King Edward VIII.'s woman friends and acquaintances in Chicago do not, apparently, relish the prospect of seeing an American divorcée as British queen.

This opinion became evident yesterday in a canvass of the Chicago heiresses and dowagers who have been presented at the Court of St. James's in the last 15 years. For, out of the welter of suggestions as to how to save the throne to which they curtsied, one curious fact leaped up—namely, that none of the women openly admitted they would like to see Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson as queen of Great Britain and empress of India.

Place Country Before Heart.

Instead, several vouchsafed the opinion that the king should stick to being king. Others, while praising his "spirit" and "courage," pointed out that duty to one's country should—with a king—come before duty to one's love. Still others withheld their comments by abrupt terminations of the telephone conversation.

Mrs. Paul Magnuson of Lake Forest, who, as Laura Thompson, was presented in 1924, was one of two former presentees who gave halfway approval of Mrs. Simpson.

"I think the king deserves his private life," she said, "but I don't think he has any right to try and switch any one like that into his public life. Mrs. Simpson would be all right as duchess of Cornwall, but not as queen."

First Duty Is Britain.

"I think his first duty is to his country," commented Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson, the former Ellen Borden, who was presented in 1928. "That is, as far as Mrs. Simpson goes.

"I admire his spirit, though," she added, "and I think he is being brave about it. I think he should do what the English people want him to do. By this time he can tell whether he is doing the popular thing or not, whether or not they are really against his marriage."

"I don't think he should marry her," Mrs. Richard T. Cragg of Evanston said with emphasis. Mrs. Cragg, formerly Virginia Dawes, was presented in 1931. "Not," she added slowly, "particularly."

Stresses Loyalty to Tradition.

Mrs. Edward A. Leight, who was presented in 1928, the last court presentation at which George V. was present, also was emphatic.

"I do feel," she said, "that the king has his duties and his traditions to live up to. If he doesn't want to live up to them he should abdicate and do what he wants.

"I know just how Queen Mary, his mother, must feel about it all. For years she would not allow any divorcée to be presented at court."

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of the senator from Illinois, was presented in 1923 and was invited to attend the presentation again in 1934, and has known King Edward since he was a boy, but withheld her "criticism," as she termed it.

Others were notably silent.

Prefers Not to Say a Word.

"I have nothing to say about it!" came the crisp hello-and-goodby of Mrs. Charles S. Dewey Jr. as she replaced her telephone receiver on its hook. Mrs. Dewey, the former Marjorie Goodman, was presented in 1932.

"I'd rather not express any opinion," said Mrs. Edward Byron Smith of Lake Forest, the former Louise Dewey, who also was presented in 1932. "I just read all about it with interest."

Of Chicago's select few who were in the radiant circle which surrounded the then David Windsor, prince of Wales, on his memorable visit to Chicago in 1924, the majority now are out of the city.

Mrs. Lester Armour, who was described as wearing "a Parisian frock of floating green chiffon" at the H. R. H. dinner-dance at the Saddle and Cycle club which shattered Chicago society by including only its youngest and most fair, admitted an eager interest in the British crisis, but would take no stand.

"It's really none of my business," she lamented. "I'd just as soon not be quoted on it."

Interested, At Any Rate.

Mrs. Arthur Meeker, whose husband was one of the monarch's hosts while he was in Chicago, also was reticent.

"I never comment on anything like that," she said stiffly. And then, avidly, after a slight pause—"Why? Has anything happened yet?"

Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Englishwoman who shifts her home at will from Chicago to Canterbury, England, and back, laughed wholeheartedly when her comments were sought.

"Oh, my goodness, no!" she said heartily. "I wouldn't give my opinion for anything. I might offend his serene highness and he wouldn't ask me to his next party. I like to keep the peace."

FIND MORGANATIC MARRIAGE IS OLD GERMAN CUSTOM

Nobles Used Ceremony to Wed Commoners.

"There is no such thing as what is called a morganatic marriage known to our law," Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin told the house of commons in London yesterday. He added that "his majesty's government is not prepared to introduce such legislation." He was making a statement on the cabinet's quarrel with King Edward VIII. over his proposed marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The morganatic marriage was invented in Germany as a convenience to members of royal and noble houses who fell in love with commoners. It was recognized by the laws of the old German empire, and provision for such marriage was contained in the constitutions of many German states.

Morganatic Marriage Defined.

A morganatic marriage, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, "is one in which the contracting parties are not by birth of equal status, or rank, and under which the wife does not take the rank of her husband, and the children . . . have no right of succession to the dignities, fiefs, or entailed property of the parent of higher rank."

In recent years the morganatic laws have applied only to royal families. In some cases the marriage of a member of a royal house to a commoner, completed under the usual marriage laws of the country, has been declared morganatic by the government in order to prevent a succession considered improper.

The royal marriage act of Great Britain, passed in 1772, makes no specific provision for morganatic marriage. Neither does it bar the king from marrying whom he chooses, save, under the bill of rights, she must not be a member of the Roman Catholic church.

The term "morganatic" is believed to have originated from the Latin "matrimonium ad morganaticam." The phrase refers to the Morgengabe, in the German language, or Morganatica, in the French, meaning morning gift, presented by the husband to the wife following such a marriage. In the morganatic marriage, authorities believe, the presentation of this gift signified that all other rights of the husband were retained, and not conferred on the wife, or the children of the marriage.

In all countries where permitted morganatic marriages are binding for the life time of the contracting parties.

TELLS HOW EDWARD CAN ENDEAR HIMSELF TO WHOLE WIDE WORLD

Emporia, Kas., Dec. 4.—(AP)—William Allen White, noted editor of the Emporia Gazette, today recommended that King Edward "solidify himself in the hearts of the world" on the Simpson case by stalking "out on the front porch of Buckingham palace with a loud speaker" and saying to the wide world:

"'Well, as I was saying, I never did care so much for this kinging job. Anyway, I got me plenty of rocks, spondulix, and other quick assets, and, so far as that goes, what are you going to do about it?

"'Anyway, you are all a bunch of white livered hypocrites, for if I was to carry this gal on the pay roll as a subrosa cutie instead of taking her in through the front door and giving her a good name, you would all wink and snicker and say, 'O, well, boys will be boys,' but, anyway, she is not that kind of a girl and I am not that kind of a fellow. And now in closing, ladies and gentlemen, my beloved people, and all sundry, will you kindly excuse me for a minute while you go to hell!'"

ASSERTS EDWARD CAN BALK OUSTER MOVE FOR YEAR

English King May Rule as Dictator That Long.

Edward VIII. of England can marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson and retain his throne and the British empire can do nothing at all about it for at least a year, experts on British constitutional government agree. Their findings, in hypothetical cases paralleling the present "affaire Simpson," were summarized yesterday by Marshall M. Knappen, assistant professor of English history at the University of Chicago.

England's king-emperor is no mere figurehead, Prof. Knappen pointed out. The king is legally the balance wheel of the British government. He insures continuity of the government and can forcefully direct the course of parilament in his selection of the prime minister and the cabinet, or executive committee, of parliament.

The King's Powers.

In addition, in theory at least, Edward possesses overwhelming powers, although no recent king has dared to exercise them. He can:

1. Dissolve parliament and refuse to permit it to meet again.
2. Disband the army, navy, and air force.
3. Sell the navy.
4. Cede part of his dominions.
5. Elevate citizens or foreigners to the peerage.
6. Declare war on any country or make peace.
7. Dismiss the cabinet and call on the army to enforce his commands.

The first power, which has often been used, gives Edward an advantage in the present controversy providing Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin carries out his threat to resign if the king persists in his refusal to give up both the throne and Wally.

Could Name Friendly Cabinet.

Should Baldwin and his cabinet resign, Edward then could appoint a new ministry friendly to his cause. If this is impossible, he could dissolve parliament and go to the people with his case.

It appears improbable that such action would be necessary, since England would hardly dare be without a government in these precarious times. It would be disastrous to Britain's defense preparations should the empire lack a government even for a few days, for example.

Further, Edward could wait almost a year before going to the people should parliament be dissolved. He would not require a parliament until his government ran short of funds. The house of commons appropriates funds for the government and also perpetuates the army from year to year. This English precaution prevents a dictatorship for longer than a year.

Must End in Election.

In the end, if Baldwin resigns, Edward must carry his affair of the heart to his people in a parliamentary election. He would have a year of grace, however, in which to attempt to mold public opinion to his side.

Should Baldwin fail to resign, however, there is the possibility that Edward might be forced to abdicate immediately in favor of the duke of York. The act of succession of 1701, which brought the Teutonic house of Hanover [now Windsor] to the British throne, gives parliament this power by a majority vote. Here again, however, should Baldwin lack a majority, he must resign, and the case must go to the people for a vote.

The British constitution, Prof. Knappen explained, is at once extremely flexible and as rigid as British tradition. If the people, despite tradition, can be convinced that it is all right for Edward to marry a divorcée and a commoner, then there is nothing in the British constitution, consisting of written law, court decisions, and customs, to prevent it.

Others Have Wed Commoners.

Other English kings have married commoners. Edward IV. wed Elizabeth Woodville, a widow, in 1461. Henry VIII., as is well known, married Anne Boleyn. None, however, has married a divorcée, although Henry II. married the former wife of Louis VII. of France, after Louis had his marriage annulled on grounds of incompatibility.

Other kings and queens have opposed parliament successfully. Queen Victoria, for example, in 1839, risked anger of her ministers and unpopularity with her people by refusing to give up friends of the Whig party she had appointed as ladies of her bedchamber when a new government, led by Sir Robert Peel as prime minister, came into power.

Peel wanted women of his own political party appointed ladies in waiting. Victoria refused to discharge her friends. A terrific political battle followed, but Peel did not dare risk his government in a parliamentary vote, and Victoria won.

CANADA BACKS UP BALDWIN IN HIS CLASH WITH KING

Premier Denies Dominions Began 'Course of Action.'

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Canada is in full support of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and other members of the British government in their opposition to a marriage between King Edward VIII. and Mrs. Wallis [Wally] Simpson, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King indicated in a statement today.

In the statement, issued prior to a meeting of the Canadian cabinet, Mackenzie King denied that "any proceedings or course of action in Great Britain had been at the instance of or upon the insistence of the dominions, and of Canada in particular."

Statement of Premier.

The prime minister's statement follows:

"There is one thing I should like to say about many of the cabled communications which have appeared in our press. It is quite wrong to allege that in the existing situation any proceedings or course of action in Great Britain has been at the instance of or upon the insistence of the dominions, and of Canada in particular as distinguished from the United Kingdom.

"I can, of course, speak with knowledge and authority only insofar as Canada is concerned, but I believe what I am saying will be found to be equally true of all the self-governing dominions.

"There is and has been on the part of the prime minister and government of the United Kingdom full recognition of the fact that the several dominions are vitally interested in all that pertains to the crown. As a consequence there is and has been consultation between the several governments. The initiative has necessarily been with the British government. It has been taken, however, with due regard to the collective concern and responsibility of the several governments of the British commonwealth."

Australia Supports Baldwin.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 4.—The Australian public, having recovered from the staggering surprise of King Edward's clash with his cabinet, is beginning to articulate in almost one voice the fervent desire that the empire shall not be deprived of the services of a king who is a very real personality to the people of all walks of life in Australia.

King Edward's profound humanity and striking leadership on issues of social reform especially endear him to Australians. He is remembered as the central figure on the most triumphal royal tour in Australia's history. Since then his sense of public duty and service was watched with increasing admiration.

Thus there is immense sympathy for Edward as a man, but almost undivided opinion concerning the course of action demanded by the kingly office. While Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons refuses to issue a statement, it is known the cabinet with the approval of the Labor opposition strongly supports Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's action. This approval reflects public opinion. If the time comes for appropriate action the government will take it unhesitatingly, a government official indicated.

Lyons is in constant touch with Baldwin, Stanley M. Bruce, Australian high commissioner in London, and Sir Geoffrey Granville Whiskard, high commissioner for the United Kingdom of Australia.

The cabinet met at noon in an atmosphere of grave anxiety. After the meeting Lyons said it was inadvisable for him to make a statement or to be questioned. Later he called a special session of parliament for Wednesday to consider the crisis in London.

GLEIWITZ, Polish Upper Silesia, Dec. 4.—(AP)—More than 600 miners on the second day of their subterranean hunger strike in the mine shaft tonight asked for a clergyman to be sent to conduct religious services for them. Their request was not granted. A crowd of women stormed the pithead, but was dispersed by police.

GUARDIAN ASSERTS DUTY FORCED END TO BRITISH CENSORSHIP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANCHESTER, England, Dec. 4.—Referring editorially today to the earlier silence of the British press in the development of the conflict between King Edward and the cabinet over his majesty's friendship for Mrs. Wallis Simpson, the Manchester Guardian asked "if it can be seriously maintained that the newspapers of this country have been worried into candor by the flood of foreign print and domestic gossip."

"If they long held their peace it was because they, like the English people at large, have for weeks realized the impending gravity of the situation," it continued. "There has been NO censorship, NO instructions from above.

"The newspapers did their duty by reticence while reticence could be maintained. This week, beginning with the country newspapers rather than the newspapers of the capital, they have done what they conceived to be their duty by speaking out."

PREMIER'S FALL SEEN AS LONDON CHEERS EDWARD

Crowds Demonstrate for King and Wally.

"We want our king! God save King Edward!"

Police hastily threw a cordon across the entrance to Downing street. Over their high ridged helmets the lights of Baldwin's home, at No. 10, were plainly visible. The words of the crowd must have carried to the bulldog jowled "country squire" who served a clear warning on King Edward today to give up his love or his throne.

Only grim-lipped officials, hurrying to and from Baldwin's sanctuary as the crisis neared its climax, were permitted entrance to the drab little street where another prime minister, Disraeli, forced Great Britain into an empire.

Sporadic demonstrations started everywhere—from Mayfair's exclusive purlieu in the West End . . . through the Bohemian garlic-reeking streets of Soho . . . down to the poverty-ridden but intensively loyal districts of Cheapside, Whitechapel, and Limehouse.

Frown at Shouting Crowd.

Old gentlemen in the club windows along Pall Mall frowned down as a shouting crowd paraded down the street. Up to their plush lounge-rooms came the chant.

"Do we want Edward? Yes! Do we want Baldwin? No-o-o!" The negative was prolonged and vociferous.

The biggest crowds since tens of thousands, awe-stricken and silent, waited for the bulletin announcing the death of King George V. last January, jammed Piccadilly Circus.

"The king! The king!" they shouted. "God save the king!" repeatedly, above the tumult, came the cry: "And three cheers for his missus!"

They sang "For he's a jolly good fellow!" and clamored, "Make Baldwin stop!"

Police turned back a band of white collar city workers who started for Buckingham palace singing the national anthem and carrying banners inscribed "God save the king!"

Detoured from Buckingham, the band marched on to Hyde Park and quickly gathered a crowd. Once more, reinforced now, they started on a new route along Oxford street toward the palace, but again police turned them back.

From another direction, however, a crowd of 300 paraded past Buckingham palace with a banner demanding:

"After South Wales you cannot let him down! Come to the palace now. Cheer the king!"

German Public Still Kept in Dark on Simpson Story

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 4. — The German public today was still kept in ignorance of the Simpson affair. The only report permitted to appear was a three line paragraph in the morning newspapers that differences have arisen between King Edward and his cabinet, "but as these appear to be of a private nature we will not detail or comment thereon." The Muenchener Zeitung daringly "broke" the story but police immediately seized all the copies issued.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

IRISH SORRY FOR KING, BUT SLAP AT HIS ROMANCE

Insist Ruler's Duty Lies with Empire.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

DUBLIN, Dec. 4.—The constitutional crisis in Great Britain has aroused intense interest throughout the Irish Free State. For the last two days every newspaper published here has devoted its main pages to a big display on stories on the relations between King Edward VIII. and his cabinet together with a biography of Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The general attitude is one of sympathy with Great Britain in the crisis through which it is passing while deep regret is felt for the king in the difficult position in which he has been placed.

Under the statute of Westminster, the Free State government is closely concerned in any likely alteration in the law affecting a successor to the throne since any changes must now receive the assent of the dominion parliaments as well as the parliament of the United Kingdom.

Consults with President.

High Commissioner John W. Dulanty crossed from London to Dublin on Wednesday and has been in consultation with President Eamon De Valera on the situation in England.

The goverment party's own newspaper, The Irish Press, referring to the crisis editorially today, says:

"Should the king refuse to comply with the advice of the cabinet he would find himself in what would obviously be an almost impossible situation. There is every indication, for the present at any rate, that he is not likely to get much support from parliament.

"What may be the attitude of the people of Great Britain, who can be very emotional at times and who take the view his marriage with the woman he loves would be detrimental to the interests of the throne and commonwealth the stern call of service which he never has displayed cannot be ignored.

Man Versus King.

"King Edward, the man, must subordinate his human emotions to the royal duty of Edward, the king. We may be sure the choice will be bitterly hard, but self sacrifice is of the essence of kingship. The interests of hundreds of millions of his subjects demand that the strength of the monarchy shall not be impaired. The traditions of his line demand he shall not impair it. Throughout his life he never failed his people and we refuse to believe he will fail them now."

"A considerable section of the Protestants regard divorce very differently from what we do, or how they will act when the question of the proposed marriage of the king is presented to them remains to be seen, but there can be no question that whatever the immediate outcome of the proposed marriage of King Edward, it is certain to raise for Britain a number of extremely delicate and difficult constitutional questions."

Police Rescue Boxer After Crowd Goes to Aid of Girl

Edward Reels, 26 years old, colored former prize fighter, was rescued by the police from a crowd at Market and Madison streets yesterday after several men saw him seize Miss Gladys Evans, 25 years old, 6139 Ellis avenue. The men were pommeling Reels on the sidewalk when police arrived. Reels said he lived in a hotel at 31st and State streets. Moron victims will be asked to look at him.

KEEP EDWARD ON THRONE, PLEA OF 2 LONDON PAPERS

Baldwin's Statement to Parliament Assailed.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—The Canadian Press, one of the most influential dominion news services, last night reported "King Edward's voluntary abdication loomed near tonight," in a dispatch signed by George Hambleton, Canadian press staf writer in London.

Two London morning newspapers, Daily Mail and Daily Herald, both of which favor some compromise by which King Edward would retain his throne, bitterly assailed the statement of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin in the house of commons yesterday.

Here Is Editorial Comment.

Editorial comment from these, and other papers, follows:

DAILY MAIL—"He [Prime Minister Baldwin] announced the entire rejection of the expedients which have been suggested out of affection and good will for the king, with the special object of safeguarding his personal happiness and retaining his magnificent qualities of leadership for the nation's benefit."

DAILY HERALD—"Wide sections of the public still believe the cabinet opposes the king because he wishes to marry an American and a commoner. As long as they believe this, they will be indignant and justified champions of the king's right to marry outside the ranks of aristocracy or dynasty. They have no time whatever for considerations of snobbery and social prestige from which resistance to a popular marriage would arise. And the king has endeared himself to the people by manifesting little time for such considerations either. The facts are indeed known. And there's nothing in them that calls for a hushed voice, an averted face, for smugness or prudery. Mrs. Simpson has been married twice already. Both of her former husbands are living. She divorced the first and shortly after she married the second. She divorced the second and when the decree became absolute next April, it was to be followed by marriage of the king."

Suggests Change in Laws.

NEWS CHRONICLE—"There unquestionably is a strong and growing desire among the public that the king should marry the woman of his choice as soon as she is free to marry him, but that she should not become queen of England. If such a solution could be arrived at, the public would heave a sigh of relief. There is no such thing in England at present as a morganatic marriage. But laws can be changed."

RAID POSTAL SUBSTATION.

Two colored gunmen invaded the drug store and postal substation at 658 East 43d street yesterday, held up the owner and eleven customers and employés, and escaped with $200.

MILWAUKEE AIR SERVICE AWAITS NEW TYPE SHIP

Need an Economical Amphibian for Lake Line.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

Flying service over the natural air-water route between Chicago and Milwaukee—a scenically beautiful as well as utilitarian airway—awaits the production by aircraft manufacturers of a moderately fast, economical, twin engined amphibian plane capable of carrying from eight to ten passengers in addition to a pilot.

The machine must be capable of cruising at a speed close to 140 miles an hour so that the ninety miles between the harbors of the two cities can be flown in forty minutes. It must be able to alight not only upon the harbor waters but upon the commercial airports of both cities. Its operating costs must be low enough to allow the operators to fix a fare level close to that of surface transportation.

Scan Plane Market in Vain.

These statements express the consensus of airline operators and aeronautical engineers here yesterday. The airmen who are familiar with the history of amphibian and seaplane operations on the Great Lakes, believe that such a machine could be built today, but they insist that none of the small general utility airplanes on the market at present fulfill all the requirements.

"Primarily a Chicago-Milwaukee air line would be a summer operation," said one of the officers of a transcontinental airway. "It must appeal not only to commercial travelers but also to sightseers. And I believe it would do just that.

"If the right airplane were available I believe there would be a profit in providing a day-time and evening series of flights. Two trips during the early morning and two trips during the late afternoon would carry your business traveler—at least at first.

Trips for Recreation Purposes.

"Then the rest of the trips, and there should be five or six more during the day and evening, should be planned to cater to the men and women and the family parties taking the trip as recreation. Perhaps they would be flying from Chicago to Milwaukee for lunch or tea, returning later.

"Or again the passengers might be Milwaukeeans soaring down to Chicago to dinner and the theater. During the fine weather there could be no sight more delightful than the picture from a low altitude of the lake shore between these two big cities."

Economy of operation would be the prime requisite of the amphibian plane necessary for such an airways service, it was pointed out. The engines should be not more than 225 horsepower each and depreciation, insurance, salaries, and operations costs must be low enough to allow the operators to make a small profit with the seats filled to an average of less than 60 per cent per flight.

Comparable to Former Type.

Thompson Aeronautical corporation at one time operated Loening amphibians, six place single engine machines between Detroit and Cleveland. With the aid of a mail contract the company was able to make ends meet for two years before it was bought out by American Airlines. This type of plane, however, no longer is acceptable to the bureau of air commerce for commercial flying, because bi-motored or tri-motored equipment is demanded.

Koehler Air lines flew Sikorsky S-38 twin engine nine passenger planes across Lake Michigan from Milwaukee to Muskegan and Grand Rapids, Mich., for a time. The Sikorskys had two 400 horse power Wasp engines which drank from 40 to 45 gallons of gasoline per hour and overhaul costs were high. The cruising speed was about 90 m. p. h.

Now Use Different Equipment.

The line steadily lost money and eventually sold out to Pennsylvania Airlines, now Pennsylvania-Central Airlines. The Sikorskys were washed out and the lake crossing now is made in Boeing 247s with special flotation gear. The Boeings with Wasp motors of the same power as those in the Sikorskys cruise 80 miles an hour faster, and carry two more persons.

Freezing of the harbors at both Milwaukee and Chicago makes the amphibian service impractical during the winter. But amphibian planes capable of earning a living here during the summer would find plenty of work in southern waters while it remained cold in the north, it was agreed by all.

Tutor Begins Coaching Course for Deaf Pupils in High School

BY KAY HALL.

There was no sound in a class room at Parker High school yesterday as Miss Esther C. Howes, the teacher, read to six pupils the story of how Baron Munchausen's dog pointed a covey of partridges for two weeks. Miss Howes moved her lips soundlessly during the reading. When she finished the pupils retold the story to her. They could not hear their words because they were deaf.

The teacher read the simple story in order to get acquainted with the pupils and test their lip reading abilities. Miss Howes is one of three permanent full time coaching teachers for the deaf and hard of hearing who were appointed this week for three high schools. There are 22 pupils with defective hearing at the Parker High school who will now be assisted through their regular studies by extra coaching in addition to attending the lip reading classes, which the school has conducted for more than 12 years.

Student Improves Quickly.

A girl who became totally deaf after an illness two years ago caught only small snatches of the story at first because of her lack of experience in lip reading. When the lip movements were repeated for her benefit, however, she was more adept than some of the others at relating the story aloud — because she had once been able to hear her own voice. Some of the boys and girls have learned to speak only by memorizing the positions which produce certain sounds.

The pupils "listened" to the story with eager smiles. They missed out on parts of the story as one does in listening to a foreign language. They laughed at their own mistakes. A bright eyed little colored girl, telling the story back to the teacher, said: "The baron's wife and man servant had fallen 70 feet below zero" and looked at the teacher questioningly, knowing she must have read the teacher's lips incorrectly.

"No, they fell 70 feet below the surface," Miss Howes replied, smiling, and the entire class laughed at the error.

Vibrations Help Teacher.

Inattention on the part of a pupil is corrected by stamps on the floor by the teacher or another pupil—the vibrations carrying the message. The pupils must look at the teachers' lips constantly or they lose the continuity of the lesson.

This is one reason why deaf pupils lose out in ordinary classrooms, according to Miss Agnes O'Connell, assistant principal of the school. They can follow the teachers' remarks but they are often unable to "see" and get the benefit of the recitations of pupils behind them. The new coaching system is intended to fill this deficiency, according to Miss O'Connell.

The aim is to give these handicapped children the most normal school life possible, Miss Howes explained. Talking with their hands in sign language is frowned upon because it makes them conspicuous.

Build Up Confidence.

They stand before the deaf-oral class and recite, sometimes brokenly. The objective is to build up their self confidence so that they will also be able to recite in the regular classes and to improve the quality of their speech so that it will not betray their handicap.

Miss Howes will meet with the children individually and in small groups at their rest periods for the special coaching service to them.

The same system has been put into effect at the Washburne Continuation and Apprentice school and at the Lane Technical school. Until this year the high school system has offered to deaf students only the lip reading classes at the Parker school under a part time teacher.

STEPHEN LOVE ON STAND TODAY IN SABATH QUIZ

Announcement was made by Congressman A. J. Sabath last night that Stephen Love, former counsel for Frank Zintak, deposed Superior court clerk, will be put on the stand this morning when the congressional committee of which Sabath is chairman resumes its investigation of the receivership of the Garfield Arms hotel, 3260 Maypole avenue.

At yesterday's hearing in the federal courthouse, it was declared that Love had represented Samuel Leeds, who leased the hotel, while one of Love's law associates was representing the trustee. Affidavits were put into the record from eight employés of the hotel, alleging that two sets of books had been kept. Other affidavits alleged that while F. Gerald Thomas, committee investigator, was trying to subpena all the records the original books were destroyed.

"One set of books," said Thomas, "was kept to show to the receiver or the trustee, the other was kept to show the real business."

J. L. Tupy, chief investigator, charged that the Garfield Arms hotel made special efforts to attract transients and the type of custom thus obtained was detrimental.

FIND MR. AND MRS. GORILLA, ALACK, ARE BOTH MRS.

Zoo's Plans for Family Slightly Upset.

The two infant gorillas at the Chicago Zoölogical park in Brookfield, which it was earnestly hoped by zoo officials would some day produce the first gorilla to be born in captivity, are not a "pair," but just two gorillas of the same sex, it was revealed yesterday by Herbert Bradley, chairman of the animal committee of the Chicago Zoölogical society.

"We are virtually sure they both are girls," said Mr. Bradley. "It has not been definitly decided, but we think that is the case. The board has made up its mind to buy a gorilla if we can be sure it is a male."

He's Fine; Yes, She Is.

At a meeting the board considered the matter from all angles. Two letters from separate owners of two gorillas in New York were carefully weighed.

In one letter, Mr. Bradley recalled, the owner wrote, "He's a fine gorilla," following which was a paragraph beginning, "She's well developed and has excellent proportions."

The two New York gorillas are about the age of the two gorillas at Brookfield, Suzette, 18 months old, and Congo, 16 months old.

"This time we are going to have the sex guaranteed," said Mr. Bradley, alluding to the purchase of Suzette in October in the belief that Congo had turned out to be a male gorilla. "Few persons know anything about gorillas and no one knows much, but we will get expert advice."

Will Inspect New York Animals.

At Christmas time Mr. Bradley expects to go to New York, and with Dr. Harry Raven, associate curator of the American Museum of Natural History, inspect the two gorillas. He will purchase one if convinced it can be a mate for either Suzette or the unfortunate Congo, who was bought as a female, then convinced Robert Bean, assistant director of the zoo, and others that she was a male, and now is regarded as a female again.

It was pointed out that animal experts often are unable to determine definitly whether young gorillas are male or female until they are several years old. However, Dr. Raven's judgment will be accepted by the society, as he is the leading authority on gorillas in the country, said Mr. Bradley.

Last October Mr. Bean brought Suzette from New York and announced with enthusiasm that he had the only pair of gorillas in this country. Congo, he said, was a male.

Mr. Bean Gives In.

After the proposed purchase of a mate for one of "the girls" was revealed last night, Mr. Bean was asked his present opinion.

"It looks very much as if we have two females," he said in a low, dolorous tone. "I feel very badly about it, but in self-justification may say that most animal dealers refer to their young gorillas as 'he, she, or it,' as they are never sure of their sex."

STATE GETS LAST ZINTAK WITNESS ON; CURB STORY

Wordy Disputes End in Defense Victory.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

The last state witness in the trial of Frank V. Zintak, ousted clerk of the Superior court, took the witness stand last evening. The state hopes, if it can get over the hurdle of defense objections, to close its side of the embezzlement trial at a session of court this morning.

Ernest Marohn, 921 East 44th street, first assistant county auditor, is the witness who will close the case for the state in the trial in which Zintak is charged with embezzling $10,500 from the trust funds of his office. In a series of indictments, however, the state charges the total embezzlements are $26,500.

A Gain and Then a Hitch.

The state won a victory early in the day when Judge Robert C. O'Connell of the Criminal court, who is presiding over the trial, reversed his previous indicated stand and allowed the prosecution to change its tactics and to bring the auditor before the jury to bolster up its case. The defense had contended that an auditor could not testify in as much as the state had bound itself to the facts by using Frank Witkowski, former bookkeeper in the Superior court clerk's office, to tell of the facts.

Marohn did not get far in his testimony before another legal argument ensued. He testified that he audited Zintak's books as of Sept. 18, 1935, and compared the liabilities with the assets. When he was told to tell what was disclosed the defense objected, claiming he could only testify as to Oct. 4, 1935, the time the alleged $10,500 embezzlement occurred.

Defense Gains Its Point.

The judge sustained the defense objection so the state did not gain much by its earlier victory since the prosecutors were unable to show that Zintak at one time had an alleged shortage of $27,000.

Nevertheless, Marohn was allowed to testify that at the close of business on Sept. 18 there was a shortage of at least $10,500. He said the books balanced on Sept. 30, less than two weeks later. This testimony was intended to support the allegation that when Zintak got a loan of $10,500 in the Metropolitan State bank it was for the purpose of covering up the shortage discovered by the auditor.

After the books were certified by the auditor as correct and balanced, it is charged Zintak drew the $10,500 check involved in the current trial, and repaid the bank loan, again creating the shortage.

Legal Arguments Fill Day.

The proceedings of the day dragged as the defense lawyers harangued the prosecutors and many times had the spectators laughing. Defense Attorneys Benedict J. Short and George Guenther were obviously smarting under the change about attitude of the judge on his ruling about the auditor, and Guenther particularly did everything possible to hamper Prosecutor Robert Wright. He was in rare form, it was said by court attachés.

In and out trotted the jury throughout the day as the objections were argued pro and con. Toward evening one of the jurors was obviously angry when the jury was again chased out of the court at the suggestion of the prosecutor.

13 Repeaters Among 80 Freed on Parole During November

Eighty convicts were paroled from Joliet and Stateville penitentiaries during November, it was learned yesterday. Of these eleven were second offenders and two were third offenders.

Among the second offenders released on parole is Frank Moretti, 37 years old, a former member of the notorious Gloriana gang. This band, said to have been led by Charles Gloriena, operated in Chicago about 1919 and was charged with numerous robberies and burglaries. Gloriana's conviction for burglary was reversed by the state Supreme court, but several of his associates served prison sentences.

Has Record of 23 Years.

Moretti's criminal career dates to 1913 when he was arrested for burglary and sentenced to Pontiac reformatory. He was paroled in 1917. In 1927 he and his brother Carl were convicted of robbery and were sentenced to Joliet each for terms of one year to life. Carl Moretti was paroled last March 19 and Frank was freed on Nov. 6.

Previous disclosures that many second and third offenders were among the convicts freed by the state parole board this year has provoked criticism from Chicago public officials and civic leaders, particularly as the board does not make public the names of those paroled.

State Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg of Chicago, Republican leader in the house, is preparing a bill for presentation to the legislature next month to correct parole abuses. One provision of this bill will be to curtail the power of the parole board to release a convict who has a record of more than one offense.

Thumbnail Histories of Cases.

The three time offenders among the November parolees are:

VICTOR DRAUKTENIS, 24 years old, sentenced to Washington, D. C., reformatory Oct. 19, 1928, under Dyer act. Escaped May 16, 1929. Sentenced to Chillicothe, O., reformatory for Dyer act April 25, 1931. Sentenced to Joliet for automobile larceny Jan. 12, 1934.

GEORGE HENDERSON, 67 years old, colored, sentenced to Missouri penitentiary at Jefferson City for forgery Jan. 2, 1915. Sentenced to Michigan City, Ind., penitentiary for forgery Dec. 5, 1921. Sentenced to Joliet for confidence game April 4, 1933.

The second offenders among the November parolees, in addition to Moretti, are:

WESLEY BARRETT, 35 years old, sentenced to Anamosa, Ia., reformatory for burglary in 1922. Sentenced to Joliet for robbery June 28, 1933.

GEORGE HACKER, 50 years old, sentenced to Pontiac Sept. 28, 1907, for robbery. Paroled Feb. 7, 1910. Sentenced to Joliet Aug. 27, 1930, for burglary.

CHARLES KAHN, 31 years old, sentenced to Pontiac reformatory Aug. 28, 1929, for burglary. Paroled Oct. 7, 1930. Sentenced to Joliet for burglary Sept. 26, 1932.

DONALD McCALLUM, 30 years old, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Menard penitentiary in November, 1929, for automobile theft. No record of a parole. Sentenced to Joliet Jan. 26, 1932, for burglary.

THEODORE ROSCOE, 31 years old, colored, sentenced to the Jefferson City, Mo., penitentiary for burglary Sept. 10, 1920. Discharged Nov. 17, 1924. Sentenced to Joliet for burglary Oct. 17, 1928.

WALLER SKRZKUT, 30 years old, sentenced to Pontiac reformatory for larceny Feb. 6, 1925. Sentenced to Joliet for robbery Nov. 6, 1930.

FRANK SMITH, 30 years old, sentenced to the Chester, Ill., penitentiary for larceny July 12, 1929. Sentenced to Menard penitentiary Dec. 2, 1934, for larceny.

JAMES SMITH, 29 years old, colored, sentenced to Pontiac reformatory Aug. 4, 1932, for assault to rob. Paroled Aug. 10, 1923. Sentenced to Joliet for robbery Oct. 3, 1930.

HERMAN VANN, 25 years old, sentenced to Pendleton, Ind., reformatory for automobile larceny Jan. 31, 1929. Sentenced to Joliet for conspiracy March 1, 1934.

CHARLES WARD, 34 years old, sentenced to the penitentiary at Little Rock, Ark., Dec. 7, 1920, for forgery. Paroled Oct. 6, 1928. Sentenced to Joliet for robbery April 27, 1929.

Gov. Horner's commission investigating conditions in Illinois penal institutions is expected to present its report next month. The parole situation in Illinois has been investigated by the commission in connection with its prison survey.

JAPANESE ENVOY QUITS NANKING AS PARLEY FAILS

NANKING, Dec. 5.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—Shigeru Kawagoe, Japanese ambassador departed for Shanghai today after three months of futile effort to readjust Chinese-Japanese relations.

The Japanese embassy emphasized that Kawagoe's departure "did not mean the severance of diplomatic relations," saying that subordinates would continue to discuss specific incidents. The embassy asserted, however, that, "unless Chang Chun [Chinese foreign minister] evinces a sincere and frank desire to settle larger issues, Kawagoe will remain in Shanghai."

Loyal defenders of Suiyuan province defeated Mongol irregulars at Pailingmiao, reports from Kweisui said. Chinese officials charge that the Mongols are Japanese-inspired.

ASK COURT O. K. ON FINANCES OF WORLD'S FAIR

A review of the activities of A Century of Progress Exposition preliminary to the distribution of final funds and the dissolution of the corporation is asked in a petition filed in Superior court yesterday by Attorney Thomas H. Slusser for the directors of the Exposition.

The petition contains a complete report and an accounting of the affairs of the Exposition during 1933 and 1934, and it requests that the court take jurisdiction of the accounting.

The last report of the directors of the Exposition showed a balance of $276,084 on March 7 of this year, with only a few pending claims not covered by insurance. This was after disbursements of $100,200,989 by the Fair organization, exhibitors, and concessionaires from Jan. 5, 1928, to Dec. 31, 1934.

Modernistic Wand Felt by Gift Offerings.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

The merriest Christmas since 1929 was predicted for Chicago yesterday by merchants as they welcomed throngs of early shoppers. At the same time Chicago Association of Commerce officials declared they expect retail business to exceed that of the Christmas season of 1929.

With the winter air cold and crisp outside, mothers and young children examined the enticing merchandise in toy departments, and youngsters shyly approached authentic looking Santa Clauses in various stores and confided their wants. Adults of both sexes walked among lingerie, lether goods, jewelry, and perfume with airs preoccupied.

Law and Order Toys.

Toys indicating that law and order are becoming as glamorous to 5 year olds as gangsters used to be are plentiful. A "rocket police patrol" toy is a rocked-shaped affair which travels along at a good cruising speed, gunfire from the back being both visible and audible. Another gunner sits up bravely with head exposed, a fierce dare-devil look in his eyes.

The "G-man gun" is an effective toy submachine gun which blazes out rat-tat-tats just as those in the movies do. A salesman demonstrated it at a mere suggestion of interest, clutching the handle with an heroic gesture and popping away within an inch of a salesgirl's ear.

A new game called "G-Men" also is selling rapidly, said clerks. "Wide World," a game featuring a map of the world by Hendrik Van Loon in which the object is to travel from San Francisco to Manila in what appears to be a very round-about way, also is new.

Monopoly Is Spruced Up.

The by-now old favorite, "Monopoly," is spruced up this Christmas by the addition of a new gadget, "Stock Exchange."

"The youngsters love it," said a blonde clerk. "It's so educational."

Even velocipedes are streamlined this year. Some have "free ball bearings" and oversize tires, hand brakes, and deep-throated bells. Children were seen fighting to get in a fire patrol wagon, a streamlined model which would make Chicago's up-to-the-minute apparatus look quaint. Mothers folded their arms and gave up, saying, "Come away, Junior."

"How can I get Natie away when all the other kids get in it?" one weary mother asked aloud.

Old Things Are Scarce.

A man with a wilted flower in his buttonhole and a wistful droop to his shoulders confronted a saleswoman and said directly:

"See here, I want to get a little girl a present that—well, that her mother might have had when she was a little girl."

He looked about anxiously, then smiled as he saw something familiar under a layer of cellophane. "Is that a rocking horse?" he asked.

"Yes, but I'm sorry to say there's no new feature about them," the girl apologized.

There it was, the time honored rocking horse, with the same open mouth and gleaming teeth, the same flying mane and long tail, and fancy saddle and stirrups. The man bought it.

Stilts Have a Comeback.

Elsewhere in the toy section a demonstrator was seen staggering around on red stilts. "Stilts are having a revival," he said, balancing himself with difficulty and looking down at a customer. "You probably made them when you were young. You couldn't buy them."

In 1936 a little girl whose family can afford it can provide for her the most incredible delights, a tour of toy places proved incontestably. Doll furniture, some of it hand-made, perfect period reproductions, modern furniture combining chromium and new fabrics, and exquisite little lamps may now be bought, not in sets but by the piece. A girl can go to housekeeping and gradually furnish her house. Doll houses themselves, too, are almost fabulous.

Electric cookstoves this year are insulated, "guaranteed against shocks." Tiny cookies with sugar on top were on view, actually baked in the stoves, as well as a layer cake and muffins.

Shirley and the Quints.

The Shirley Temple dolls have more clothes this year, and washing machines which really work may be bought to wash them. But the quints, larger and older in keeping with the real quintuplet Dionnes, outdo all previous quints.

In a lingerie department the buyer said business was brisk in the new nightgowns and negligees. One man came in with a long list reading: "Emily, size 14; Catherine, size 16; Marjorie," etc., she said, and bought pajamas and nightgowns for all of them. Another bought $239 worth of lingerie in about 20 minutes, she said.

"Generally our men buyers prefer pajamas to nightgowns in the Christmas gifts they buy, but that isn't true this year," she said.

What's New in Nighties.

Full skirts in the nightgowns, with many accordion pleated, high bustlines, Josephine style, and very long skirts are "new." Street colors in nightgowns, including brown, black, and navy, with jackets to match, and lots of bright red and jade green colors in pajamas were seen.

A few possible gifts for elderly women were seen. The new box bags, resembling cameras, are smart and spacious. Gold beads, which range from $1 to $50, are as "proper" for them as for young girls.

Real branch coral necklaces are less expensive this year. A traveling bag which is a little fancier than a brief case, more like the old fashioned kind which no gentlewoman ever was without, comes in various lethers.

For young and matronly women little bracelets of gold or silver with a tiny cylinder to contain their "mad money" [it holds a bill folded] are being shown. Charms to be added include, in gold or silver, tiny phones which actually dial, a baby buggy with wheels that turn, a dog house and a dog, buckets, megaphones, high hats, and compasses.

Velvet kits containing compact, purse, lipstick, and cigaret case; little white Angora mittens for evening wear; cap and long mittens of white plush for evening; sequin jackets and caps; skit suits or jackets, or even red flannel pants and knee warmers for winter sports; a tailored white silk hostess gown with a zipper from throat to hem, and anything Dalmatian [the rage since King Edward and Mrs. Wallis Simpson visited Dalmatia] are possible Christmas gifts.

WOUNDS 3D FOE IN DUEL DERBY AS POLICE RUSH IN

Doctor Gashes Head of Opponent with Saber.

Elemer Losonczy, 29, tall and supple government employé, had a three and one-half inch cut in his scalp when the police broke down the door of a fencing school, where Sargas and Losonczy clashed, and pinioned Sargas' naked arm.

Sargas, who previously had shot it out in two of the scheduled nine duels he planned in his campaign in defense of "the honor of my wife and our unborn baby," said he was unreconciled.

Duel Ends with One Rush.

His account with Losonczy, though a round had been fought, remained to be settled, he said.

Sargas' first saber duel in the series was all over with one serious rush and clash of steel.

Police, who stormed in after breaking down a door, arrested none in the room. They took the names of the duelists, however, with the enigmatic warning: "You'll hear from us."

The duel took place on the second floor of the Santelli Fencing school. Fourteen detectives were around the building, but Hungarian law provides that the authorities may interfere only after a duel actually starts. They are not permitted to take measures to prevent a fight.

The program for the duel, therefore, was to lock the doors at the dueling place securely in the hope that it would take the authorities a long time to batter down a door.

Stripped to the Waist.

Sargas and Losonczy were stripped to the waist and wore ordinary trousers, black shoes, white kid gloves into which they rubbed chalk dust. Around their necks were bandages. The heavy cavalry sabers used by the duelists were especially sharp.

The chief second advised the combatants to be reconciled and when he received no answer he whispered: "Start." The whisper, it was explained, was given so the police would not hear the order.

Sargas, with a gorillalike movement, sprang forward with a great roar. He struck a powerful blow. Losonczy tried ably to parry, but Sargas' strength and weight carried through and the blade neatly flipped up a section of his opponent's scalp.

At that instant the police crashed through a door and the encounter was ended.

Mrs. Sargas remained at home with her mother and a nurse. She greeted her husband happily as he returned upscathed from his third duel on her behalf.

Having injured two of the three opponents he has met and kept his own skin unpunctured, the vengeful Sargas stated his whole program of duels would be carried out.

It was because of alleged sneers by Hungarian young bloods against his marriage to the Budapest belle that the pugnacious Sargas launched his series of encounters.

WOMAN AND GIRL ARE FOUND SLAIN IN AN APARTMENT

Canton, O., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—The hacked body of Mrs. Minnie Long, 40, and the bullet pierced form of her daughter, Virginia Pyatte, 18, were found today in their apartment.

Terming the deaths both murder, Police Chief Ira Manderbaugh said he was searching for Sherman Long, Mrs. Long's third husband, in connection with the crimes. Officers were told he frequently quarreled with the two victims.

Although the girl's body was found early today it was not until several hours later that an autopsy disclosed a bullet wound in her temple.

Her mother's body was not discovered until this afternoon. Police said they missed it in a first search of the apartment because the lights were out and it had been concealed under a bed.

Mrs. Long's body had been slashed and hacked until fatal wounds were inflicted. The hatchet that apparently was used was found in the kitchen.

P. O. Pyatte, Mrs. Long's second husband, told police that Long frequently engaged in violent quarrels with his wife and stepdaughter. Virginia, daughter of Mrs. Long by her first marriage, had taken the name of Pyatte when her mother remarried.

Davenport, Ia., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Two charges of burglary with aggravation have been filed against Lyle D. Smith, 27, and Frank Schmalhaus, 22, both of Davenport, in connection with the robbery of two homes here on Thanksgiving day when silverware and jewelry valued at $800 were stolen.

Moving Forward

Marshall Field & Company presents here each day observations and opinions intended to be of interest and value to those it seeks to serve.

MIRACLES OF POLITICS

BY CALEB

SAMUEL Daniel, Groom of the Privy Chamber to Queen Anne, is one of the historians in Kennett's "Complete History of England:—With the Lives of All the Kings and Queens Thereof," published in 1709.

He reports in connection with King John: "In the 3rd Year of his reign (1192 A. D.) about December, five Moons were seen in Yorkshire, one in the East, the second in the West, the third in the North, the fourth in the South, and the fifth in the middle of 'em, having many Stars about it: Which Wonder was in those days, observ'd to precede a violent Season for Rain and Cold afterwards. The next Year the Floods were so high, that Bridges were thrown down, the Corn and Hay spoil'd, and Cattel and Men drown'd in several Places. In that which follow'd, after an extraordinary cold Winter, there happened grisly Tempests, terrible Storms of Thunder, Lightning, and Hail, the Stones as big as Hen's Eggs: Spirits were seen in the Air in the Shape of Birds, flying up and down with Fire in their Beaks, which they dropt on several Houses, and set them on Fire."

Samuel, however, was not a historian to be taken in. He adds: "If these Miraculous Events are not true, they serve at least to give us an Idea of the Superstition and Ignorance of those Times."

The same book reports that in 1176 it rained Blood in the Isle of Wight for two days. In 1179, "the Earth rais'd itself up like a lofty Tower, and remain'd several Hours in that posture: on a sudden it sunk down again with a horrid Noise, and the Earth so suck'd it in, that it made there a deep Pit, which continues to this day."

He says of Henry the Second, "In the last Year of this King, Mr. Holinshead (who is apt to take too much notice of these things) reports, That the Fish leap'd out of the Water in a Pool in Normandy, and fought together on dry land, with such noise as drew his neighboring People to behold this Wonder."

In this same history are lives and reigns by John Milton, Sir Thomas Moore, and Francis Lord Bacon—all writers of substance and dignity.

In the claims and counter claims of the recent political campaign, there were instanced things which will sound as miraculous to readers of the future as these occurrences during the reigns of important political personages of the past. We believe the effect of business upon conditions is greater than the effect of politics on business. We believe business is now about to do itself and the country much good by working strenuously to do a better job.

HAMILTON QUITS TO OPEN WAY TO REMOULD G. O. P.

Will Stay if Given Vote of Confidence.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Chairman John Hamilton today called a meeting of the Republican national committee, to be held at Chicago Dec. 17 and announced that he would submit his resignation from the chairmanship at that time.

The committee at this meeting will consider the steps to be taken for the rebuilding of the party in preparation for the elections of 1938 and 1940 and for the liquidation of the $500,000 deficit incurred in the conduct of the Landon campaign.

Mr. Hamilton desires that the committee shall be able to address itself to the plans for a party comeback with a clean slate and with new officers in command, if a change of personnel shall be deemed more conducive to success. For that reason he will tender his resignation and retire to the ranks of the committee, of which he is the Kansas member, if his resignation should be accepted.

Consults With Landon.

This step, which is unusual, was taken by Chairman Hamilton after consultation with Gov. Landon, titular head of the party, with whom he is sojourning in Florida. The understanding here is that it was taken as a result of considerable criticism within the party of the conduct of the Landon campaign by Mr. Hamilton. Both Gov. Landon and Chairman Hamilton deemed it essential that there should be a showdown of the views of the party leaders on this criticism at the outset of the work of party rehabilitation. If the criticism represents the attitude of a majority of the committee he will have the opportunity of choosing a new chairman to replace Mr. Hamilton. If, however, the criticism represents minority views the committee will refuse to accept the resignation and will vote its confidence in Mr. Hamilton to direct the rejuvenation of the party.

Some eastern leaders have pronounced the Landon debacle the result of political amateurishness on the part of the Republican young bloods from Missouri and Kansas who built up the Kansas governor as a presidential figure, piloted him to nomination at Cleveland and dominated his campaign for election.

Another Opposite Criticism.

On the other hand, Senators William E. Borah of Idaho and Charles N. McNary of Oregon and some other western Republicans held aloof from the Landon campaign largely on the ground that the Republican candidate was the tool of the Republican old guard and the big business monopolists. These elements are demanding a new deal in the party management.

Chairman Hamilton inclosed the call for the meeting of the committee in a letter to each committeeman and committeewoman in which he said:

"In supplementing the inclosed formal notice of the meeting of the committee I feel that I should, in all fairness to its members, say that it is my intention at that time to tender my resignation as chairman of the committee.

"I feel that such action on my part is advisable for several reasons. In the first place, a chairman of the national committee in an election year is chosen primarily at the request or suggestion of the presidential candidate and he cannot be said in the fullest sense to be the free choice of the committee.

"Again, only by such action on my part can there be afforded to the individual members of the committee an opportunity to express themselves as to the management and conduct of the past campaign. In this same connection I feel it impossible for me to continue in an official capacity without an expression of confidence from the body of the committee.

"I assure you that I shall view the decision of the committee from quite an impersonal attitude and I believe its members should go to Chicago fully determined to take such action as may be considered for the best interests of the party as a whole. I would not have you believe that I am attempting to shirk the obligations and responsibilities which are mine, occasioned primarily by the campaign deficit, and, irrespective of any action that may be taken by the committee at its meeting, I shall give my full time and whole-hearted effort until the deficit as a whole or at least a substantial part thereof is liquidated.

Asks Large Attendance.

"Undoubtedly this meeting is called at a time which will be inconvenient for many of the members, but I trust that you will make every effort to be present. I have fixed this early date, not only because congress convenes shortly after the first of the year, but also because personal considerations require early action in order that I may plan my future affairs with some degree of certainty.

"In the rules adopted by the party at the Cleveland convention it is stated that 'the committee shall make its own rules governing the use of proxies at any meeting.' No rule for proxies has yet been made by the present committee, but it is my personal opinion that proxies to be acceptable should be signed in ink and should be witnessed. Of course, this is a matter for the committee to decide when it meets."

LANDON SIDETRACKED TO HUNTING ON HIS VACATION IN FLORIDA

Monticello, Fla., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Campfire ashes blew into his breakfast plate, but Gov. Alf M. Landon called for more eggs and hot cakes at his close-to-nature fishing camp in the Wacissa river today.

"I'm thoroughly enjoying this," said the Kansan. "I got used to ashes in the oil fields."

Landon was dressed in blue overalls, a drab lether jacket, blue neckerchief and slouch hat. He wore boots.

There was deer meat in the camp, but the governor said he "didn't get the deer." He killed "a few" ducks before breakfast. He went to the isolated river camp, about 25 miles from here, for "some serious fishing," but got sidetracked to hunting.

The governor will go fishing into the Gulf of Mexico Monday. He will return to Topeka Dec. 11.

Hamilton Catches Sailfish.

Stuart, Fla., Dec. 4.—(AP)—John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the National Republican committee, exhibited a seven foot sailfish today as a token of his angling ability. The chairman arrived at Hobe sound last week for a vacation at the Samuel Pryor Jr. estate.

SHOWER SCRUBS STREET CARS ALL OVER IN MINUTE

A $5,000 streamlined shower bath has been opened by the Chicago Surface lines for its new street cars. The car to be cleaned, on entering the bath in the barns at Kedzie avenue and Jackson boulevard breaks a beam of light, throwing an electric switch that starts water flowing and large mechanical brushes rotating.

The car is scrubbed and rinsed in fifty-five seconds. Then, proceeding on its track to the exit from the bath, the car breaks another beam of light, that shuts off the shower and stops the rotary brushes. The equipment replaces hand labor.

Nazi Plane Crashes; Find Cargo of Rebel Pamphlets

ANNECY, France, Dec. 4.—(AP)—A big transport plane of German manufacture loaded with Spanish Fascist propaganda pamphlets was found wrecked in the mountains near here today. There was no sign of the crew of the plane and it was believed they might have jumped and landed in huge snowdrifts covering most of the nearby area.

ARGENTINE CHIEF CALLS ROOSEVELT PEACE APOSTLE

Buenos Aires Conference Committees Chosen.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Committees of the inter-American peace conference went to work tonight after the first full business session heard President Roosevelt hailed as an "apostle of peace."

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, head of the United States delegation, took no committee post himself in naming members of his group to various assignments, indicating he will maintain a general supervisory position and hold consultations when necessary.

Before it broke into committees the conference received a peace petition signed by more than 1,000,000 women which was brought to Buenos Aires by ten American women who flew here.

Pays Tribute to Roosevelt.

Foreign Minister Carlos Saavedra Lamas of Argentina, chosen permanent chairman of the conference, said of President Roosevelt in welcoming the delegates:

"The initiator of this conference and an apostle of peace, we owe to his prestige and his sponsorship the moral atmosphere which he has left us and which constitutes an augury of the success of our deliberations."

The President's visit, he said, "was not only opportune but providential."

Argues Against Isolation.

"We cannot consider the consolidation of peace while limiting its horizons," he declared. "We cannot give way to suppositions of continental isolation, which would be asserting that we do not live on the same planet with the old world."

Replying for the 20 delegations visiting Argentina, Foreign Minister José Espalter of Uruguay said:

"I would emphasize the affirmation of the President of the United States when he said democracy will solve all problems of internal order and of all international conflicts and will justly solve all social and economic antagonisms which cause unrest in the world at present."

He urged that the conference "prepare solid bases for a new commercial and economic policy to develop our countries among themselves," in addition to fortifying the peace structure.

Roosevelt Rests at Sea.

ABOARD U. S. S. CHESTER, at Sea, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The American-bound cruiser Indianapolis tonight maintained a speed of more than 23 knots in a choppy sea off the southern Brazilian coast as President Roosevelt rested in the admiral's cabin from his South American good-will tour.

For a part of the day the President sunned himself on the deck and read his mail, received by air mail yesterday in Montevideo.

At 4 p. m. the speedy cruiser was 525 miles north of the Uruguayan capital and 3,720 miles south of Trinidad, its fueling point.

France Promises Military Aid to Britain and Belgium

PARIS, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos today promised French army, air and naval aid to Great Britain and Belgium if they are attacked without provocation and at the same time held out the olive branch to Germany and Italy.

He also told the chamber of deputies that France soon would propose at Geneva "a practical plan for reduction of armaments which will include provisions for publicity on military expenditures and limitation of air forces."

Recalls British Pledge.

Recalling that Britain had pledged to support France in the event of attack for which France was not responsible, Delbos announced:

"I declare similarly that all the forces of France, on land, sea and air, would spontaneously and immediately be used for the defense of Great Britain against unprovoked aggression."

Such help also would be given Belgium, he said.

No Animosity Harbored.

France harbors no animosity against any country, however, he added, and hopes for rapprochement with Nazi Germany and improvement of relations with Fascist Italy.

"Nothing in our attitude should cause disquiet in Germany," he said. "We contest none of her legitimate rights. We have no designs of preponderant influence or encirclement. We seek only a common ground for coöperation — notably for economic renovation and disarmament."

Franco-Italian relations, somewhat strained during the Italo-Ethiopian war when France applied sanctions, have become less friendly with Italy's completion of a treaty with Germany and her recognition of the Spanish Fascist government. The sympathies of the French leftist government have been with the Spanish government defenders.

The French Disarm Plan.

The special object of the French disarmament plan for presentation to the league of nations would be elimination of "the most immediate and most dangerous possibilities of aggression," the foreign minister declared. He said it would be addressed to nations outside the league as well as in it.

Communist deputies launched a sharp attack on the government's policy of non-intervention in the Spanish civil war, asserting it increased rather than minimized the danger of a general European struggle.

HEAD OF URUGUAY PRESENTS ROOSEVELT WITH RARE STAMPS

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 4.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has with him on his voyage back to the United States a valuable addition to his stamp collection. Upon his departure yesterday President Gabriel Terra gave him an assortment of rare Uruguayan stamps along with an album which contained the text of Terra's speech at a luncheon for the visiting President, printed in English.

FREE ARCHBISHOP IN RIVAL'S $25,000 ASSAULT ACTION

Archbishop Athenagoras Spyrou of New York and three Chicago defendants were found not guilty yesterday in a $25,000 damage suit, charging assault, brought by Archbishop Christopher Cantageorge of New York. The verdict was returned by a jury before Judge Archie Kennedy of De Kalb, sitting in the Superior court here.

Archbishop Spyrou is head of the archdioceses of North and South America of the Greek Orthodox church. Archbishop Cantageorge heads the Independent Greek Orthodox church of North America, a schismatic branch of Archbishop Spyrou's church. The Chicago defendants were Peter G. Sikokis, Nikos Vambiroyannis and Nicholas Safrithis, followers of Archbishop Spyrou.

It was charged by Archbishop Cantageorge that the three Chicagoans assaulted him at Spyrou's instigation on Nov. 1, while all were attending the fifth Evangelical convention of the Greek archdioceses of North and South America, held at 1017 North La Salle street

Millions of German Youths Hunt Beechnuts for Oil

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—Millions of German boys and girls, members of the Hitler Youth organization, are searching forests this week-end for beechnuts. They were ordered into the forests by Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering in his capacity as national forest master and commissioner for the four year plan. Beechnuts are sought for conversion into edible oil. With government aid, oil manufacturers must pay collectors $5 per hundredweight for the nuts.

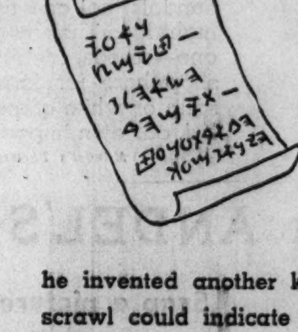
To give memory a rest

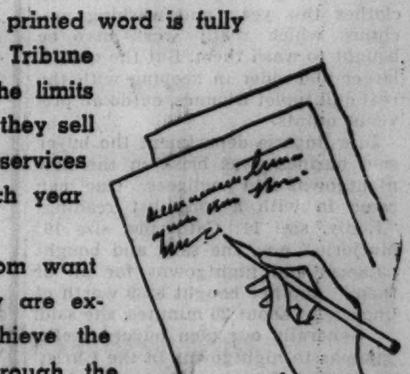
ABOUT the Twentieth Century (B. C.) business got so good that it became impossible to remember who owed you for what, and how much. So, to give memory a rest, Phoenician merchants devised a scrawl to indicate, say, 10 barrels of olive oil. Thus figures were invented.



LATER on a rush of orders from Crete and Egypt gave the first vice president in charge of New Business a severe headache. So, to help keep everything straight, he invented another kind of scrawl. This scrawl could indicate a customer, his address and credit rating. Thus the written word came into being.

BUSINESS men soon found that words were even more useful than figures. And, with the invention of printing, that with words they could do more than merely keep track of business. They could generate it!

THE POWER of the printed word is fully demonstrated by Tribune want ads. Within the limits of a few lines each, they sell millions of dollars of services and merchandise each year for advertisers.



Greatest returns from want ads come when they are expertly written to achieve the maximum appeal through the correct choice and use of words.

TO HELP you get the best results from your want ad, the Tribune offers you the benefit of its years of experience in this field. When you call Superior 0100 and ask for a Want Adviser, a trained young woman will gladly help you write your copy. The next time you wish to place a want ad, call

A BREWERY GETS MR. SALTIS INTO TROUBLE AGAIN

Threats Charged at Sale of Thornton Plant.

Joe Saltis, who will be remembered as a south side beer baron of the era when it was illegal to look for fun in bottles, bobbed into the news yesterday in a manner most embarrassing to Joe. He was cited for contempt by Referee in Bankruptcy Wallace Streeter.

In a certification to Federal Judge John P. Barnes, Referee Streeter charged the ponderous Saltis with intimidating a bidder at an auction of the Thornton Brewing company of Thornton in Streeter's office at 7 South Dearborn street on Thursday.

Creditors Seek $20,000.

Last Oct. 24 creditors filed an involuntary bankruptcy petition against the brewery, which is said to have been operated by Saltis in the prohibition era. Debts of the company amounted to about $20,000.

When the company was placed on sale it was agreed by Referee Streeter and the two bidders, Jacob H. Silver and Dominick Frederick, that prices offered would be in addition to the sum necessary to pay the creditors in full.

Frederick, who lives at 811 East 32d street, represented a syndicate composed of members of his family, including a brother, James. Silver's principals, and his address, were unknown and remain so.

He Gives Up Suddenly.

When the bidding reached the point at which Frederick bid $8,100, he asked for time to make a telephone call and the bidding was stopped while he left the room. When he returned, he asked for permission to withdraw from the bidding and was given it. The company consequently went to Silver, the only other bidder, for $8,100 and the money necessary to pay creditors.

Later, Frank P. Leonard, attorney for M. M. Martin, who was appointed trustee of the property by Judge Barnes, notified Referee Streeter that Joe Saltis had approached Frederick in the corridor when he was telephoning and said:

"If you buy that brewery there won't be any brewery there."

Frederick considered it discreet to withdraw his bid, according to Leonard.

Judge Studies Charge.

Judge Barnes was studying the referee's certification of contempt last night, and with him rests the decision whether the charge of contempt of federal court shall be placed against Saltis.

That's why it's all so embarrassing to Saltis, who has sold his Wisconsin property, ceased trying to lead the life of an imitation country gentleman, and is settled down in a large and lavishly furnished house at 9859 South Bell [Irving] avenue.

To Wed Commoner

PRINCESS CARMO ZU SCHOENAICH-CAROLATH.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Former Kaiser Wilhelm's stepdaughter, the Princess Carmo zu Schoenaich-Carolath, is to marry a commoner, it was announced today. Wilhelm's second wife, a widow when he married her at Doorn, the Netherlands, in 1922, disclosed the engagement of her 26 year old daughter to Hugo Hartung, 28, a german business man. They are to be wed at the ancestral home of the bride's family at Saabor, Silesia, Dec. 12.

The princess has spent much of her time at Doorn since her mother's marriage to the exiled kaiser. He fondly calls her "General" because of her jolly attempts to supervise his doings.

Hartung is a native of the Rhineland where his father is a director of an industrial concern. After serving as a bank and pharmacy clerk, he has spent the last six months in charge of the gasoline sales department of a manufacturing plant.

COUNCIL GROUP WRESTLES WITH STREET BUDGET

The city council finance committee sought ways to improve the city's garbage and snow removal services without adding to the appropriation for them as it continued work on the 1937 budget in day and night sessions yesterday. The committee's task is to keep the budget within the expected revenue of $51,509,803.

Mayor Kelly, who has recommended an increase of $199,070 in the funds for the street department, to improve street cleaning and garbage removal work, attended the session last night after some aldermen had indicated that they would seek a greater increase.

The committee accepted a recommendation of Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the Chicago Plan commission, that the commission's budget should be increased from $15,000 to $28,400 for 1937.

TYPEWRITER PUT IN EVIDENCE IN EXTORTION CASE

The typewriter on which Francis Thomas of Park Ridge is alleged to have written extortion letters to Harry R. Kendall, president of the Washington National Insurance company, was introduced in evidence yesterday before a jury in the federal court of Judge Charles E. Woodward.

Thomas, an insurance underwriter, is on trial on charges of sending threatening letters through the mail demanding $2,000 from Kendall.

The typewriter was placed in evidence by Assistant United States District Attorneys Austin Hall and Martin Ward after the testimony of George H. Wilson, a special agent of the federal bureau of investigation. Wilson said he found the machine in the offices of the Great National Life Insurance company, 110 South Dearborn street, where Thomas was employed. Wilson had taken samples from fifty-six other typewriters.

The hearing was then adjourned until Monday when government experts from Washington will take the stand to testify that characters in samples from the typewriter correspond to those in the extortion notes.

Doctor Falls Over Banister in Hotel; Condition Serious

Dr. Ralph W. Peterson, 45 years old, 3747 North Harding avenue, was reported in a serious condition in the County hospital last night after falling over a stair banister yesterday on the second floor of the Monarch hotel, 517 North Clark street. The physician suffered a fractured skull.

Judge Prystalski's Wife Felled and Robbed of $18

Mrs. Frances Prystalski, wife of Judge John Prystalski of the Criminal court, was robbed of $18 last night by a youth who seized her purse near her home at 11317 Forest avenue. The youth, about 18 years old, struggled with her and escaped with the purse as she fell to the ground.

LADIES IN THEIR LIVES.

Fair Rosamonds have had their share of influence on the stage now set again in London, with the third act not written and distracting the collaborators, who wonder what the final curtain is going to be.

If Mr. Baldwin thinks he is a worried man and that such things should not happen to him, he might, with or without compensation, reflect that another Edward in his day beset an even friendlier counselor with troubles and troubles.

That was the fourth Edward and his friend was Warwick. Edward's subjects had wondered why he was not married and were afraid he was not "chaste of living." He ended his bachelordom by dropping in to call on Elizabeth Woodville, five years his senior, eldest daughter of Lord Rivers, and widow of Lord Ferrers of Groby. Ferrers had fallen at St. Albans fighting for the Red Rose of Lancaster, against Warwick and for Margaret of Anjou, another lady of consequence in the English book, and for Henry VI., her pious but slightly balmy husband.

If Edward's retinue wondered why he turned aside on the tour he was making, unexpectedly to visit the lady of the dead Lancastrian, supposedly his enemy, they had their curiosity satisfied when later they learned that the purpose was a secret marriage. Edward took the seemingly rash, if not incredible, step "pour sa beaute et par amourette," as the contemporary chronicler stated it.

If Mr. Baldwin has several times half raised himself in his chair in the last fortnight, it may reasonably be thought that Warwick, the kingmaker, bounded as far from earth as his greatest leap could take him when he learned that his king had done this thing. For Warwick at the time was angling for a French marriage upon which the whole Yorkist continental policy would be built, when he discovered that his half of the bargain had been taken off of the counter without his knowledge and that he was the laughing stock of an otherwise insulted and enraged France. He returned to England, occupied London, drove Edward to Burgundy, but later lost his life in the wars which followed.

Before this Edward, the great Edward III., in the disgraceful twilight of a great life, took, as the ancient chronicler puts it, "to agitate and assuage his dotage" one Alice Perrers, daughter of a Hertfordshire squire, a lady with the moral character of a pickpocket. She even stole the rings off his dying fingers. But then this Edward had done his duty by his country and had gone in for a private life in a way that suited him, even if it scandalized his declining years.

Many other ladies of the royal scene, frail or remarkable, might be mentioned, but interest will probably be satisfied with two or three others. Notable was Katharine Swynford, who gave John of Gaunt three sons before she became his duchess. Marriage later was consented to with the stipulation that these sons never should figure in the succession to the crown. History was to play some tricks with that solemn agreement when Margaret, daughter of John, earl of Somerset, grandson of Katharine Swynford, became by matrimonial alliance with the Tudors the progenitor of Henry VII. and the Tudor line. Men propose and men also sometimes dispose. Katharine was an ancestress of kings, although not a wife when she started her part of the line to which she contributed.

Charles II., soon after he landed on the English shore to restore the Stuarts, a landing, as Trevelyan says, "of the comic spirit," proceeded to enrich and enliven the English court with many testimonials of his fondness for gayety and pleasure. No contribution he made to English life was more remarkable than that of the lovely French noblewoman, Louise de Querouaille, known to the English as Mrs. Carwell. That was about as much as their tongue could manage of the lady's name. This friend of the gay and careless monarch bequeathed to the English stock something of her lover's character but much more of her own in beauty, wit, courage and high talents.

Among her descendants was Charles Lennox, the third duke of Richmond, a gallant warrior and person of extraordinary charm and talent and one of the ablest envoys Great Britain ever sent to Paris to outwit statesmen who knew how to convert military adversity into diplomatic triumph. There was also Charles Fox, the great parliamentarian, to whose genius in the art of managing the house of commons George III. could attribute the stunning rebuke he received in April, 1780, when the commons passed John Dunning's resolution "that it is necessary to declare that the influence of the crown has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished." When the vote tallied 233 to 215 the house itself was as astonished as the headstrong monarch was outraged. The British crown thereupon again headed back into constitutionalism.

Mrs. Carwell also contributed Charles, George and William Napier among her descendants and the fascinating Sarah Lennox, at whom young George III. made the same eyes that Edward VIII. has made at the lady of his choice. The courageous and witty beauty had him enraptured. He fell as hard but not as far as the present Edward. His elders and advisers caught him on the bounce and sat upon him, sent to Mecklenburg-Strelitz for a royal hausfrau, and turned their young man's romances into the conventional channels productive of a large family.

It is related that after George had been suppressed he saw the lovely Sarah on a beautiful night and could think of nothing better in his embarrassment to say than it was a nice moon. "And what," said the contemptuous Sarah, "has the moon to do with you?" There wasn't any answer, even as now the world is expecting to learn that Edward VIII., as king, will find the moon has nothing to do with him.

RELIEF FOR STRAPHANGERS.

The recent accident on the elevated has focused attention upon the need for modernization of Chicago's transportation services. The conditional approval given by Judge Wilkerson to the Abbott plan for a financial reorganization of the surface lines has served the same end. Plainly, the time has come for action. The people of Chicago want better transportation, they are entitled to it, and they can get it if prompt advantage is taken of the opportunity which now presents itself.

To achieve the goal, expenditures running into hundreds of millions of dollars will be required over the next few decades. Toward this amount the city has, perhaps, 45 million dollars of investments in its traction fund which can be liquidated. The surface lines have a replacement and renewal fund of some 20 millions more. Perhaps the surface lines can command additional credit under the Abbott plan. The elevated system as it stands today can attract no new investment large enough to be considered, a fact brought out clearly in the investigation into the causes of the wreck.

The money now in sight cannot be spent to advantage and certainly no new money can be obtained from investors until there has been a thorough-going survey of Chicago's available facilities and a plan drawn for modernizing the whole system as a system. The task of making the survey and drawing the plan is not one for amateurs. It is an engineering job and should be intrusted to the best engineering brains which the city can enlist for the purpose.

With a plan in hand, all the other problems—political, financial, and legal—will be capable of solution. Without a comprehensive plan, traction will continue to be the football of political manipulators, new investment on the required scale will not be forthcoming and futile bickering over corporate reorganizations and franchise rights will continue.

There is every reason to believe that a large investment in transportation services for Chicago would prove sound from every point of view. Experience in other cities has shown that improvement in facilities leads to increased patronage. The principle was illustrated in a small way in Chicago as recently as this year when the street car and bus companies introduced their new equipment. Fortunately, money is now cheap and investment opportunities for the present are restricted. The sooner the engineering survey is undertaken, the sooner we can expect progress toward modern transportation in this city.

THE RIGHT TO DIE.

The defeat in the house of lords of the bill legalizing euthanasia was not unexpected and is not likely to stop the highly respectable movement of which the late Lord Moynihan was the leader. The problem is a very difficult one, involving religious objections and considerations of public policy. Lord Moynihan was the most distinguished surgeon in Great Britain and a philanthropist. The association created to further legislation numbers scientists, medical men, clergymen, and other men of note. It represents high character and intelligence and cannot be dismissed as an aggregation of cranks and irresponsibles. On the other hand, euthanasia is opposed by prominent clerics, physicians, and public men, and there is no doubt that public opinion is not yet ready for a decision one way or another.

The proponents of legalized euthanasia will continue to agitate and opponents will counter attack. There will be much heat and eventually, we trust, more light. At the present stage there is much misunderstanding and the disposition of opponents to confuse or distort the controversy, already revealed, will not be corrected. Question-begging terms will be used to avoid fair argument and discredit the effort with the unthinking. Already it appears that many opponents, through want of thought or lack of scruple in argument, ignore the fact that no one proposes any action which is not freely willed by the individual involved. The question, shirked by these opponents, is whether an individual suffering from an incurable disease shall have the legal right to die.

Religious opponents urge that there is and can be in morals no right to die. Secular opinion views with alarm the possibilities of abuse of covert murder. The problem is undeniably very difficult. Our own opinion is that in extreme cases of unbearable suffering a human being should not be denied the relief humanity affords to every lower animal.

Editorial of the Day

[Detroit News.]

There are those who believe football, as an industry, is on the way out. If this is so, we think it can be said now that the break will grow out of the position in which schools like Chicago find themselves in their sports relations with comparable institutions. The Daily Maroon, speaking for the student body, urges the withdrawal of Chicago from Big Ten football unless it devises means of enforcing its rules against subsidies for athletes.

It is a challenge the football industry must meet, and quickly. Wisconsin's Reynolds plan, which would openly provide aid to likely athletes, at least escapes the hypocrisy with which many schools are handling the question. Yet, even this is no solution to the larger quandary: Are our universities seats of learning or auspices for commercial sports enterprises?

In Chicago's case—as in Michigan's in late years and in Harvard's—high scholastic standards are an added handicap in rivalries with those schools that not only tolerate the unintelligent athlete but solicit his enrollment. One of the year's leading backs—a Big Ten star—showed up at Ann Arbor with half the requirements for admission. He had no difficulty enrolling at another school. It would seem the time is near when attitudes so far apart will estrange traditional rivals in sport. At Chicago they believe it is the reasonable course.

Pro football, played hard and cleanly and more expertly than the college brand, is honestly commercial. Many of our schools are in the morally uneasy position of trying to play both ends against the middle. They want the money, and they want the intangibles that attach to superiority in amateur sport. A few outspoken dissenters like Chicago will make their position even more intolerable.

STEAMBOAT DAYS.

As we rounded the big bend and entered that majestic sweep the Mississippi makes past Baton Rouge, the pilot squinted over the spokes of the big wheel. I let him tell his own tale:

It was right about here (he said) that I helped educate a Yankee in the '70s. I was pilot then on the Grand Republic, and this Yankee, carpetbags and all, was on his way to see what the south looked like. "Is it true," he asked, "that they really gamble morning to night down here?"

"True?" said I, kinda shocked. "Man, they'll bet on anything—horse races, steamboat races, card games, and even on which bird'll fly out of a tree first; and for big money, too." My Yankee seemed impressed, so when I stepped ashore at Baton Rouge I found him walkin' with me on the levee. Pretty soon he gave a kind of snort and I saw him looking at Colonel Sneedham and another planter. I was right smart mortified, because they was matchin' pennies. Just then the game broke up and Colonel Sneedham said: "That's 500 I am indebted to you."

"They were matchin' for dollars," I said to the Yankee. He looked at me and said, "Dew tell," sarcastic like. But Colonel Sneedham hailed the wharfmaster. "Mr. Markham," he remarked casually, "I wish you'd make out a transfer order in favor of Colonel Brown for 500 bales of cotton."

The heavy curtains part upon a scene
Of wondrous beauty—Egypt's muse reborn
Tonight with ancient pageantry and pomp;
A mighty voice sweeps ling'ringly, forlorn,
Across familiar chords to burst at last
Into a flood of rapture—passionate
It soars and vibrates through the perfumed dark.
O, golden voice, with you I contemplate
Eternity, dim heights where puny man,
As in a dream, yearns toward celestial goals.
The mighty voice is stilled, yet quivers on
The melody to stir insensate souls;
The spirit, purged, considers wond'ringly
The presence of a shy new-found nobility.

A TRUE FAIRY TALE.

Once upon a time there was a shortage of labor. The year was 1923. In one of its spring months the Illinois free employment bureau had 116 jobs available for every 100 men who were asking jobs. Conditions were such that frantic employers sent crews of strong arm men down to the drab haunts of the hobos along Madison street. The orders were simple: "Bring back men." Any astonished bum who admitted a desire to labor was put in a truck; the doors were then locked and when the truck was filled away it hied to some factory.

The experiment was not a success. The men were unemployables, for the most part. But the trial was made. The present application is: the so-called economists who have been asserting that there isn't enough work to go round seem destined to find themselves in a world that hasn't enough workers to do the necessary work.

THE PROBLEM OF ADOLESCENCE.

THIS is an old, old story—one that has been handled satisfactorily, for the most part, by scores of generations of parents. It relates to the period when the lad begins his adult life and the girl takes on the bloom of womanhood. A German author called it "the awakening of spring." Questions such as "Where did I come from?" bubble up in the minds of these youngsters—queries that have been asked and answered for centuries.

Unless parents take the matter in hand children will acquire their knowledge from unreliable and distorted sources. Instead of a wholesome view of the situation there will be built up a sort of mysterious and vicarious thrill that comes from talking about such subjects as, for example, how babies are born.

Youngsters need no longer be regaled with the legend of the stork. With lessons from plants and trees the true circumstances may be brought forth simply and without secrecy. After the bud bursts into flower comes the fertilization of the ovum [the plant egg] with pollen carried by the wind or on the wings, bodies, and legs of insects. With the ripening process the seed is matured and when placed in a suitable environment [the soil] will bring forth a new plant in the likeness of the parent.

The birth of puppies or of kittens offers a splendid opportunity for teaching this simple but momentous lesson. We will have but few sex problems if every child is carefully informed as to the nature of reproduction.

What is the best time for instruction? Whenever by the child's questions there is observed a recurring curiosity that must be satisfied. But the explanation must be natural and matter of fact. It is not a solemn occasion but it must be done so gently and cautiously that the child's own instincts will not be aroused. There are thousands of perplexing questions more vital than sex and the less formality with which the talk about life is enshrouded the better. When children realize that plants, animals, birds, and insects present the same steps in development as human beings, sly secrecy to some and horrors to others will be lost.

It is more important, for instance, to direct the child's thinking along proper lines. This may be done by a well selected course of reading, thus inculcating a love of history and of nature, and an appreciation of the lives of great men and women. But reading must not take the place of health building play and sometimes the bookish boy or girl will need to be driven out of doors to mingle with his fellows.

I often wonder why so many brilliant fathers fail to retain influence over their sons or mothers over their daughters. There is such a thing as drawing the curb too tightly, a situation that invites rebellion. "Rig-id disCIPline," as the old schoolmaster called it, is a fine thing in its way, but it can weigh far too much. Fundamentally, the lad will do the right thing because it is the right thing and because he wants to retain the respect and the admiration of his parents. Boy and Girl Scout organizations as well as scores of other "clubs" have helped materially.

I am not at all sure but that papers on child analysis read before women's clubs are not more harmful than useful. Many a lad is rendered "queer" because mother knew too much about child psychology—or thought she did.

Children are not experimental animals. They are, or should be, just normal, healthy human beings to be treated, handled, spoken to, and instructed with practical common sense. One dislikes to admit it, but almost any school teacher, after a few years of experience, can point to scores of children who have been warped in character by psychological tinkering in the home. All too often adolescent behavior becomes artificial and unnatural. Candor, frankness, honesty, and understanding on the part of parents will insure like qualities in their progeny.

NO DRUG CURE.

M. J. B. writes:

1. Is glaucoma curable in that treatment can be given which will obviate the use of any drug in the eye? In other words, after glaucoma has begun, will some drug have to be used in the eye continuously?

2. Does not the persistent use of any drug in the eye finally injure the delicate tissues?

3. Can a wrong lens cause glaucoma?

4. I have been under treatment for more than a year, but the flashes of light and discomfort continue, with some loss of sight. Is there not danger to the sight as long as these flashes continue?

REPLY.

1. There is no drug which will cure glaucoma. Treatment by this means must continue as long as the patient lives.

2. The drugs used in the treatment of glaucoma will not injure the eye.

3. No.

4. As long as the pressure within the eyeball continues at a high level sight is endangered. An operation is advised at the hands of a skilled ophthalmologist.

OPERATION IS CURE.

M. W. writes:

1. What is meant by cystic ovary?

2. Is a cure possible without operation?

REPLY.

1. A cystic ovary is one on which a bladderlike tumor has formed.

2. Operation is the only method of cure. In the hands of a skilled surgeon, removal of the cyst is one of the safest major operations in surgery.

3. Your pains may be due to arthritis or to some circulatory difficulty. Have your physician investigate.

GARLIC AND BLOOD PRESSURE.

M. S. writes:

1. I have heard that eating garlic will reduce high blood pressure. Is this true?

2. Should a person take capsules continually for high blood pressure?

REPLY.

1. Garlic is reputed to dilate the blood vessels to a slight extent, but not enough to lower the blood pressure.

2. If you mean garlic—No! There are drugs, however, that will aid sufferers from high blood pressure, such as nitroglycerin, the nitrates, and the cyanates. None of these should be used unless the physician in charge approves and prescribes the dose.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil.—An investigation by congress into the high interest rates charged by banks in Brazil—alleged to be the highest in the world—has centered attention on a situation which is blamed for pushing many industries and business houses into receivership.

All banks are guilty of the high rates. The Bank of Brazil, official banking institution of the country, as well as American, Canadian, British, French, and Portuguese establishments operating here, charges from 10 to 12 per cent a year for loans and discounts. This does not include commission fees, stamps, and other expenses which bring the rate to as high as 1½ per cent a month.

Only leading banks, however, charge these rates. Smaller institutions ask 18 per cent a year without a blink, and many organizations open their safes only to customers needing money so badly they will pay 2 to 3 per cent a month.

Relatively speaking, the 10 to 12 per cent charged by the larger banks is often considered accommodating by industrialists and merchants who must discount their customers' papers because of the long credit they are forced to grant in order to sell their merchandise.

But few businesses can really afford to pay 12 to 24 per cent and more a year for loans. Radio sales provide a typical example. Importers, largely American and European concerns, sell their radio sets to distributors who must pay for them in 120 days. The distributors are compelled, due to competition, to sell most of their sets on time payments extending over one to two years. Thus a distributor has to borrow to pay the importer and, even though a gross profit of 45 to 50 per cent on the cost price is possible, many cannot afford consistently to pay the high interest rates now charged. Hardly a month passes that a radio distributor does not go out of business.

Some observers maintain that the credit condition is aggravated by the tendency of wealthy people to keep their cash idle in bank accounts, unwilling to lend unless they can get returns that in other countries would be illegal.

President Getulio Vargas has often urged in messages to congress that energetic measures be taken to enable the Bank of Brazil to modify to a certain extent its present banking system by establishing special departments capable of coöperating with industry, commerce, and agriculture whose efforts are hampered by the high cost of credit.

Proponents of that or similar legislation assert that there is enough idle money to relieve the situation, if it were put to work. The currency in circulation in this country totals 3,700,000 centos of reis [$222,000,000]. It is held that if interest and discount rates were reduced idle money would find sound takers and that this would aid in further developing the country's natural and industrial possibilities.

ESTATE PROBATE.

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Property at this address has been in Probate court for more than a year. Shouldn't it be released or settled in Probate court?

2. Party who lives in lower apartment has a note against this property.

3. Can he do as he pleases here, rebuilding both inside and outside, because he has this note against the property?

4. Hasn't the owner in whose name taxes are written anything to say about the property?

5. Shouldn't he who has the note wait until the property is his before he starts to rebuild? A. O.

1. Ordinarily a probate estate should be closed in a little over a year.

2. It is not clear what you mean by this statement.

3. Not on the bare facts stated.

4. The tax records are not conclusive.

5. We would consider it unwise for him to spend money on property which does not belong to him, if such is the fact.

THE CRUSADE AGAINST SYPHILIS.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 1.—I recently made some complimentary comments to friends in the newspaper field regarding the series of articles run recently in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE on the subject of syphilis. I was advised that editors appreciate these comments directly and in consequence I am very glad to add my commendation of these articles to the many others you must have received.

A frank, honest, and accurate journalistic presentation of this subject is absolutely essential, if any public health campaign for the eradication of syphilis is to be a success. I believe a rather broad nation-wide campaign is developing as a result of Surgeon General Parran's recent articles and public addresses. THE TRIBUNE is to be complimented upon leading the way to journalistic support of such a program.

BLOCKADE.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—How can the south siders, coming into the loop during the rush hour in the morning on the Clark street line, avoid the blockade that is occasioned always between Taylor and Polk streets on account of the trucks loading and unloading? This matter is getting to be so bad that I believe some adjustment must be made for the poor people who must use this means of conveyance coming into the loop. This morning it took 15 minutes to travel this one block. The policeman who covers this territory seems to be favoring the trucks, for instead of having the trucks line up and wait he holds up street cars in both directions until sometimes ten or twelve cars are lined up in each direction, just to let one or two trucks back in and out.

HOLIDAY PAPERS.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Why can't we have a holiday newspaper?

Most of us go through the same routine on a holiday as we do on a Sunday. When we get a holiday it seems so much like a Sunday to me that I actually look for the Sunday paper. I suggest we have a holiday newspaper, not for my sake only. I am sure that thousands of others would agree. M. S.

STILLE NACHT.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—In memory of Mme. Schumann-Heink I would suggest that her usual Christmas eve broadcast over the radio of "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht" be given with one of her own permanent records. G. M. McBEAN.

RECOLLECTION OF THE HAYMARKET RIOT.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—I saw the Haymarket riot to which your Graphic Section calls attention. I was present and saw everything that transpired.

I was one of the crowd of never more than 500.

When the bomb was thrown about half of them had left and most of the others were leaving. It had begun to rain; it was about 10:30 p. m.

I saw Carter Harrison on his bay charger as he rode through the crowd which stepped back so as to leave a lane for him to pass through. As he passed the speaker's truck, bearded Sam Fielding, who was addressing the crowd in a weak voice, tipped his hat. Mayor Harrison saluted and rode away. About a half hour later, or a little less, the tramp of marching feet was heard. It was several platoons of policemen marching in close formation. On a stake of the truck was a gasoline flare, in the uncertain light of which I noticed a large elderly man with a full, gray beard, an elderly woman with a black shawl around her head and a tall, bareheaded boy with his hands in his pockets.

A sharp command rang out. The first platoon of policemen broke ranks and charged the crowd, swinging their clubs and knocking down everybody within reach. A policeman kicked the stout elderly man in the stomach; he fell on his face. The elderly woman was hit and her face caved in. The boy was hit on top of the head. The club seemed to sink down to his eyebrows. He crumpled up on the pavement and lay still. I stepped in between the truck and an express wagon where I was in the shadow of the truck. Just then I noticed a streak of light in the sky coming from the top of the five story Crane company's pipe mill. It appeared like a meteor, a shooting star. It fell and disappeared. A second or two later there was a loud explosion. The rest is history.

THE VOICE OF THE FAN.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Would it not be a clever idea to reserve a column on your sport page for criticisms and suggestions in the sport world?

All the sport lovers would write in criticizing or complimenting something unusual that happened.

Owners, managers or captains of teams would eagerly look for that column to see if their own team was criticized; then they would look for a remedy. They say two heads are better than one, and here you have the fans at large all giving ideas. GEORGE V. ORAM.

DEADLINE FINDS PENSION BLANK RETURNS LAGGING

Large Collection Today Is Foreseen.

Several thousand applications for workers' account numbers under the federal old age benefit [annuity] plan are expected to be missing tonight as the deadline for turning in the forms is passed. Up to last night only about 525,000 of the 850,000 Chicago workers' applications had reached the postoffice.

Postoffice officials said they hoped to receive at least two-thirds of the missing 325,000 applications today from large concerns. They urged employers again not to delay sending in the employés' forms until all are collected.

The government will try to avoid the invoking of punitive measures against workers and employers whose forms are turned in after the deadlines, it was learned, since penalties in this early stage of the law's operation might make it generally unpopular.

Numbers Are Assigned.

After a worker's application is received at the postoffice he is assigned a number which designates his individual account under the social security plan. This account is a record of his own and his employer's tax contributions, as well as data regarding length of employment. The numbers for Chicago workers started with 318-01-0001. By last night 100,000 account numbers had been sent out.

H. L. McCarthy, regional director for the social security board, announced that nearly 10,000 colored posters are on display in this region briefly explaining the operation of the annuity plan. He said that workers who still are confused about the plan might benefit from the following questions and answers:

Q.—Are WPA [Works Progress administration] workers excluded by the social security act? A.—Yes, since they are employed by the government.

Q.—Are PWA [Public Works administration] workers excluded? A.—If they are paid directly by PWA, yes, but not if they are employed by a private contractor who is carrying out a PWA project.

Define Agricultural Workers.

Q.—We buy beans for the market and we hire women to sort the good from the bad. Are they not agricultural workers and therefore excluded? A.—No. The term "agricultural labor" includes the packing, transportation, or marketing of farm products only when these operations are carried on as an incident to ordinary farming—that is, as distinguished from manufacturing or commercial operations.

Q.—Seven insurance agents hire one stenographer and share the cost of her salary. Are they subject to the tax on employers? A.—Each agent signs an individual card as an employer and shares the tax on the stenographer's wages.

Q.—Are trade unions and trade associations classed as employers covered by the act with respect to their own stafs? A.—Yes.

MAYOR HOPEFUL WPA CAN AVERT SLASH IN ROLLS

Mayor Kelly returned yesterday from Washington D. C., where he attended a meeting of the executive committee of the National Conference of Mayors at which efforts were made to have the Works Progress administration continued through the winter months with no reduction in rolls.

"I am confident the authorities at Washington will make every effort to keep WPA workers occupied until congress convenes next month," the mayor said. "Action by congress to keep the WPA in force is expected in the first few days of the session."

Mayor Kelly admitted the city could not carry the relief load if the WPA workers are suddenly thrown out of their jobs and return to relief rolls.

The mayor also said he will be ready to meet next week with Guy A. Richardson, president of the Chicago Surface lines, to open negotiations on a new franchise for the lines.

ASKS FOR $51,000 FROM WIDOW OF MOE ROSENBERG

Probate Judge John F. O'Connell permitted Mrs. Michael Rosenberg, widowed sister-in-law of the late Moe Rosenberg to file a petion yesterday seeking custody of $51,028 now held by Moe Rosenberg's widow, Annette, as administratrix of the west side politician's estate. Mrs. Moe Rosenberg was given ten days in which to file an answer.

The money represents cash and securities turned over to the administratrix since her husband's death on Jan. 12, 1934, under his contract for the sale of the Cook County Trust company, which is now being operated as the Metropolitan Trust company.

Mrs. Michael Rosenberg's petition sets forth that she and Moe Rosenberg organized the Cook County Trust company in 1930, with the agreement that for the sake of convenience it would be under Rosenberg's name, but that each would share equally in its fortunes. Rosenberg sold the company on June 1, 1932, to Clarence A. Beutel and Barnet L. Rosset, by a contract ratified by Mrs. Michael Rosenberg. The petition describes Rosenberg's estate as "highly insolvent," and demands that the money be turned over in advance of claims against the estate.

CHICAGO HONORS MARQUETTE IN 2 CEREMONIES

Wreaths of laurel and of bay were laid beneath the Michigan bridge memorial to Jacques Marquette, Jesuit missionary, at noon yesterday as students of Catholic colleges gathered there to honor the 262d anniversary of his landing on the site of Chicago. The ceremony, sponsored by Loyola university, was participated in also by students of Rosemary, Xavier, and Mundelein colleges, and by representatives of the French War Veterans and the Diables Bleus.

Another celebration of the occasion was held in the lobby of the city hall last night under the auspices of the Chicago schools and the recreation division of the Chicago park district.

AGE PENSIONERS CAN KEEP THEIR ASSUMED NAMES

Ruling Is Made by Social Security Board.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Assumed names, aliases and nom de plumes may be kept by workers registering under the New Deal's "old age assistance" program, the social security board announced today.

The ruling was one in a series of moves by the board in an effort to dispel some of the confusion surrounding the registration of 26 million American men and women under the benefits scheme. Queries on this one point alone had flooded the SSB offices here.

As a result of the decision thousands of persons may comply with the plan without fear of their real names being exposed. The principal types seeking such protection are aliens who have illegally entered the United States, alimony dodgers and other debtors. Aliens who have not been smuggled into the country may come under the plan.

Ruling Based on Opinion.

The ruling of the SSB was in accordance with an opinion of the bureau of internal revenue which will be charged with the responsibility of collecting the wage taxes from the people, who, in turn will be repaid in monthly benefits from $10 to $85 at the age of 65.

The SSB asked that if the employé had any evidence or statement thought necessary to explain a difference between the pay roll name and the name as shown by vital records, such as birth certificates, this should be attached to the application card or forwarded separately to the wage records office of the board at Baltimore, Md.

It was again pointed out that all employés are expected to file their applications before tomorrow night.

Total Below Estimate.

Troubles dogged the heels of the SSB here and officials in its Baltimore offices. The registration of employers was running so far behind that yesterday the board issued orders for a checkup on delinquents by the postoffice department. Only 1,500,000 applications out of an estimated 3,500,000 to come in from employers had been received yesterday. The deadline was Nov. 21.

Escaped St. Charles Boy Flees in Being Returned

Stanley Bergono, 17 years old, escaped from Parole Officer Gregory J. Olar at Roosevelt road and Cicero avenue last night while being driven to the St. Charles School for Boys. He was handcuffed at the time. He leaped from Olar's car as Olar slowed it down for trafic. Olar pursued the youth and fired several shots, but could not stop him. Bergono was sent to the school eight months ago. He escaped two months ago. He was recaptured yesterday and turned over to Olar.

'TRAILERVILLES' ORDERED OUT BY CITY OF DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 4.—(AP)—City officials of Detroit, condemning the "trailervilles" which have sprung up within the city limits, ordered today the removal of all automobile trailers used as residences on parking lots in violation of building and sanitary laws.

Robert B. Fisher, chief sanitary inspector, notified occupants of a 12-family "mobile home" colony near the business district and another encampment in northwest Detroit to vacate. Sanitary facilities, he said, are not adequate.

Fisher, who said attorneys for the city have ruled that a trailer parked on a lot becomes a residence, announced that occupants who do not move will be charged with violation of the city housing code.

The trailer families, who each pay about $2.50 a month for parking space, did not vacate at once and some indicated they might oppose the city's order.

Mrs. Pauline Gardner, who operates the 12-trailer camp, said most families had located for the winter, equipped with stoves, ice boxes, and radios. Water, Milk, ice, and mail is delivered at a nearby gasoline filling station.

CHRISTMAS BOOK SECTION

The Material Proves Prime Theme of Year

Critic Finds Reader Wants to Know World.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—A learned stranger, surveying the English world of letters for 1936, would be struck by the fact that English readers are keenly interested in the material universe, and that they want to know all about it, what it is, why, and how it can be mended.

They have gobbled up thousands of copies of "Inside Europe." They have swarmed to read what Mr. Lloyd George has to explain about the misconduct of the great war. The typical successes of the autumn season have been Bertrand Russell's "Which Way to Peace?" and "Mathematics for the Million," by Lancelot Hogben, which is selling like an Edgar Wallace because, for the first time, it links mathematics with history and daily life, and because much very significant modern writing can only be understood properly through a knowledge of mathematics.

And H. G. Wells' "Anatomy of Frustration" is also significantly popular as summarizing the current perplexities of mankind. The universal encyclopedia which he there outlines is the one we all need, and may eventually get.

A wonderful best seller is H. A. L. Fisher's "History of Europe," which in a single great volume now embraces most of the information required for an understanding of contemporary affairs on the continent; J. A. Spender's "Great Britain, Empire and Commonwealth, 1886-1935" tells the story of fifty years of British foreign policy; E. F. Benson's "The Kaiser and Foreign Relations" supplements Mr. Spender, and in "The Hundred Years" Mr. Guedalla nimbly and brilliantly picks his way among hundreds of episodes which bring the last century to life under our eyes. All these books have been eagerly read.

Biographies, too, of men who played parts in the war or in recent politics, or what may be called revolutionary letters, have stood out from among other books. The lives of Earl Jellicoe, of Lord Balfour, of George Moore, and the autobiographies of Lord Snell, the labor leader; John Paton, the labor organizer; G. K. Chesterton, Sir J. J. Thomson, Oliver Gogarty, the Irish senator, and others who can throw light upon the living present for many have taken the place of novels.

Such books as "Walls Have Mouths," by W. F. R. Macartney, in which the English prison system is criticized, and "I Took Off My Coat," by Hugh Massingham, which tells how a young gentleman went to live among the very poor, have opened many eyes; and the same may be said of John Newsome's "Out of the Pit," a book about the ruined areas in England, where hope has been at a low ebb. The books are not only timely in themselves; they show how men's minds are running.

They are running away, one would think, from poetry, and this suspicion is confirmed by the reception given in some quarters to the "New Poems" of A. E. Housman in which we can read the very last instalment of the poetry first sung in "A Shropshire Lad." But W. B. Yeats' thinks otherwise; and the most important verse production of the year has been his "Oxford Book of Modern Verse." Very interesting is "The Collected Poems of Sacheverell Sitwell," with a preface by his sister, Edith, while Roy Campbell has published "Mithraic Emblems," W. H. Auden "Look Stranger," and Christopher Hassall, a newcomer, son of a famous poster artist, "Devil's Dyke."

In fiction the timeliest books have

'The Queen's Rings' Upsets History of Elizabethan Era

"The Queen's Rings," by Anne Meeker. [Ryerson, $2.50.]

A historical romance which upsets accepted history is "The Queen's Rings," by Anne Meeker, who reproduces cipher and decoding to prove that Queen Elizabeth was secretly married to Lord Dudley and that she had two sons born in legal but officially not acknowledged wedlock. They were Robert, earl of Essex, known to history as the queen's favorite, and Francis Bacon, who should have succeeded her on the throne. The author has spent ten years of research coming to the historical conclusions which illumine her romance. She has found her material in the so often deciphered codes of Francis Bacon, in this case, a passage from "The Advancement of Learning."

Author Prefers Fiction Writing to Biographies

Pearl Buck Discusses Her Parents' Life Stories.

BY PEARL S. BUCK.

[Author of "The Good Earth," whose biography of her father, "Fighting Angel," is boxed with her biography of her mother, "The Exile," as the December choice of the Book of the Month club. The following was written especially for the Christmas Book Section.]

I am by nature a writer of fiction and not a biographer, and now, after having written two biographies, I have come to the conclusion that a writer is either novelist or biographer and seldom both, with equal pleasure to himself, at least.

As a matter of fact, "The Exile" was never meant to be a biography—that is, not exactly. It was written several years ago, not for publication, but because there were children in my family who had never seen my mother and would never feel, as I had, the strength and color of her glorious personality.

One hot summer I determined to occupy myself in putting down all I could remember about her, as honestly as I could, so that she would continue to live in our family as the generations grew. The memory of her burned as vividly in my mind as her reality. I wrote it all down with scarcely any changes to be made. Years later, for a reason which I knew she would consider enough, the book was published.

Then it became evident that another story must be told—the story of my father. It was not possible to put them in the same book. They were not, in fact, the same story. So "Fighting Angel" was written, not so much as a memory this time as a real biography.

And, having in one way or another, almost without knowing it, written two biographies, I put down for myself certain differences in the two kinds of writing.

The difference between the writing of fiction and biography is the difference between being free to roam in the hills and having to walk within a walled garden.

In fiction the writer may choose whatever characters he wills out of the world and his imagination, and he may make them what he likes in appearance, behavior, and character. All that is asked of him is that the various attributes and actions he chooses for a single character shall, taken together, present a unified whole so that, as the reader sees him, he will be alive and believable.

In other words, the creator is limited only by his own creation. Having chosen a certain creature, he must not allow him to go beyond the bounds of his own possible nature.

But in writing biography there are innumerable limitations. The writer is given his materials. He has to portray a creature of a known nature, who has lived in certain known ways in a known time. The writer, thus limited, has only the freedom of how he shall use and arrange these facts. Yet even here the honest biographer has no real freedom. He has no right, for instance, to suppress any facts whatever about the life he has chosen to portray, because all of those facts have significance.

It is, of course, obviously impossible for him to record every fact, for the sake of space alone. He must eliminate, but when he does, it must be only duplication which he avoids. He must choose every salient incident and speech, everything which reveals a new aspect of his subject's nature. Sometimes these facts seem contradictory, but he cannot suppress any of them, for in that very contradictoriness may lie still further truth.

Fiction is a painting; biography

SINCLAIR LEWIS PUT FIRST AS AUTHOR TO BE READ UNTIL 2000

Sinclair Lewis is the American author of the present day whose books are most likely to continue to be read in the year 2000, is the verdict of subscribers to The Colophon, a book collectors' quarterly, who were asked by its editors to vote on the question of literary survival. Only living American authors were included.

Next to Mr. Lewis, whose point score was 332, comes Willa Cather with a point score of 304. These are the only authors who exceed a 300 batting average.

Eugene O'Neill with 292 points and Edna St. Vincent Millay with 205 come next, followed by Robert Frost, 180; Theodore Dreiser, 149; James Truslow Adams, 115; George Santayana, 113; Stephen Vincent Benet, 91, and James Branch Cabell, 90.

English Choice.

"But Beauty Vanishes," by Richard Blaker [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50], was the September choice of the English Book society. It continues the story of "Here Lies a Most Beautiful Lady," British and American best seller.

Some of Best Classifies as Biography.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

MORE and more readers are interested in the life stories of men and women who have been able to open the oyster of the world. This year some of the most interesting books have been either biography or autobiography.

Both have been, it seems to me, a little honester, a little franker and yet less iconoclastic and less [except in rare cases] like George Moore in his babyhood yanking off all his clothes to the horror of his nurse—a gesture the brilliant Susan Mitchell in her brief biography of him declared he had never ceased to make.

"Doctor's Odyssey" Most Popular of Autobiographies.

The year's most popular autobiography has been Victor Heiser's An American Doctor's Odyssey [Norton, $3.50], which, if not literature, is rich, fulfilled life, a remarkably vivid success story not of one man's fame or fortune, but of whole peoples' conquest of death.

The year's two most important autobiographies were A Journal of a Tour of the Hebrides by James Boswell [Viking, $5], published for the first time in its entirety from the mss. believed forever lost, and the second [concluding] volume of the memoirs of Gen. de Caulaincourt, No Peace with Napoleon [Morrow, $3], also first published after years of oblivion.

Perhaps for years there have not been such rich literary autobiographies. Swinnerton, an Autobiography [Doubleday Doran, $2.75], by Frank Swinnerton contained delightful kindly reminiscences of the literary great, the best contemporary chapters on Arnold Bennett and H. G. Wells, as well as a good humored life story of the author of "Nocturne." The Autobiography of G. K. Chesterton [Sheed & Ward, $3], a sparkling record, was finished three months before his death. The Unexpected Years [Bobbs Merrill, $3.50], by Lawrence Housman, author of "Victoria Regina" and brother of the "Shropshire Lad," was sheer delight. Carl Van Doren's Three Worlds [Harpers, $3], was interested primarily in American life and secondarily in American literature.

Edgar Lee Masters' Across Spoon River [Farrar & Rinehart, $3.50], was

RICH MAN POOR MAN

"THE men of my earlier books were strong men facing a stable world. A world in which, for them at least, hard work, ambition, and the practice of these simple virtues were rewarded. But what of the red-headed grandson of the third generation of 'The Smiths,' who would be graduating from college in 1912? How would this young man face his world, a world of shifting loyalties, in which every faith, heritage, and hope would be challenged?

"I HAD to know and so I have done a novel about him in 'Rich Man Poor Man,' the story of Hendricks Smith, a normal young man, living, fighting, working, and loving in the years between 1912 and 1928." $2.50

Mystery Story Author Tells of Its Ingredients

Finds Reader Demand for Credible Characters.

BY MIGNON G. EBERHART.

IT is easy enough to say that certain things make or do not make a good mystery, for there are a number of pretty well marked conventions.

You can say, to begin with, that its first convention is a murder and its solution. The murder is a necessary convention; yet the fact of it is merely, even perfunctorily, noted. The edge of it, as a rule, is skirted rather cautiously, for whatever a mystery novel is, it is not and does not pretend to be a study in abnormal psychology. Its purpose is to entertain; it is candidly and honestly concerned with the romance of circumstances, the adventure of events.

As a matter of fact, this skirting the edge of reality offers one of the technical difficulties of the mystery story, for readers are demanding more and more credible characters and less and less purely mathematical patterns.

Thus a writer of mystery novels is faced at the outset with the problem of presenting characters who should be fairly credible and comprehensible in circumstances which are quite frankly incredible and incomprehensible. Almost any mystery plot, stripped of its writing, is simply preposterous; it is nothing at all [I'm very glad to say] which we are the least likely to encounter in real life.

So in a mystery the unfortunate writer is compelled to write around that preposterousness—to clothe and cloak his story with plausibility, to fashion as skilful a weave of circumstances as his typewriter will permit. The plot may be, indeed in a good mystery it must be, logical and well balanced and as carefully worked out upon the basis of the psychology of its characters as a piece of lace upon its pattern.

Of course, it is true that in fiction there are many plots which, stripped of writing, sound preposterous. But where general fiction may be almost anything it likes to be, a mystery all but makes a covenant with its readers to discover and maintain an air of truth, of factual record.

So we can say that a good mystery ought to have lively, credible characters who do and say the things those particular characters would do and say in given circumstances. Thus briefly, sound and logical psychology, which yet does not delve too deeply into impulse to crime, should be one quality of a good mystery.

No easy task, this combining of dissimilar ingredients. Like a French dressing, too much of anything spoils it, and a good mystery ought certainly to have a neatly and adroitly blended flavor.

A mystery story also must have a certain economy. There can't be much dithering about or idle speculation; there isn't space, for a mystery novel is packed. One sentence has to do the work of several paragraphs.

Naturally a mystery ought to have suspense. It ought to regard certain taboos, such as the one forbidding children to be employed in the plot. However, I can think of at least one novel and one play in which children took prominent rôles, both of which were highly successful.

The clews ought to be reasonable and above all things fair. Shock for shock's sake ought never to be tolerated, for a mystery is not simply a series of mechanical shocks.

I like a few red herrings as long as they are reasonable and inherent in the plot. I hate it when the culprit turns out to be: [a] the butler, [b] a Chinese, [c] the grandmother.

Conventions and formulæ! Yet when all is said and done there is still something indefinable. The core of the thing is not reached. I don't know and cannot define the inexplicable thing that actually makes a good mystery. But whatever it is we of the mystery-loving fraternity know when it is there—we know it by the authentic, happy prickle down our spines.

The Year's Best Mystery Stories

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

THE event of the year in the mystery field was the appearance after twenty odd years of a successor to "Trent's Last Case." E. C. Bentley has called this laggard Trent's Own Case [Knopf, $2], and it is a worthy successor to the earlier book, which established itself as a classic. The mystery fan with literary tastes is certain to like "Trent's Own Case," and it may awaken an interest among those purists who hitherto have scorned tales of murder and detection.

Running it a close second was Dorothy Sayers' Gaudy Night [Harcourt, Brace, $2.50], a book full of interest for the inquiring mind. It had an immense success in England and the more effete portions of the east.

The most original of the year's mystery offerings was File On Bolitho Blane [Morrow, $1.95], by Dennis Wheatley. It purports to be the record as compiled for police files, including reports, photographs, tangible clews and relevant documents, all neatly arranged in facsimile. The notion was J. G. Links' and the result will delight all who like something good and different.

For specialists whose appetite is whetted by rough stuff were Murder for What [Bobbs-Merrill, $2], and Murder Goes to College [Bobbs-Merrill, $2], by Kurt Steele, and The Doctor Died at Dusk [Morrow, $2], by Geoffrey Home. Hank Hyer does some clever detecting in the first two and a young Mr. Bishop breezes toughly through the latter. They are new sleuths who will bear watching. The Lady in the Morgue [Crime Club, $2], by Jonathon Latimer, is recommended in the same category, though the title has little of the Christmas spirit.

Two first books by young and spirited authors were Homicide at Harvard [Little Brown, $2], by Timothy Fuller, and Murder in Time [Green Circle, $2], by Lillian Day and Norbert Lederer. They were breezy and entertaining and displayed both skill and erudition. If among your acquaintances there is a slightly frivolous musician, give him the second and bestow the first upon a tolerant art connoisseur or intolerant Harvard graduate.

Two books by women struck a different note. Strange Houses [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50], by Cora Jarrett, was an extraordinary story of shifted souls, a psychological mystery full of interest and deft writing. The Wheel Spins [Harper, $2], by Ethel Lina White, was a breathless tale which fits into no category but which captures the attention as no other story I have read this year, literally a one sitting book. Give it to some one who needs to have his or her mind taken off troubles, for though it threatens dire events all comes right in the end.

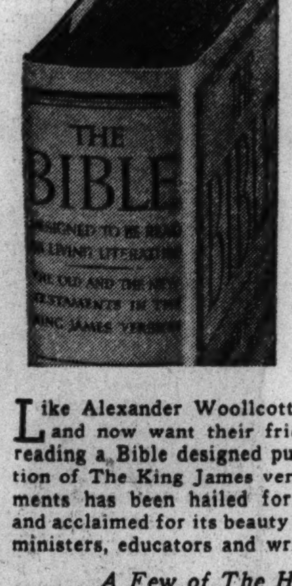
Two sea stories that any man who combines an interest in boats and in murder would like are The Tall Man [Putnam, $2], by Gavin Douglas, and The Loss of the Jane Vosper [Dodd Mead, $2], by Freeman Wills Crofts. They are neat and intelligent with a charm of presentation.

Specially recommended, too, are The Case of the Constant God [Crime Club, $2], by Rufus King, because it's a good story with a new twist, most glibly told; Flowers for the Judge [Doubleday, Doran, $2], by Margery Allingham, because she's a writer, too little known in America, who has wit, ingenuity and a very able pen; Mr. Pinkerton Has a Clew [Farrar & Rinehart, $2], by David Frome, because that little Mr. Pinkerton is getting a following second to none and in this last story outdoes himself, and Danger in the Dark [Doubleday, Doran, $2], by our own Mignon Eberhart, because she can pack more suspense into fewer pages than anybody else.

And if you want to give a big, fat book that will keep the recipient remembering you pleasantly for a long time, three anthologies exactly fill the bill. They are The Three Star Omnibus [Knopf, $2], including Trent's Last Case by E. C. Bentley, Green Ice by Raoul Whitfield, and The Middle Temple Murder by J. S. Fletcher; The Agatha Christie Omnibus [Dodd, Mead, $1.95], which reprints three Poirot mysteries, Murder of Roger Ackroyd [the story which established her reputation], Murder in the Calais Coach, and Thirteen at Table and a reprint, in one volume, of Strong Poison and Have His Carcase [Harcourt, Brace, $2], in which Dorothy Sayers presents Lord Peter Wimsey and Harriet Vane, who are now so justly famous.

"Rodeo" Guild Choice.

"Rodeo," by R. B. Cunninghame Graham [Doubleday-Doran, $2.50], a collection of his tales and sketches, is the alternate choice for December of the Literary Guild. The other choice is "I Found No Peace," by Webb Miller [Simon & Schuster, $3], the autobiography of a war correspondent.



Alexander Woollcott says:

"I have begun to distribute this book like a one-man Gideon Society"

Like Alexander Woollcott, many readers have discovered and now want their friends to share the experience of reading a Bible designed purely as literature. "A superb piece of book-making. It is as if the harsh lines of the scaffolding about a great cathedral were taken away, having served a good but temporary purpose; but the cathedral itself, built for the ages, stands in solitary majesty. "I have never seen any edition of The Bible which has a literary charm comparable to that which is found in Dr. Bates' work."—DR. SAMUEL McCREA CAVERT, General Secretary, Federal Council, Churches of Christ in America.

"A splendid contribution to the field of religious literature. Both in literature and the religious world this work should be welcomed most heartily."—FREDERIC FLEMING, Office of the Rector, Trinity Church, N. Y. C.

"I have spent the day with your new edition of The Bible Designed To Be Read As Living Literature. I didn't expect to spend the day, but I picked it up with my morning coffee, and now it is dinner time and I have just finished it. It is magnificent. I suppose I have read carefully every translation and edition of the Bible that has been published. It was part of my regular work. But this was a delight and a recreation. The Bible has long been the best seller; perhaps now it will be the best-read book in America."—CHARLES FRANCIS POTTER, Minister and author of "The Story of Religion"

"In every way this is one of the most beautiful books that has ever been published. It admirably fills the need of all those, whether they be religious or non-religious in attitude, who have been long waiting for an edition of The Bible that can be really read like other great books. For young people especially, this edition should prove most valuable. It is the perfect Christmas gift."—CORLISS LAMONT

School People Normal People, Says Prof. Linn

And It's the Normal That Interests Him.

BY JAMES WEBER LINN.

[Author of "Winds Over the Campus," a college novel with a central character who is all that "Mr. Chips" wasn't. The following was written especially for the Christmas Book Section.]

THE ordinary objection to novels concerned with college life, that is to say undergraduate life, is that undergraduates are too young and immature to be psychologically interesting. They are supposed to run to type, to be standarized products, without the depth either of thought or emotion that age and experience dig. Probably if the truth were known most people think that even the faculty are standardized in personality; pale casts of thought, about as interesting as death masks laid in rows on the shelves of a museum.

This objection is unfortunately common, and fortunately absurd. As for youth, its thoughts [see Longfellow's best poem] "are long, long thoughts," and though youth may be emotionally shallow it is emotionally tempestuous, and to the scientific observer a tempest in a teapot is just as exciting as a tempest over the ocean. As for the professors [and their wives] they are, believe it or not, as human as farmers, bankers, ditch diggers and murderers for hire.

A college or university community is as packed with universals as Wall street or Budapest or Leicester square. It is tragic, it is comic, it is romantic, it is realistic; in other words, it is normal. Sometimes one wonders if the idea of collecting thousands of young people in a mass, to be "educated" by hundreds of teachers in a mass, is indeed not the most romantic of all our ideas for the advancement of civilization. What is education but a perfectly beautiful dream, from which sharp pointed realities wake us constantly to anguish like tacks in a bed?

Many a freshman faces a new world as bravely, and as alone, as Robinson Crusoe faced his life on the island after shipwreck. Many a senior has gone through more violent changes in his philosophy of life in four years, than he will ever suffer from again. Will you have as your hero a dreamer of wonderful dreams about strange rays, who in preparation for a life in laboratories and on mountain peaks, bets on the market till he has won $100,000, puts it in trust, and turns peacefully to his ambitious chore of experimentation? Go to a university and study him. Will you have as your heroine a woman who danced with kings and gambled with princes, till she married and "did her own work" for twenty years, then divorced her husband to write a book on economic royalism? Go to a college and study her. Will you have in the background a black hearted crippled villain, or a cheerful harlot, with one child by her husband and three by other women's husbands? Go to the quadrangles and find her, still seducing at 45.

Of course, such abnormalities as these you will not find in my own novels of college life. It is the normal, not the extraordinary, that has always interested me. Only, the normality of the campus is on a higher level than the normality of the night club or even of the bayou shores round New Orleans. It seems to me richer, more provoking. Our "Ednas, Their Wives" are somehow more Edna-ish, our "fighting prophets" are more Smith than Sherman. Our philosophers were cotton pickers once, our deans were once thrown out of football games for slugging their opponents in the open. The conception of university people as habitually going about with their intellects improperly exposed has no foundation in fact. College and university folk grow up, in most cases, "in the round," and only really bad drawing can reduce them to flatness.

What the novelist seeks [the novelist as distinguished from the romancer] is to interpret our common life. If he writes of the clerk or the conductor [orchestra or street car] it is that in the clerk and the conductor the reader may see himself reflected. There, by the grace of God, or but for the grace of God, goes he. Now on the campus the commonness of life seems to me intensified. Interpret its thought and you interpret our most aspiring thought; vitalize its feeling and you vitalize our richest feeling.

Gunther Picks a Library on Europe Today

Lists Books That Help You Understand Issues.

BY JOHN GUNTHER.

[Author of "Inside Europe." This article was written especially for The Tribune Christmas Book Section in reply to the question, "What books should one own if he is interested in Europe today?"]

ANY ONE wanting to build up a library on contemporary European affairs should start with a good history and a good atlas. For these I would suggest J. H. Jackson's "The Post-War World" [it covers more than Europe but that's all to the good] and two little books by J. F. Horrabin, the miraculous illustrator who collaborated with H. G. Wells on the "Outline of History," called "An Atlas of Current Affairs" and an "Atlas of European History." The Wells outline, incidentally, is still the best single volume approach to European political affairs that I know.

Konrad Heiden's "History of National Socialism," which is a little out of date now but which remains an extremely vivid and readable introduction to the study of Nazi Germany. Another admirable background book on Germany is Edgar Ansel Mowrer's "Germany Puts the Clock Back," but it only goes up to the time that Hitler came to power.

"France in Ferment," by Alexander Werth, is a splendid book on contemporary France, but it was published about two years ago. There ought to be a new edition including material on the Front Populaire.

About Russia there have been hundreds of books. I would read Walter Duranty's "Duranty Reports Russia" before anything else. It is a fascinating example of a great journalist's prescience, political judgment, and skill with words.

The most authoritative book on Italy is Dr. Herman Finer's "Mussolini's Italy." It is a massive job and indispensable for the serious student. Two books which give plenty of insight on the Duce's inner life and character are Emil Ludwig's "Talks with Mussolini" and Mussolini's own "Autobiography." A vivid anti-Fascist book is George Seldes' "Sawdust Caesar."

The best modern book on Spain is probably Salvador Madariaga's "Spain" in the Modern World series but the revolution naturally has outdated it.

Two little books by Hamilton Fish Armstrong, "Europe Between Wars?" and "Hitler's Reich, the First Phase" are stimulating.

Mr. Armstrong is editor of the American quarterly Foreign Affairs, which is the best job of its kind in the world. No one seriously interested in contemporary Europe can afford to miss it. Periodicals, in fact, are almost as valuable as books in these fast moving days. For England, read the New Statesman and a queer little mimeographed sheet called the Week; in France the magazine Lu is a nice survey of general European opinion.

There are lots of books on England, but no single volume that gives you a really first rate and up to date survey. Picking and choosing among many I would suggest "Trevelyan's History" as background and then Siegfried's "Post-War England" [on the economic side], a collection of Baldwin's speeches called "On England," and John Strachey's "The Coming Struggle for Power."

A splendid and comparatively little known autobiography is "The Making of a State," by Thomas Masaryk, the president emeritus [if this isn't an improper way of referring to him] of Czechoslovakia.

The student should also have the Statesmen's Year Book for reference and perhaps G. D. H. Cole's "Intelligent Man's Guide to Europe Today."

Finally, all the newspaper autobiographies give fascinating glimpses of one part of Europe or another. Duranty's "I Write as I Please," Webb Miller's "I Found No Peace," John Whitaker's admirable "And Fear Came," Negley Farson's "Way of a Transgressor," and, of course, the original of the lot, Vincent [Jimmy] Sheean's "Personal History."

P. S.—A book has just this minute arrived on my desk and from previous knowledge I know that it is not to be missed, John Wheeler-Bennett's "Wooden Titan," the definitive biography of Hindenburg.

Booksellers Select a Gift for Every Type of Reader

EVERY one who reads this section knows that books are the ideal Christmas gift, intensely intimate yet dignifiedly impersonal; at once a mirror of the donor's taste and a compliment to the recipient's; delightful to receive and easy to buy.

The only rub is that books, like physical food, are meat to one man and poison to another, and unless you know both your man and the literary dish you are giving him, you would do well to put your patient in the hands of an expert literary physician, your favorite bookseller.

We have asked ten of the leading Chicago booksellers to recommend books for many different types and here are their recommendations. Those consulted were: The Argus Bookshop, the Boston Store, Brentano's, Carson Pirie Scott & Co., Concord Bookshop, Doubleday Doran, The Fair, Marshall Field & Co., Kroch's, and Werner's.

For the person who wants "the best novel of the year":

"Gone With the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell [Macmillan, $3], Boston Store, Brentano's, Carson's, Doubleday, The Fair, Field's, Kroch's.

"South Riding," by Winifred Holtby [Macmillan, $2.50], Concord.

"Heads and Tales," by Malvina Hoffman [Scribner's, $5], Concord, Kroch's.

"Inside Europe," by John Gunther [Harpers, $3.50], Argus.

For mother, if she reminds you of Whistler's:

"The Romance of Lloyd's," by Frank Worsley and Glyn Griffith [Hillman-Curl, $3], Field's.

an extremely frank confession of a life and many loves which was, it seemed to me, a little ill natured. Equally frank was The Autobiography of Middleton Murry [Messner, $3], and an almost cruel outpouring of the intimate story of his wife, the brilliant Katharine Mansfield. G. B. Stern seemed to me to go all soft in her Monogram [Macmillan, $2.50], but there were many readers who wanted to feed me arsenic for saying I thought so.

Mabel Dodge Luhan, whose intimate memories already have filled two amusing volumes, recorded the most interesting period of her life in Movers and Shakers [Harcourt, $5], the period of her famous salon at 25 5th avenue. In it she managed to be just as intimate but not so amusing as in the previous volumes.

Sarah N. Cleghorn's ardent zest for reform was lively in her Threescore [Smith & Haas, $3], but Joseph Freeman's An American Testament [Farrar & Rinehart, $3] was deeply and passionately the young radical's apologia. A little book which delighted me was The Diary of Selma Lagerlof [$2.50], which the future winner of the Nobel prize for literature kept during her fifteenth year. Shadows Like Myself [Scribners, $3.75], by Countess Clara Longworth de Chambrun was written with dignity and reserve.

Sensational Life Stories by Women.

The year offered a crop of autobiographies by women which were sensational and much funnier than their writers suspected. Father Struck It Rich [Little, Brown, $3], by Evalyn Walsh McLean, The Countess from Iowa [Putnams, $3], and I'd Do It Again [Coward McCann, $3], by Aimee Crocker were a trio of guffaws. It's possible—I haven't read it—that Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt's Without Prejudice [Dutton, $3], belongs with them. They show what ladies with plenty of money can do on the loose.

What other plutocrats did do one found amusingly recorded in Life Was Like That [Houghton Mifflin, $2.75], by Mary Doyle, who was a cigar counter girl in the old Waldorf and the Plaza, and later a sensational newspaper reporter.

Two spectacular and popular autobiographies of adventurous newspaper men were added to the lists this year, The Way of a Transgressor [Harcourt, $3], by Negley Farson, and I Found No Peace [Simon & Schuster, $3], by Webb Miller. Wells Drury's An Editor on the Comstock Lode [Farrar & Rinehart, $3], was colorful Americana.

The further adventures of the famous "British Agent," Bruce Lockhart, have just come off the press in Return to Malaya [Putnams, $3]. It is bound to be popular. And speaking of adventure, an almost illiterate colored woman, Juanita Harrison, got herself around the world by her own efforts and wrote a fascinating, if misspelled, autobiographical odyssey in My Great Wide Beautiful World [Macmillan, $2.50].

Malvina Hoffman, sculptress of the famous Hall of Man at the Field museum, told how those bronzes came into being and recorded vividly her own life in Heads and Tales [Scribners, $5]. Ralph Adams Cram told of his own zestful life in My Life in Architecture [Little Brown, $3.50]. Finally The Diary of Vaslav Nijinsky [Simon & Schuster, $2.50], which the writer kept during his incarceration in Switzerland, has been published with some of the drawings he made while he was there.

Another Russian dancer, Igor Schwezoff, told of his adventures in a mad world which was supposed to be sane in Russian Somersault [Harpers, $3.50]. Stravinsky [Simon & Schuster, $3] contained, among much else, interesting material about the Russian ballet from the point of view of its most famous musical contributor.

Count von Bernstorff's Memoirs [Random, $3.50] supplied the picture of a famous diplomatic life not covered by "My Three Years in America."

There were three delightful autobiographies from England: Ethel Smyth's further memoirs supplementing her memorable "Impressions that Remained," As Time Went On [Longmans, $4]; Portrait of a Family [Stokes, $3] [her very amusing family], by Eleanor Farjeon, the talented granddaughter of Joseph Jefferson; and Antony, a Record of Youth [Scribners, $3], which was a small masterpiece.

FIRST ESSAYS

Willa Cather, whose first volume of essays, "Not Under Forty," has just been published.

Two About Audubon Popular in Biographies.

There has not been any spectacularly popular biography this year, although Pearl S. Buck's life of her father, Fighting Angel [Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50], just published, is sure to become one. The nearest to a popular success was Constance Rourke's Audubon [Harcourt, $3], a biography written with such simplicity that it is also recommended by authorities on teen age books. Audubon was one of the men whom Donald Culross Peattie chronicled in his Green Laurels [Simon & Schuster, $3.75], which was labeled a panorama of the lives of the great naturalists, but the pages of which were so filled with the joys of knowing nature intimately that biography became essay writing in its most delightful sense.

I found Edith Sitwell's Victoria of England [Houghton Mifflin, $3] amusingly written, if not great biography, but respect it as one must, as a job of research. I thought V. Sackville-West's Saint Joan of Arc [Doubleday-Doran, $3] little literary pleasure. A small book, Hiram Percy Maxim's A Genius in the Family [Harper's, $2], I thought delicious, and Fairfax Downey's biography of Charles Dana Gibson, Portrait of an Era [Scribners, $3.50], filled with Gibson drawings, as much fun as rummaging through a crowded attic on a rainy afternoon.

There were a few fine biographies of literary figures—the official [and excellent] Life of George Moore [Macmillan, $5], by Joseph Hone; a vivifying life of George Eliot [Macmillan, $4], by Blanche Colton Williams; a conventional detailed life of Thomas De Quincy [Oxford, $5], by Horace A. Eaton; an inspiriting Life of Pascal [Reynal & Hitchcock, $3.50], by Morris Bishop; a vivid little book about the adolescent years of D. H. Lawrence [Knight, $2.50], by E. T., who was the original of Miriam in "Sons and Lovers." Vincent O'Sullivan, who knew Oscar Wilde in his years in Paris after his release from prison, wrote of him intimately in Aspects of Wilde [Holt, $2.50].

Allan Nevins with Hamilton Fish [Dodd Mead, $5] illumined the Grant administration, and a new Grant shone in the pages of General Grant's Last Stand [Scribners, $3.75], by Horace Green, which contained many newly discovered notes written to his doctors during his last illness.

Historical Characters Given Vivid Treatment.

Thomas Jefferson and his influence were splendidly interpreted by James Truslow Adams in The Living Jefferson [Scribners, $3], and his political ideals as well as the political maneuvers of his group by Claude G. Bowers in Jefferson in Power [Houghton Mifflin, $3.75]. These books might be classified as history.

Historical characters were the subjects of other excellent biographies. Charles Duff told [again] The Truth About Columbus [Random, $3]. D. Erskine Muir wrote an accurate and concise Machiavelli [Dutton, $3]. Milton Waldman told of a sober mother, Catherine de' Medici, and her vicious brood in Biography of a Family [Houghton Mifflin, $3.75]. John Slocombe wrote satisfyingly about the fabulous Don John of Austria [Houghton Mifflin, $3.50], and Crane Brinton did a sapient Frenchman a little more than justice in The Lives of Talleyrand [Norton, $3].

Other political figures were celebrated this year. Sarah Gertrude Millin published both volumes of her great Life of General Smuts [Little Brown, Vol. I, $3.75; Vol. II, $3.50], which is the authorized biography. E. F. Benson's Kaiser William and the English Relations [Longmans, $3.50] was as entertaining as an historical novel. John W. Wheeler-Bennett wrote an illuminating biography of Germany's next ruler, Hindenburg, in Wooden Titan [Morrow, $5]; Thomas Rourke the dramatic life story of Gomez: The Tyrant of the Andes [Morrow, $3.50], and Daniele Vare, long Italian minister to China, a vivid and delightful life of The Last Empress [Doubleday-Doran, $3].

Individualists were chronicled in Theodore Parker [Little Brown, $3], by Henry Steel Commager; in The Life and Convictions of William Sydney Thayer, Physician [Oxford, $2.50], by Edith Gittings Reid, and in The Tragedy of Nijinsky [McGraw Hill, $3] a little oversentimentally but touchingly by his closest friend, Anatole Bourman, with the help of O. Lyman.

Self-Help Volumes for Intelligent People.

Three of the most popular books of nonfiction of the year have been what might be called trick books, books which are almost unique. Two of them are sort of self-help volumes for intelligent, not dumb, readers, books which do really "help."

Dorothea Brande's Wake Up and Live [Simon & Schuster, $1.75] was a true prod and guide to a more abundant life, and Marjorie Hillis pleasantly but assuringly told how to Live Alone and Like It [Bobbs Merrill, $1.50].

Around the World in Eleven Years [Stokes, $2] by Patience, Richard, and John Abbe is a natural which has brought chuckles to its readers and far-flung fame and real fortune to the three Abbe children.

Another "trick" book has just been published, Portraits and Self-Portraits [Houghton Mifflin, $2.75] of literary lights. The sketches were made from life by Georges Schreiber and autographed by their subjects, who also wrote for the book their own short biographies.

Among the books of nonfiction difficult to classify are some of the season's major joys as well as the year's major books. One of the most important of our day is the scholarly Dictionary of American English [University of Chicago Press] edited by Sir William Craigie and James R. Hulbert, the first volume of which was published in September. H. L. Mencken entirely rewrote The American Language [Knopf, $5] and proved that the serious study of words can be thoroughly jolly.

Gertrude Stein's esoteric The Geographical History of American, or the Relation of Human Nature to the Human Mind [Random, $2.50] was partially clarified by an enthusiastic introduction by Thornton Wilder. The famous and intelligent English Webbs, Sidney and Beatrice, gave us incomparably the best book on Soviet Communism [Scribners, 2 vols., $5]. H. G. Wells' The Anatomy of Frustration [Macmillan, $2] was almost an abstract of that genius pamphleteer's thoughts on politics and society.

Robert Maynard Hutchins, young iconoclast, collected his lectures on education in No Friendly Voice [University of Chicago Press, $2] and The Higher Learning in America [Yale University Press, $2] and again proved himself a constructive educator. And Henry Seidel Canby wrote with his usual charm and vigor reminiscences of a bygone period in the American college, Alma Mater [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50].

Other Interesting Non-Fiction Books.

C. Le Roy Baldridge made the innumerable sketches and paintings which make of Half the World Is Isfahan [Oxford University Press, $5] one of the year's beautiful books. His wife, Caroline Singer, chronicled the year's leisurely journey through Persia which he illustrated. Carl Carmer almost duplicated the popularity of his "Stars Fell on Alabama" with Listen for a Lonesome Drum [Farrar & Rinehart, $3], a chronicle of the social life and customs of upper New York state.

Herbert Asbury gave us a lusty sensational picture of the underworld of New Orleans in The French Quarter [Knopf, $3.50]. Charles Caldwell Dobie wrote a delightful book of history, legend and observation of San Francisco's Chinatown [Appleton, $5] which is beautifully illustrated by E. H. Suydam. Henry James Forman told the surprising Story of Prophecy [Farrar & Rinehart, $3]. Ishbel Ross did a scholarly and interesting history of women in newspaper work in Ladies of the Press [Harpers, $3.75].

Lewis Mumford, Paul Rosenfeld, and Alfred Kreymborg edited The New Caravan [Norton, $3.95] of the work of promising young writers. Maurice Maeterlinck wrote fascinatingly of Pigeons and Spiders [Norton, $1.75]. Paul de Kruif's Why Keep Them Alive [Harcourt, $3] had the scientific interest of his famous "Microbe Hunters" plus a fiery plea for the right to health for all children.

My favorite books in this class were Gustav Eckstein's Canary [Harpers, $2.50] and Elizabeth's All the Dogs of My Life [Doubleday Doran, $2] both minor classics but major delights; "Canary," the record of bird lives strangely human as observed over a period of twelve years by a research scientist, and Elizabeth's delicious notes on the life of a delicious novelist.

IT HAPPENS

Sinclair Lewis as seen by Georges Schreiber, who has just published a unique volume, "Portraits and Self-Portraits" of famous authors, for which he drew pictures and the authors wrote them.

Collections of Letters Make Interesting Reading.

Almost the best biographies were really the autobiographies which are written in letters. The Life and Letters of John Galsworthy [Scribners, $5], edited by H. V. Marrot, was a book not only of major importance but of major interest to any one interested in contemporary English literature. The letters of Anne Douglas Sedgwick, edited by her husband, Basil de Selincourt, sketched delicately A Portrait in Letters [Houghton Mifflin, $2.75]. The Letters of Mrs. Henry Adams [Little Brown, $5], just published, edited by Ward Thoron, illumine a great man and a period. So do The Letters and Journal of Brand Whitlock [Appleton, 2 vols., $10], edited by Allan Nevins, even though they are dull. And the recently unearthed Letters to an Artist [Viking, $3.50], written by Vincent Van Gogh between 1881 and 1885, add further source material to an amazing career.

Year's Output Adds to Shelves on History.

One of the most amusing and novel but sound records of American life we have had was Oscar Wilde Discovers America [Harcourt, $4.50], by Lloyd Lewis and Henry Justin Smith, a panoramic picture of America in 1888, the year Wilde toured the country. It is filled with minute details of the life and thought of the day recorded brilliantly.

An important analysis of The Eve of 1914 [Knopf, $4.50] came to us in translation from the German of Theodor Wolff, who declared that Germany was defeated by the blindness of her own feudally organized society.

Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of state, set down for the Council of Foreign Relations his recollections and observations on The Far Eastern Crisis [Harpers, $3.75], a highly moot subject. Ernest Sutherland Bates wrote a not superb but pretty good history in The Story of Congress [Harpers, $3], and W. E. Woodward has just published a popular, unconventional rewriting of our nation's life story in A New American History [Farrar & Rinehart, $4].

The Glittering Century [Scribners, $3.50] revivified by Phillips Russell was the 18th. Ferdinand Schevill gave us the result of twenty years' study in a comprehensive History of Florence [Harcourt, $5], Jules Bertaut, an outline of Paris, 1870-1935 [Appleton, $3.50], and Hilaire Belloc recorded the history of Syria and Palestine from the days of Abraham to the end of the Crusades in The Battleground [Lippincott, $4].

Books on War Come From Important Leaders.

With the imminence of war in Europe, thoughtful readers have been interested in books about the world war. The most popular of them was From a Surgeon's Journal, 1915-'18 [Little Brown, $5], by Harvey Cushing, the intensely and vividly interesting diary at the front by America's most famous brain surgeon. Another war diary, slight but unforgettable, was that of a young American nurse, I Saw Them Die [Harcourt, $1.50], by Shirley Millard.

Two American generals told new truths and denied untruths about the war, Gen. J. G. Harbord, Pershing's first chief of staf, in The American Army in France [Little Brown, $5] which I declared was worth waiting 17 years for, and Gen. R. L. Bullard in a pungent frank little volume, American Soldiers Also Fought [Longmans, $1]. Newton D. Baker, Wilson's secretary of war, told Why We Went to War [Harpers, $1.50]. Commander Holloway Frost worked ever since the battle until his recent death on The Battle of Jutland [U. S. Naval institute, $4.50].

From England is coming this week the fifth volume of the important War Memoirs of David Lloyd George [Little Brown], Haig [Doubleday-Doran, $4], a somewhat dull life, by Duff Cooper, but important because it is based on Haig's private diaries, and an excellent brief history, The War in Outline [Random, $2], by Liddell Hart, famous strategist.

[Next week Miss Butcher will write a survey of the year's most important fiction.]

is a photograph. Fiction is creation; biography is arrangement. For the creative writer, biography is far more difficult than fiction, because he feels the limitations of a character already definitly created. The task in biography is the task of discerning the shape of the character in all the known facts concerning him.

There is one similarity between the writing of fiction and biography. Character must emerge clearly in each. The process is exactly opposite. In fiction the writer sees and feels his character first and then chooses the incidents and action to portray him; in biography he must study the incidents and action and from them find his character. He cannot honestly introduce anything new in action or speech.

In my own two biographies, for instance, every incident is authentic, every speech what I have heard said, or was told on reliable evidence was said. But nearly all I saw and heard myself, and remembered, having the curse and the blessing of a photographic memory.

I do not think I shall ever write other biographies. I like the freedom of creative writing. I like choosing and making my own characters. But I am glad to have put into some sort of permanence, nevertheless, these two beloved characters of my life.

The Material Proves Prime Theme of Year

included Aldous Huxley's much discussed "Eyeglass in Gaza," which some have found strong meat, some unreadable, and some the revelation of a new humanity in our leading intellectual novelist. But perhaps the most important event in the fiction-publishing year has been the production of James Joyce's banned book, "Ulysses," in a limited edition.

Earlier in the year Winifred Holtby's "South Riding" attracted much attention; Ralph Bates' "The Olive Field" impressed again those readers who think Mr. Bates an important novelist who has still to reach his full maturity; L. A. G. Strong's "The Last Enemy" showed with what taste and power he can treat a theme ostensibly small out with its roots in philosophy. These novels were all tales or discussions of present day life couched in modern forms.

So, either frankly, as in Sir Philip Gibbs' "Cities of Refuge," or "The Lovely Girl," by Alec Brown, or "Honorable Estate," by Vera Brittain, or by a challenge to comparison with the past, as in Miss Townsend Warner's "Summer Will Show" and perhaps Mr. Masefield's "Eggs and Baker," were others of the year's novels.

Mr. Priestley brought readers to direct contemplation of current problems in "They Walked in the City," which was the best selling novel of 1936. But although these books were remarkable as well as topical, the novel in general remained true to the past. Chief among its successes were Mr. Charles Morgan's "Sparkenbroke," Miss Rebecca West's "The Thinking Reed," Francis Brett Young's "Far Forest," Mr. Walpole's "A Prayer for My Son," Gerald Bullett's "The Snare of the Fowler," Warwick Deeping's "No Hero This," Miss Dorothy Sayers' "Gaudy Night," Miss Angela Thirkell's "August Folly," and Miss Sheila Kaye-Smith's "Rose Deepdene."

A Marine Parade of Famous Ships Is the Thing for Saint Nick

A gorgeous marine parade of salt water craft sails before the reader of "Forty Famous Ships," by Henry B. Culver, illustrated by Gordon Grant [Doubleday-Doran, $7.50]. Eight of the artist's magnificent conceptions of ships are in full color—all of them are splendid studies of interesting vessels. From St. Paul's ship of Biblical days down to the modern Queen Mary goes this historical blue water pageant.

It's a marvelous companion volume to the same author's "Book of Old Ships" and should make a stunning holiday gift for any one who loves the sea.

Mrs. Fairbank Carries Smiths Into 1912 Heat

T. R. a Fateful Figure to the Book's Hero.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Rich Man, Poor Man," by Janet Ayer Fairbank. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.] Published yesterday.

THE same round, full, leisurely atmosphere that made of Janet Ayer Fairbank's "The Smiths" a novel that was remembered with a glow fills the pages of her chronicle of another generation of Smiths, and of one Smith in particular, and reasserts this fellow Chicagoan's place in the high art of picturing contemporary American life.

Hendricks Cortlandt Smith Jr. is a boy just out of college as the book opens in the historic year—politically—of 1912. To him Theodore Roosevelt is a sort of Archangel Michael—with a special halo presented to him by his, and Hennie's, alma mater, Harvard. For T. R.'s sake Hennie publicly defies his standpat Republican father, president of a great Chicago bank, and the whole future pattern of his life is cut.

The first part of the long narrative is concerned with the birth of the Bull Moose party, that passionate political crusade which has had so little popular fictional treatment. Mrs. Fairbank brings it to life through the eyes of young "Hennie" Smith, who was the youngest of that zestful youthful band. The progressive party leaders all appear in her pages undisguisedly touched off with a descriptive phrase.

When the excitements of the campaign are over Hendricks is not only a married man but knows he is to be a father, and life—serious life—begins for him, not at 40, but at 22. How he faced life through immediate pre-war days as a newspaper reporter, went to war with the first ones over, lived through his allotted days at the front, and returned home to a broken marriage, and what he made of that tells a story less of conscious courage than of an instinct for rightness and generosity, the instinct of what used to be called the "aristocratic tradition."

But the story of Hendricks is only part of the many peopled tale. It is also the story of Barbara, his wife, born crusader who fights more passionately for women's suffrage than she fights for her own happiness, of the paternal Smiths, the father, a hidebound conventional rich man; the mother, meek; of Annette, who married three times in four years and knew suffering and ecstasy; of a phalanx of relatives, but most delightfully of Mrs. Peter Smith, in her seventies, and the sort of vigorous, independent, outspoken, kindly, generous grandmother that few young people ever have and every one wants. She is perhaps unconsciously on the author's part drawn from life—a picture of the author herself some thirty years from now!

"Rich Man, Poor Man" starts with an emphasis on politics, shifts to an emphasis on the war's molding of character, and ends with an emphasis on individual human adjustment, but it is consistently the record of the coming of age of an American man in the days between 1912 and 1929.

"Rich Man, Poor Man," which is concerned only with the first half of the title in a temporal and with the second in a spiritual sense, ends ironically with an epilogue in which the hero in the spring of 1929 feels vaguely discontented because "he could see nothing ahead of him but endless ease and uneventful security."

T. E. Lawrence Book Priced at $500,000 Arouses Officialdom

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—(AP)—British concern over Lawrence of Arabia's new book, priced at $500,000 a copy, to keep it from the general public until 1950, was evidenced today by word that the British foreign office had received a report on it by trans-Atlantic telephone.

The volume is critical of conditions in the British royal air force when T. E. Lawrence was a rookie in that service fourteen years ago.

His will provides that the book, entitled "The Mint," be kept from general circulation until 1950. An American concern bought the publishing rights, however, and in order to copyright the manuscript printed ten copies, priced them at $500,000 each to keep them from the public and deposited two of them at the library of congress.

There the two cheaply bound volumes are kept behind double locked steel doors. Library officials say that reporters and others with a "legitimate purpose" may see them, but their text cannot be quoted.

OUT OF A YEAR IN PERSIA

One of the plates in "Half the World Is Isfahan," a collaboration by Caroline Singer, who writes of a year in Persia, and her husband, Cyrus Le Roy Baldridge, who records in sketches and paintings that colorful journey. "Half the World Is Isfahan" is one of the year's most beautiful books and is published by the Oxford University Press.

Plays in Book Form Few and Some Are Good

The published drama does not seem this year to have loomed large on the literary horizon. Bernard Shaw gave us "Three New Plays" [Dodd-Mead, $2.50], but they were far from his best. One smart critic said they showed he was getting old, but was, like Merlin, a wizard still.

Burns Mantle's excellent annual, "The Best Plays 1935-'36" [Dodd-Mead, $3], presented his choice of the year's best in the customary outline of plot and quotation of the dramatic climaxes. George Jean Nathan gave us with characteristic wit and crackle his criticisms of "The Theater of the Moment" [Knopf, $2.50]. Curtis Canfield offered us the "Plays of Changing Ireland" [Macmillan, $3.50], and "The Theater Guild Anthology" [Random, $3.50], provided us with the complete texts of 14 of the best and most popular of the Guild plays.

There were published some of the current plays on Broadway, among them nine of Noel Coward's one act plays which are produced in groups of threes, "Tonight at Eight" [Doubleday-Doran, $2.75]; "That Was Balzac" [Random, $2], by George Middleton, which dramatically catches the spirit of the great French novelist; and "Night Must Fall" [Random, $2], the psychological killer play by Emlyn Williams which was imported after a run of a year and seven months in London. "Stage Door" [Doubleday-Doran], the Edna Ferber-George Kaufman hit, is promised for December publication. Singular Adventures Told Well by Webb Waldron

"Uncharted: The Tale of an Island and a Ship," by Webb Waldron [Greystone Press, $2.50], is a haunting, poignant, brilliantly written narrative of strange adventures on a sleepy Atlantic island off the coast of North Africa. There the few passengers on a Yankee tramp steamer are drawn into a series of fantastic incidents, humorous and tragic. Waldron has done some splendid character delineation and has skilfully woven his picturesque figures into an odd, unusual, and at times thrilling novel.

Nonfiction Is Acclaimed for Juvenile Books

Wide Choice Is Offered This Year.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

[Director of Children's Work for Branches of the Chicago Public Library.]

AMONG the outstanding titles for young people this year, nonfiction carries off its share of the honors, for it has been some time since this field has been so well represented with such a diversity of titles of exceptional value.

Heading the list one would unhesitatingly place Amabel Williams-Ellis' "Story of English Life" [Coward-McCann, $3.75], Ethel and Thomas Robinson's "Houses in America" [Viking, $3.00], and Constance Rourke's "Audubon" [Harcourt, $3.00].

In the "Story of English Life" readers of any age will find as stimulating and as fascinating an account of the history of England as has yet been written. As in most recent histories for young people emphasis is placed on the country's development from a social, cultural and economic viewpoint and the result is a panoramic survey of human progress rarely equaled for clarity of presentation in books of this type for any group of readers.

It is a dramatic story of the winning of the heritage of freedom, the dream of many peoples through the ages, and of the final realization of that dream. As an incomparable telling of England's story, marked with literary distinction it sets a high standard for other books in this field.

The other titles mentioned, "Houses in America" and "Audubon," are also additions of real worth to the young people's shelves. The former is an account of the houses in America, describing the various types, their history and building. Numerous pencil drawings and floor plans supplement the text and the whole makes as attractive and delightful a book as the writer has seen in many a day. Mr. Robinson is an eminent Boston architect, but this book testifies that he is also a story teller of ability and charm.

In "Audubon" Miss Rourke has given us the life story of the great naturalist based upon a comprehensive understanding and appreciation. Appearing as an adult book, it was almost immediately added to the young people's list as a noteworthy addition to the biographies of interest and appeal. Delightful illustrations in black and white and colored reproductions of the original Audubon plates make the book an exceedingly attractive one.

For the young reader with a hobby "Photography Today," by D. A. Spencer [Oxford, $1.50]; "Television," by Sydney A. Moseley and Herbert McKay [Oxford, $2.00], and Alfred Morgan's "Aquarium Book for Boys and Girls" [Scribners, $2.00] offer good informational material clearly presented.

For the younger children [grades 4-7] there is Marion Lowndes' "Trafic" [Doubleday, $1], a photographic picture book telling the story of the trafic that passes by the filling station on the main road and making some good suggestions as to rules for safety. John J. Floherty's "Police" [Doubleday, $2.00] presents a subject of real interest to most young readers and has as usual with the Floherty books excellent photographic illustrations. Henry Lent's "Tugboat" [Macmillan, $1.75] is another of this type telling the story of the tugboat in New York harbor and the men who run it.

Another book in which the illustrations play a large part is Raymond Ditmars' "Book of Living Reptiles" [Lippincott, $2.00]. This is a companion book to the author's earlier volumes on animals and is a suitable one for the young reader interested in natural history. Reptiles of each continent are presented and pictorial maps amplify the text.

MIDLAND STEEL STRIKE ENDED; PAY IS BOOSTED

Employes Will Return to Jobs on Monday.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—The widely felt strike at the Midland Steel Products company plant here ended late today when workers voted to accept a peace proposal which included wage adjustments and abolition of the piece work system. The men will return to their jobs Monday after a week's absence.

Although the strike at the automobile frame manufacturing concern directly involved only 1,900 workers, it was said to have curtailed about 5,000 assembly units in automobile plants and to have made 72,000 workers idle because of suspension of its deliveries.

Accepted at Massmeeting.

The settlement terms were voted upon this afternoon at a massmeeting of company employés held following the evacuation of the plant by several hundred "sit down" strikers who had remained there since the trouble began. When the "sitters" joined the other employés who had remained outside they voted unanimously to accept the agreement.

The peace terms, which union leaders called a "90 per cent victory" for employés, provide for recognition of the union, a 45 hour week, time and a half pay for overtime and holidays, an increase of 10 cents an hour on the base rate of pay, and a 10 per cent increase on piece work until it is eliminated, which is to be done as rapidly as possible.

Auto Plants Hampered.

Chief among the far reaching curtailment effects of the Midland strike was the cessation of assembly line activities of four divisions of the Chrysler corporation and the Lincoln-Zephyr division of the Ford Motor company, all of which obtained frames from the Midland company.

Suspension of work at the Midland shops was felt more quickly than the recent strike in the Bendix plant at South Bend, because none of the motor car companies stocked as heavy inventories of steel frames as they did of brake and starter assemblies, carburetor and other smaller parts supplied by Bendix.

The series of strikes retarding the motor car industry has entered the picture at a time when virtually every automobile company has orders on its books waranting capacity operations. Companies have laid out schedules calling for an output volume this month of well above the 500,000 mark, the heaviest December program in the industry's history.

Commenting on the labor situation in that field, the publication Automotive Industries said today:

"There is some basis for the belief that demands will be made on other plants by the union with the possibility of further interruptions to production. If important sources or the car makers themselves are affected, the current shortage of automobiles caused by the heavy initial demand for new models could well extend through the winter and prevent the building up of adequate stocks for spring demand."

Glass Strike Continues.

Ottawa, Ill., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Striking workmen went on with their card playing beside silent machines in the Libbey-Owens-Ford company plant here today while officials of the glassmaking concern and union leaders conducted telegraphic word battles.

At Toledo, O., tonight a union committee met with David Goodwillie, executive vice president of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company, in an attempt to solve the tieup of production at the plant here.

Libbey-Owens-Ford union members in Toledo gave the committee a vote of confidence which August Scholle, union president, said he interpreted to mean general approval of the principles on which present negotiations are being conducted.

Glen W. McCabe, president of the glass workers federation, wired the company to enter into negotiations with the union for a new contract as well as to consider settlement of the strike of 1,300 workmen here. The company's present contract with the union expires Dec. 16.

Strike on Third Day.

Production at the Ottawa plant, a major source of employment in this city of 15,000, was halted Wednesday morning by Leland Beard, president of the Ottawa union local, who claimed he was acting on orders from McCabe.

Union leaders said the strike was called because a $4,000,000 glass order of the Chrysler Motor corporation had been transferred to the Ottawa concern from the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company to defeat the strike in Pittsburgh.

DELAYS $3,000,000 BOND BECAUSE OF SWEITZER CASE

Approval by the county board of a $3,000,000 surety bond presented by Horace G. Lindheimer, who was elected county treasurer last Nov. 3 and will take office on Monday, was delayed yesterday until this morning when Assistant State's Attorney William J. Tuohy objected to one of the eighteen bonding companies. This concern is the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company, which bonded Robert M. Sweitzer when he was county clerk and is now co-defendant with him in the county's suit to collect the $500,000 shortage on Sweitzer's accounts.

"The state's attorney's office won't approve this $3,000,000 bond as the schedule shows the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company is carrying $150,000 of it," Tuohy said. "This is the only company in the county's history that denies liability."

Lindheimer yesterday named James C. Denvir, 29th ward Democratic leader, as assistant treasurer, and Thomas D. Nash, former county treasurer, as his attorney.

Dock Workers Prepare to Go Back to Jobs in France, U. S.

New York, Dec. 4.—(AP)—A threat of international complications in the seamen's strike subsided tonight as dock workers in French and United States ports prepared to call off their retaliatory stoppage of work.

While the strike of "rank and file" sailors continued unabated, Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's association, said the loading and unloading of French ships here would be resumed as soon as he was assured that French dock workers had lifted their work embargo against American vessels.

Henri Morin de Linclays, resident director of the French line, announced receipt of a cablegram from his Paris office saying French longshoremen would resume servicing American ships tomorrow.

Liner Taking Cargo Home.

The French longshoremen had refused to work cargo on American ships because of the seamen's strike, and Ryan's organization, which has not recognized the walkout, promptly retaliated against French ships.

As a result, the French liner Champlain headed back toward Europe last night with her cargo of Christmas freight for this country still in her hold.

With the international dispute now apparently settled, Ryan said he would turn his efforts toward helping to heal the breach in the International Seamen's union which led to the strike.

Stalemate in Pacific Tieup.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Maritime peace negotiations here stopped again today. Scheduled conversations between coastwise shippers and the radio telegraphers' union failed to materialize when employers reported they were unable to obtain a "full representation" for the conference.

Seattle docks bustled with activity as teamster union members hauled large consignments of goods to the water front for loading aboard government operated ships soon to sail for Alaska.

Plans for government operation of emergency ships to Hawaii remained in abeyance pending the return here of Col. O. F. Ohlson, interior department representative now supervising the dispatching of Alaska vessels.

Prison Jute Supply Low.

With the strike in its thirty-sixth day, the California prison board called a meeting tomorrow to act regarding a threatened shortage of tropical jute in San Quentin prison, where 2,000 convicts manufacture grain sacks.

On the gulf coast hopes for peace in the separate strike of seamen and ships' officers also diminished when it was announced deck and engineering officers had voted to enter no agreement with employers until they reached an agreement with rank and file seamen.

Rank and file members of the International Seamen's union at Galveston, Tex., announced they would form a new union to negotiate with ship owners. Their present officers oppose the strike.

Violence at Houston.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 4.—(AP)—One man was shot, probably fatally, and three others were beaten today in a water front riot that flared up when striking seamen occupied their old headquarters, the International Seamen's union hall.

Close Plant in Niles, Mich.

Niles, Mich., Dec. 4.—(AP)—The walkout of an undetermined number of its 600 workers closed the plant of the Kawneer company, manufacturers of metal fixtures, here today.

Courthouse Is Picketed.

Reading, Pa., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Two men picketed the main entrance to the Berks county courthouse today in protest against the imprisonment of 140 "lie down" pickets sentenced to thirty days in jail after their arrest in front of the Berkshire knitting mills.

U. OF WISCONSIN ADDS INFORMAL ART TO COURSE

Madison, Wis., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Informal art instruction was added today to the curriculum of the University of Wisconsin with the installation of John Steuart Curry as artist in residence.

Curry, 39 years old and a native of Dunavant, Kas., took over one of the most unusual commissions ever awarded an artist in the United States. He has been appointed for five years, at an annual salary of $4,000, to direct a movement to produce a more general appreciation of art among rural residents of Wisconsin.

Curry said he intends to do murals and paintings of current Wisconsin agricultural topics, particularly soil erosion. He will tour the state next summer to familiarize himself with its geography and customs.

"I will attend art appreciation classes and discuss informally such works as have particular interest and significance in my search for creative realism," he said.

Curry said he would give instruction to students who show an aptitude in painting, and will select those of recognized ability to assist him in producing murals in the campus studio.

Curry is widely known for his works, "The Tornado," "Baptism in Kansas," "Hogs Killing Rattlesnakes," and "Roadmaster's Camp," all of which are based on rural scenes. Several years ago he went on tour with a circus to get "color" for his paintings.

REPORT BIRTH OF 9 BOYS, 1 GIRL TO CHINESE WOMAN

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, Dec. 5.—[Saturday.]—Birth of nine boys and one girl to the wife of a Chinese farmer near Peiping, China, was announced today in a dispatch to the newspaper Nichi Nichi. The newspaper said six of the boys died at birth, but that the remaining four babies are all healthy.

The dispatch appeared under the headline: "Mrs. Sanger will be ashamed."

FIREMAN SLAIN BY HIS CAPTAIN, WHO KILLS SELF

Officer Reputed Member of Black Legion.

Pontiac, Mich., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Fire Captain William H. Bradburn, recently named by a grand jury as a member of the Black Legion, shot and killed a fellow fireman, Donald H. Slusher, and then took his own life in a fire station today. A note in Bradburn's handwriting said "he talked too much."

Acting Police Chief Frank Nelson termed the deaths murder and suicide after the note was found on Bradburn's desk. Fire Chief Frank W. Kuhn, to whom the note was addressed, said he didn't know whether Bradburn referred to Slusher. The latter's name had not been connected with the Black Legion investigation.

Find Bodies on Floor.

Firemen on the first floor of the station said they heard no quarreling preceding the shooting. Hearing the gun reports on the second floor, they ran upstairs and found the bodies sprawled on the floor. The pistol used was found near Capt. Bradburn's body.

Bradburn was one of 19 members of the Pontiac police and fire departments named in a recent grand jury report as members of the notorious band of night riders. No charges had been placed against him, however. Police Chief Charles McMillan, one of those named, recently was removed from office.

Five Get Life Sentences.

Meanwhile, in Detroit, five alleged Black Legion members, recently convicted of the murder of Silas Coleman, 42, colored war veteran, were given mandatory sentences of life imprisonment by Recorder's Judge Donald Van Zile.

Ervin D. Lee and Harvey Davis, already under life sentences for the Black Legion killing of Charles A. Poole last May, was given second sentences of life terms in Marquette branch prison.

John Bannerman, a third defendant under life sentence in the Poole case, was resentenced to Southern Michigan prison. Charles Rouse and James Roy Lorance, the other defendants, were sent to the same prison.

Tells of "Target Practice."

According to the testimony of Dayton Dean, confessed executioner serving a life sentence in the Poole murder, Coleman was shot to death after Davis ordered him to "get some Negro" and bring him to a Black Legion week-end party "for a little target practice."

In another Detroit court three men were held for trial by Common Pleas Judge Ned H. Smith on charges of conspiring in the Black Legion to kill Arthur Kingsley, suburban Highland Park publisher.

The three are Arthur Lupp, named as Michigan commander of the hooded band of terrorists; Charles Baker, and Frank Howard.

ROBBED BY FAKE COLLECTOR.

A gunman posing as an insurance collector took $22 yesterday in the home of Mrs. Emily May, 7748 South Ashland avenue.

ARREST FOURTH IN SWINDLE OF CINCINNATI MAN

$30,000 Lost in Scheme to Beat Races.

New York, Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Charles E. Robinson, a distinguished looking 64 year old Englishman, handsomely turned out in Bond street clothes, spats, a walking stick, a monocle, and a long cigaret holder, with an expensive automobile at his disposal, was arrested today in Tenafly, N. J., on a charge of being a fugitive from justice under the federal stolen property act.

With three men arrested in New York City recently, Robinson is charged with having swindled Frederick C. Tuttle, vice president and treasurer of the Peters Cartridge company of Cincinnati, O., out of $30,000 in a "confidence game" at Charleston, S. C., last May.

Recall London Swindle.

The department of justice began an inquiry to learn whether the prisoner was the same Charles E. Robinson who figured in the sensational "Mr. A." blackmailing case in London and Paris in 1920. "Mr. A." was Rajah Sir Hari Singh, young nephew of the Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir, one of the richest of Indian potentates.

Caught in a Paris hotel with Mrs. Maud Robinson, attractive wife of Charles E. Robinson, a London bookmaker, "Mr. A." paid over $1,300,000 in two equal checks to a gang of four men and two women to avoid being named in a divorce suit, but stopped payment on the second check when he realized he had been swindled.

Four years later Robinson sued the Midland Bank of London, charging that the first $750,000 check had been paid into the bank to his account, and that the bank had paid out wrongfully $625,000 of it to some unauthorized person. He lost the suit on the ground that the money had been stolen from "Mr. A." and therefore belonged to him. Robinson and his wife were found not guilty of participating in the blackmail conspiracy.

Race Track Game Used.

Tuttle was swindled by means of the old "race track game." In this the victim is "tipped off" to a "sure thing" without posting any money. After the horse wins he is told the bookmaker insists that he produce the money to cover his bet to show that he could have paid if he had lost.

It is also alleged that the swindlers "paid off" Tuttle in what purported to be $30,000 in bonds on a Canadian gold mine, but which turned out to be counterfeit.

Attacker of Young Woman Sentenced to 99 Year Term

Henry Davis, colored, 30 years old, 3011 Indiana avenue, was sentenced to ninety-nine years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Benjamin Epstein in the Criminal court after he was found guilty of rape in a bench trial. The evidence showed that he attacked Mrs. Anna Rankin, 21 years old, 3703 South Halsted street, after he had assaulted and knocked unconscious her husband, Searl, 33 years old. The attack occurred in a basement at 2935 Federal street, where Davis dragged Mrs. Rankin after striking her husband with a brick.

RECORD BREAKING LIVE STOCK SHOW TO CLOSE TODAY

Attendance Expected to Exceed 446,000.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

The world's greatest farm festival will close tonight when the gates are locked at the end of the last act of the thirty-seventh annual International Live Stock exposition. The show exceeds all others in exhibits and sales, according to exposition officials. The attendance this year in the International amphitheater at 42d and Halsted streets, is expected to be the largest in the history of the exposition, which was first held in 1900.

Approximately 20,000 children, coming chiefly from city and suburban schools, were guests of the exposition management yesterday. They were accompanied by their teachers and parents and admitted free up to 1 p. m.

The attendance for the day, including the children, was estimated at more than 65,000, bringing the total for this year's exposition to 384,000 up to last night. With one more day to go show officials expected the grand total for the week to be above last year's figure which reached 446,000 during the eight days.

Champions Still on Display.

All of the prize winning animals will be wearing their ribbons for the benefit of today's visitors. They will be kept in stalls and pens in the amphitheater, giving visitors a last chance to see them before they are taken back home, sold to new owners, or sent to slaughter.

Whiz Bang, the grand champion steer of the junior live stock feeding contest, was sold to the highest bidder, bringing $1.05 a pound or a total of $1,291.50. He was bought by the National Tea company. The champion, a purebred Aberdeen-Angus, was owned and exhibited by Robert Vaughan of Chenoa, Ill. The sale price of Whiz Bang is five cents a pound higher than that brought by the 1936 grand champion steer in the junior contest.

Hartland Domino 151st, the reserve grand champion steer in the junior contest, brought 25 cents a pound, going to the Chez Paree club of Chicago. He brought $276.25. The reserve titleholder is a purebred Hereford, owned and exhibited by Gerard Gallagher of Vail, Ia.

Pays 65 Cents a Pound for Beef.

In the sale of individuals on the hoof in the hog division the grand champion barrow, owned by Pennsylvania State college, was bought by the Brevoort hotel for 70 cents a pound.

The grand champion pen of barrows brought 15 cents a pound. They were owned by the University of Minnesota and were sold to Breeder's Gazette, Spencer, Ind.

ELECTRICITY NOW MAN OF ALL WORK TO ORCHARDISTS

Electricity can be employed to meet every problem except cultivation in the management of farm orchards in the middle west. Extensive use of electric power will reduce costs in the operation of orchards. These statements were made yesterday by Prof. Truman E. Hienton of Purdue university in an address before the closing session of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at the Stevens hotel.

"Electric power can be employed to drive the water pumps, spray the plants, wash the fruit, size the fruit, operate the cider press, operate refrigeration plants in the orchards, and, to a limited extent, for irrigation," Prof. Hienton said. "Electric heaters offer some assistance in removing spray residue, and electric lighting is attracting attention to its possibility in insect control.

"To give you an idea of the extent to which electricity is already a factor in orchard operation, one 260 acre Indiana orchard used 74,442 kilowatt hours in 1935. Another apple orchard of about the same size consumed more than 61,000 kilowatt hours the first year after it obtained electric service."

One of the innovations in orchard operation in which electricity plays a vital part, according to Prof. Hienton, is the installation of refrigeration plants in the orchards.

Porter Fox Is Re-elected Head of Chicago Farmers

Three new directors also were elected. They are Chauncey McCormick, George O. Fairweather, assistant business manager and assistant treasurer of the University of Chicago, and L. J. Drake, president of the Union Tank Car company.

Wife Amends Her Suit for Divorce.

Henry R. Gross automobile accessory manufacturer, took the witness stand before Judge John C. Lewe in Superior court yesterday and denied the charges of his wife, Elina Orr Gross, former show girl, that he had treated her cruelly.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Gross was granted leave to amend her divorce bill to eliminate the allegations of habitual drinking, leaving cruelty as the sole ground on which she seeks the decree. Gross, who lives at the Racquet club, 1361 North Dearborn street, is suing for divorce on a cross bill, charging desertion.

Under the questioning of his attorney, Robert Cantwell Jr., Gross pictured himself as a better than ordinary husband who treated his wife well at all times. He admitted that he drank occasionally, but denied with emphasis that he had ever been intoxicated.

Tells of Plea to Wife.

Gross declared that he visited his wife, who has been living in Columbus, O., last Feb. 5, about two weeks after their separation, and asked her to return to him.

"She told me," Gross said, "that she wanted her independence—to be free to do what she wanted with no questions asked. She said that she wanted to take trips, go out evenings, and be perfectly independent. She wanted me to give her half my fortune.

"I told her I couldn't take those conditions."

Q.—[by Cantwell.]—Did you want her back? A.—I wanted her back as my wife very much.

Q.—Were you ever intimate with a girl in the Minuet club [943 Rush street]? A.—No, and no other place.

Q.—Did you ever tell your wife you had lived with a woman in Milwaukee and that she was going to have a baby? A.—No.

Q.—Did you provide well for your wife? A.—I bought her everything in the world.

Q.—Did you ever accuse your wife of unchastity? A.—No.

Denies Acts of Cruelty.

Attorney Cantwell then took up the two acts of cruelty alleged by Mrs. Gross. She had previously testified that Gross pinched her and twisted her arms in Havana, Cuba, in the winter of 1931, and had slapped her in their home in November, 1933.

Q.—What are the facts about the Havana incident? A.—We had a friendly scuffle. When she became the aggressor it amused me and I laughed. I caught her arms and held her.

Q.—And how about the Chicago incident? A.—My wife came home from the Paramount club [16 East Huron street] and said that a man at the bar had made indecent proposals to her. I asked her what she wanted me to do about it. She said "You ought to spank me." I tapped her a couple of times like this [slapping his knee lightly] and we both laughed.

Direct questioning of Gross will be resumed today.

FREE SYPHILIS TESTS PLANNED BY STATE HERE

Dr. Jirka Acts to Rent Laboratory.

The first step toward the establishment of a permanent state laboratory and hospital in Chicago dedicated to the examination for and treatment of syphilis was announced yesterday by Dr. Frank Jirka, director of the state department of public health.

"Preliminary negotiations have been started for the rental by the state of the administration building of the Jewish Charities of Chicago at 1800 Fillmore street," Dr. Jirka said. "It is our plan to use this building as a laboratory where free blood tests for syphilis will be given. We also hope to establish a training school for fourth year students at the University of Illinois medical colleges, which is only a block from the building we want to rent, so that these students can receive instruction in how to test for and treat syphilis."

Ready to Rent Building.

Samuel Goldsmith, executive director of the Jewish Charities, said his organization would like to move its administrative offices into the loop and would be glad to rent the building to the state for a reasonable sum. The building, which was given to the Jewish charities by the late Julius Rosenwald in 1914, is a three story structure containing about 100 small offices. It would be ideal for laboratory and clinic purposes, Dr. Jirka said.

"Renting of this building is only a step in our campaign against syphilis," Dr. Jirka said. "Eventually we hope to build a modern laboratory and hospital in Chicago devoted to the study and treatment of syphilis. But we must start some place. When you consider that fully 20 per cent of the heart disease and 15 per cent of the blindness in Illinois is caused by syphilis you can see the need for action."

Plan for Hospital Treatments.

A. L. Bowen, director of the state department of public welfare, announced yesterday that the department is considering providing treatment for indigent syphilitics in state hospitals.

"Syphilis accounts for about 18 per cent of the insanity in our state institutions," he said. "It also accounts for many of the behavior problems we have in our prisons and in our other institutions. Every syphilitic is potentially an insane person."

Examination of prostitutes brought into Morals court continued yesterday. Judge Jay A. Schiller, who began this campaign, is ending his assignment in Morals court today. He will be succeeded Monday by Judge Joseph B. Hermes.

"I am heartily in favor of these examinations," Judge Hermes said, "and they will continue while I am sitting in Morals court."

Robbers in Stolen Car Hold Up 5 in Fast Order

Two young bandits in a stolen car committed five robberies in quick succession on the south side last night. They first entered the tire store at 7821 South Halsted street and took $115 from Milo Meyer, the manager. A few minutes later they stole $14 from Mrs. Amanda Morrell and her daughter Myrtle of 6131 University avenue, at Fairfield avenue and 63d street. In order they then stole $4 from Peter Tobias, 5318 South Maplewood avenue, $ from Edward Kross, 1044 West 63d street, and $6 from Edgar Brown, 1736 West 64th street.

Thompson, owner of a tavern at 3130 West Harrison street, as one of two men who robbed him of $25 on Nov. 13.

Warren avenue police last night arrested Pasquale Tufano, 46 years old, an ex-convict, and his nephew, Michael Tufano, 18, both of 2117 Warren boulevard, for questioning in connection with the passing of numerous bogus pay roll checks. Police said that the checks, in amounts less than $25, were made out against the Chicago Great Western railroad and passed on west side tavern owners.

The railroad said 100 such checks had been passed. Both Tufanos denied passing them. The elder Tufano, police said, served a short term in the Missouri prison at Jefferson City in 1916.

HARRY MITCHELL, CHIEF CARPENTER OF TRIBUNE, DIES

Harry T. Mitchell, 55 years old, chief carpenter for the Chicago Tribune Building corporation, an employé of THE TRIBUNE since 1908, died Thursday night of a heart attack apparently resulting from excitement and over-exertion during a minor automobile accident in Jackson park.

Mitchell, accompanied by two friends, was driving from work to his home at 7003 Normal boulevard. In the center drive the auto skidded into a low concrete post and chain around the Liberty statue. Mitchell said he felt ill and was taken to the office of Dr. Charles Drueck at 1132 East 49th street, where he died.

Mitchell is survived by two brothers, William M. and James A. of Lakewood, O., and two sisters, Mrs. Grace Winter of Burnly, Lancashire, and Mrs. Jane Pengelley of Bickleigh, South Devon, both in England. ATTORNEY ASKS HEARING OF SUIT AGAINST INSULLS

Attorney Millard R. Powers appeared in the Superior court yesterday to ask an immediate hearing in a suit filed last September that seeks to enforce an agreement which he says exists between him and Samuel Insull Sr., Samuel Insull Jr., the Commonwealth Edison company, and the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois. The case was scheduled for a hearing next Monday by Judge Oscar F. Nelson. It comes upon the heels of a $4,000 settlement made by Insull Sr. on Thursday with Mme. Helene Coyimzoglu of Athens for assistance given to him during his sojourn there in 1933 and 1934.

Powers, who is 87 years old, is said to be the oldest practicing lawyer in Illinois. His suit asks restoration of an income of $250 a month for life he alleges the defendants promised him in 1931 for dropping a suit to prevent the Insulls and the two companies from causing losses of $2,500,000 to Powers by competing with the Illinois Light and Power company which Powers founded. The suit charges that the monthly payments were discontinued after 18 months.

In an answer filed last month the Insulls held that the monthly payments were merely part of a retainer fee, which was terminable at any time by the defendants.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Geese Prefer the Green.

December 4, 1936.

THE Canada geese on the Tribune farm insist on green food in the fields as long as winter snows do not cover the grass. The other day we noticed that the whole flock, which ordinarily swims around in the big pond, was gathered together on the hill east of the pond.

They were walking around, talking among themselves as they fed on the grass that was left in the meadow. The boys had put out some grain along the edge of the pond, but it was being ignored by the geese.

The ponds are almost completely frozen over now, so the honkers probably feel they might as well be on dry land. The wild ducks continue to keep part of the pond open, but the hole is getting smaller every day, and with a little more cold weather we're afraid this open water will freeze over and force the remaining ducks to move south. When we were there the other day there were only about 30 mallards around the pond. Two weeks ago there were about 200 ducks there.

Ice Nearly Ready for Skating

Half Moon pond and Round pond are completely frozen and deserted. We tested the ice the other day. It was thick enough to hold considerable weight and as smooth as glass. Some of the farm families are planning an ice skating party for next week.

The geese aren't the only farm residents that have changed locations in the last few days. Carl put the sheep into one of the cornfields which had been picked, giving them a chance to clean up on whatever grain was left after the huskers went through the field.

Fowls Brave Cold Breezes

In spite of cold weather some of the barnyard fowls like to get off the ground and thus be exposed to plenty of breezy air. The other day we noticed that one of the muscovy ducks was perched on top of a fence post in the barnyard, looking down on the rest of the fowl. She was at least 10 feet above them.

At the same time a couple of the turkey hens were surveying the barnyard scene from a stack of soy beans which had recently been placed there.

The black swans continue to dominate their white "cousin swans" on the section of the big pond which has been set aside for their use. We noticed the other day that the three black swans were swimming around in the little patch of water which they had kept open in their winter quarters, while the white swans were staying out of the water.

The graceful black birds want to dominate everything. When they get into the water they refuse to let the white swans come in.

EXPERTS CLASH ON BILL FOR AUTO DRIVER'S LICENSE

Disagree on Tests for New Applicants.

BY HAL FOUST.

Safety experts bumped heads yesterday in their recommendations for a driver's license bill to be introduced at the regular session of the general assembly next month.

Sidney Williams, a director of the national safety council, described as a "gold brick" any driver's license bill that does not require an examination of new drivers. Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, defended the omission of such a provision in the draft of a bill his club has mailed to all legislators.

"The examination we advocate will apply only to new drivers," said Mr. Williams. "Every one now driving will get a license without examination unless he has a bad record of accidents or violations.

Includes Test on Road.

"The examination will take about 20 minutes and will be given in the county where the applicant lives. It includes a quiz and a road test. In other states, 25 to 30 fail the first examination but after further study and practice, under a temporary learner's permit, most of them pass a later test.

"The examination is not intended to weed out all reckless drivers; the suspension and revocation feature takes care of that. The tests do assure society that new drivers will know something about the laws and something about handling a car, which many of them do not know now.

"The strongest argument is the experience of other states. Every state that has been getting satisfactory results from a license law has the examination feature. Several states have tried a liecense law without examination and not one of them has gotten lasting results. No state having the examination feature has ever repealed it and no responsible official or organization in any such state has ever advocated such repeal."

Hayes Says Tests Are Useless.

"For ten years," said Mr. Hayes of the motor club, "the Illinois house of representatives has disapproved of any examination provision in a drivers' license bill. The legislators have contended that an examination is a useless annoyance to the motorists and an unnecessary expense to the state.

"Accidents are caused by indifference, selfishness, drunkenness, and hostile attitudes while driving. While taking the tests the careless driver will be careful and the drunken driver will be sober. No inquiry or test has been devised that will disclose a motorist's future conduct or misconduct.

"The main benefits of the license law lie in the power to revoke the driving privilege of repeated offenders or of serious offenders such as the drunken driver or the motorist who flees the scene of an accident he has caused. The threat of revocation is a deterrent."

Provides Ready Bond.

With or without the examination feature, a benefit that would be appreciated by automobile owners is that the driver's license card can serve as a bail bond, to be taken up by the arresting officer and to be returned in court. This would protect drivers arrested for some misdemeanor or inadvertence from being held in a police station or in jail until a friend arrives with cash bail.

M'GURN WIDOW IS FREED OF AUTO DEATH CHARGES

A charge of manslaughter against Mrs. Louise Rolfe Gebardi, widow of Vincent Gebardi [Machine Gun Jack McGurn], was nol prossed yesterday by Judge Edward S. Scheffler in Felony court on the recommendation of Assistant State's Attorney Thomas Dillon. The charge was placed after Vincent Zamiara, 54 years old, 3047 West 54th place, was struck and killed Oct. 4 by an automobile owned by Mrs. Gebardi. At the time it was reported she was driving the car. Later, a companion, Miss Mildred McGarry, 20 years old, of Jacksonville, Ill., said she had been at the wheel. Miss McGarry was freed of reckless driving.

Wife's Overdose of Drug Accident, Says Phil Davis

Phil Davis, orchestra leader, yesterday attributed to an accident the overdose of sleeping tablets taken Wednesday by his wife, Mrs. Marjorie Kerr Davis, 29 years old, a radio magazine writer. Davis arrived here on Thursday and spent yesterday at his wife's side in Henrotin hospital. Mrs. Davis, who lives at the Park Dearborn hotel, still was unconscious and in a critical condition last night.

MOVES FOR RELEASE OF GEN. DENHARDT IN KENTUCKY SLAYING

Shelbyville, Ky., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Counsel for Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, who is held in the Jefferson county jail at Louisville on a charge of having slain Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, filed a motion for a writ of habeas corpus with Circuit Judge Charles C. Marshall today to obtain the general's release.

Judge Marshall set a hearing on the motion at New Castle for 10 a. m. Wednesday. He issued a writ for Jailer Martin J. Connors to show cause why he is holding the general.

Denhardt, former lieutenant governor and adjutant general of Kentucky, has been in jail without bond since Nov. 20. At that time Henry County Judge A. S. Morgan at New Castle ordered him held for the January grand jury on a charge of fatally shooting Mrs. Taylor, his 40 year old fiancée and comely La Grange widow.

Henry County Attorney James Thomas, who took an active part in the commonwealth's fight to have Denhardt held without bond, declined to say what plan the state would follow at the habeas corpus hearing.

TELLS CONTRAST OF HYSTERIA AND FAKED INJURIES

Cash Only Cure for 2d Class—Stone.

The difference between hysteria and faking serious injury after an accident was demonstrated yesterday by Dr. T. T. Stone, attendant neurologist at Cook County hospital. He spoke at the annual mid-winter meetink of the Central States Society of Industrial Medicine and Surgery. The session was held in the surgical amphitheater of the county hospital.

One person may be injured at work and in several days be back on duty, normal and well, while another may have the same injury but develop paralytic symptoms, Dr. Stone said. In the latter case he is either a malingerer or a victim of hysteria.

Faker Cured by Cash.

"In hysteria, the patient really thinks he is ill, while the malingerer plans his reactions in the hope of collecting cash," said Dr. Stone.

"The hysterical person always likes examinations, and thinks he has every symptom you describe. The faker resents being examined."

Hysterical patients improve on treatment, at least obtaining relief, while the only cure for malingerers is a cash payment, Dr. Stone declared.

Dr. Stone did his own demonstrating. Throwing his arms and legs about in illustration of the "tic" movement, a convulsive twitching of the muscles, he explained that this is always functional; not traceable to organic disease.

Gives Some Examples.

"Ask such a man to shave, and his movements cease," said Dr. Stone. "He shaves, then begins throwing himself about." Persons, who after an injury, walk with a bizarre running or hopping motion are victims of hysteria, as are those who declare they cannot walk, yet move their legs freely in bed, he asserted.

Mental disturbances following head injuries are rare, Dr. Francis J. Gerty, superintendent of the Cook County Psychopathic hospital, told the assembled doctors. In the Psychopathic hospital, which averages 6,000 admissions a year, Dr. Gerty said, the last 1,000 cases includes only four "traumatic psychoses," or cases due to head injury. Of these, one was committed to a state institution, two discharged as not insane, and the other was found to be suffering from the effects of a neglected skull fracture.

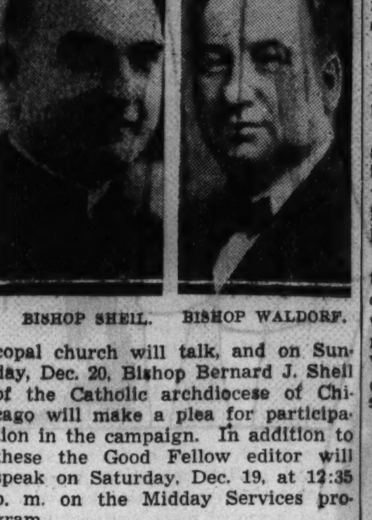
MAYOR AND TWO BISHOPS WILL AID GOOD FELLOWS

Radio Talks to Play Part in Christmas Drive.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

Radio will play a big part in this year's Good Fellow campaign. On successive Sundays, between now and Christmas, three speakers well known to Chicagoans will give five minute talks on station W-G-N in behalf of the movement to insure Christmas happiness in homes of the needy.

The first of these talks will be given tomorrow night at 6:25 o'clock. Mayor Kelly will be the speaker. On the following Sunday Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf of the Methodist Episcopal church will talk, and on Sunday, Dec. 20, Bishop Bernard J. Sheil of the Catholic archdiocese of Chicago will make a plea for participation in the campaign. In addition to these the Good Fellow editor will speak on Saturday, Dec. 19, at 12:35 p. m. on the Midday Services program.



BISHOP SHEIL. BISHOP WALDORF.

"Camera Lines" to Aid.

Through the courtesy of Charles P Hughes, radio star and producer of the "Behind the Camera Lines sketch, which is heard each Friday night at 9:30 o'clock over W-G-N, mention of the Good Fellow work is being made by its announcer, Bob Elson.

It is hoped that as a result of these radio talks hundreds of Chicagoans will become Good Fellows and take baskets of food, candy, and toys to unfortunate families, and that others living in Chicagoland will do likewise in their home communities. Just how far flung is the good of THE TRIBUNE's annual Good Fellow campaign is not known. It is a fact, though, that many newspapers throughout America conduct similar campaigns, and there are scores of Good Fellow clubs.

For those living in Chicago who wish to join the Good Fellow club the bureau will remain open on these Sunday evenings and listeners are just as close to it as their telephones. The number is Superior 0100. At your request this bureau will send the names and addresses of deserving, needy families.

How to Finance Baskets.

One way of financing Good Fellow baskets was told in a letter to headquarters yesterday. It reads:

"For many years it has been a problem for me to lay aside enough money for my Good Fellow basket. But this year I'm financing it easily and I believe I'll have more than ever for some poor family. I keep strict account of every penny I am spending for Christmas and for every dollar I spend I lay aside 10 cents for the Good Fellow basket. The things I am going to give my relatives and friends this Christmas will cost about $50. I am taking 10 per cent of that for my Good Fellow basket—that will be $5, and my! what a lot of fun I am having planning for it."

There's a real suggestion. And it is certain our own Christmas enjoyment will be greater if we know that through our efforts some needy family is remembered, too.

Won't you be a Good Fellow?

DRY LAW REPEAL IS 3 YEARS OLD THIS AFTERNOON

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—(AP)—The third anniversary of prohibition repeal tomorrow will find friends and foes of John Barleycorn battling with some of their old time vigor.

J. M. Doran, spokesman for the distilling industry, hailed the anniversary tonight as the birthday of "a new national conscience on the liquor question."

"Prohibition repeal gave jobs to 1,000,000," he said, "brought moderation in drinking, practically eliminated racketeering groups of the dry era."

Countered Edward B. Dunford, attorney for the Anti-Saloon league, which hopes to see state and national prohibition restored.

"Such statistics as are available show that consumption of alcoholic beverages under the pressure of advertising and social convention has increased while bootlegging is prevalent and crime increases."

Strictly speaking, repeal will be three years old at exactly 5:35 p. m., eastern standard time, tomorrow. It was at that hour that a telegraph messenger delivered to the office of William Phillips, then undersecretary of state, word of Utah's ratification.

ORDERS RECOUNT OF DRY VICTORY IN 5TH WARD AREA

County Judge Jarecki yesterday ordered a recount of the wet-dry ballots in the old 61st precinct of the 5th ward, where the drys won by a vote of 375 to 371 in the Nov. 3 referendum. The old precinct comprises the present 61st and the 100th precincts of the ward. The liquor vote was on the basis of precincts as they existed in 1932.

Judge Jarecki denied petitions asking invalidations of the vote in the 57th precinct of the 5th ward and the 51st precinct of the 6th ward, both of which voted dry. The wet forces contended that the vote was illegal because the referendum was not held in connection with a city election, and because those who signed the petition for the liquor referendum were not yet qualified voters under the new permanent registration system.

Similar petitions are pending for three other precincts that voted dry. In these and the precinct for which the recount was ordered, liquor sales will continue pending decisions. In the 29 other precincts that voted dry last month, liquor sales became illegal yesterday.

FINDING THE RIGHT SCHOOL

● The right school can give your child a head start in the race for success in life. To select the right school you will need all the information you can get. Children Should Give as Well as Receive Gifts

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Is your child's sole lament at Christmas time: "I want, I want, I want"?

Of course children adore gifts. Of course they dream about the things they'd love to have and hope to get—the things they wouldn't ask for or expect the rest of the year.

Christmas is a sort of magical time when Santa Claus comes down from the sparkling north [if you're very little] and mysteriously fulfills your dearest wish, or when, if you're older, with almost equal magic, pocketbooks open, and money seems to flow from somewhere to purchase what you've yearned for so long.

Of course it's natural for children to do as the two children did in the funny old fashioned little song, as they lay in bed talking about Santa:

"I wonder what he's going to give me,"
Said Johnny to laughing Mag;
"A horse and a buggy I 'spose it will be,
And a handful of gold in a bag."

[Do you know the rest of that quaint little ditty?]

Of course it's right for children to be showered with gifts. Christmas and childhood—what a combination! There are few thrills and delights in life that will ever equal it.

But if the whole burden of the children's song at Christmas time is: "I want, I want, I want," they're losing something precious, and you are making a serious mistake. Christmas hasn't its full meaning for them unless they also do some giving, unless their love for others flowers into visible, material expression in the form of gifts. [I want to caution you right here to let the children give their gifts to whom they wish. Avoid the kind of duty-giving that's common among many adults.]

And children get such joy out of giving, especially when they can buy with their own savings. They love the planning, the solemn conferences with you, the secrets and whisperings, the delicious terror that some one will find a list or overhear Christmas plottings or open a hidden package by mistake. Why, Christmas isn't truly Christmas, in spirit or in fun, unless you give. We don't expect the same emotions from children that we do from adults, but their Christmas won't be complete unless giving has had some part in it.

Fashionable New Slip Style

WOMAN'S AND MISS' PRINCESS SLIP.

Undergarments, especially slips, are exceedingly important factors in wardrobe chic these days. While pastel shades and lace trimming still find favor for their daintiness, many women prefer slips in dark shades or bright colors to accent their winter frocks. The slip presented in today's pattern fits perfectly into this scheme of things. It may be made in traditional pastels, or may blossom out in crisp winter colors.

You will notice that the garment is fitted snugly in the bustline, waist, and hips, and flares generously below the knee. It has a low back, too, for your more formal gowns. It is a good idea to match the shade of the slip to the color of the frock with which it is to be worn. A particularly dashing scheme is to make the slip of a bright or light shade to accent a dark frock. For example, a bright green or red slip is smart beneath a black frock, and old rose goes well with a frock in the new grape shade. Yellow is, of course, appropriate with brown, and bright blue or green with gray. The ideas are infinite.

Satin, dull crêpe, and washable taffeta are especially suitable fabrics, whether you choose to make the slip in a pastel shade or in some other color.

Style No. 3147 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material.

Here's Closeup of a Big Scene in Parnell Film

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—When John M. Stahl directs such a picture as "Parnell" his hands, never still, express his every thought and suggestion. Piercing eyes under bushy brows, photographic in their intensity, miss nothing. He removes a battered gray hat with characteristic gesture, then jams it down more firmly on a head almost snow white.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's stage 15, the world's largest, has been transformed into a crowded, colorful, noisy street—two blocks long—leading up to a pier. At the pier the crack White Star liner of a half century ago, the S. S. Baltic, is docked. It is a big scene in the dramatic love story of Charles Stewart Parnell, "Ireland's Uncrowned King," and the lovely Katie O'Shea. The setting recreates a section of New York's waterfront on the blizzard blown March day in 1880 when Parnell sailed for Queenstown after enlisting American aid and money for the starving and suffering poor of Ireland.

From one of three cameras Cameraman Karl Freund rides a huge boom, perched on a dinky seat. The snow covered buildings and dock are decorated with emerald green bunting and shamrocks. A thousand chattering Irishmen whose brogue leaves no doubt as to their origin, mill about the stage. Six assistant directors press through the mob giving final instructions. Property men hand out flags.

At the far end of the stage a parade is forming. First in line is a band, followed by a detachment of New York policemen, all Irish.

From a chart Assistant Director Red Golden organizes groups of men carrying banners identifying themselves as the Hack Drivers' Benevolent union, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, St. Patrick's Mutual Temperance society, and others.

Clark is a fashion plate of fifty years ago. He wears button shoes, "comfortable, too," says Gable; striped trousers, a fancy figured vest and an Ascot tie.

The extras need no encouragement. They go wild cheering each Irish society as it passes. There isn't a non-Hibernian face in front of the camera.

Canadians Win Day's Honors in Bridge Tourney

Canadian players won the honors yesterday in the match point contract team of four championship contest held in connection with the tenth annual fall tournament of the American Bridge league at the Stevens hotel this week. The match point team of four title was won by Mrs. W. M. Anderson, R. E. Sheardown, and D. G. Farquharson of Toronto, Ont., Canada, and Mrs. J. A. Faulkner of Belleville, Ont.

The Chicago team of Arthur Glatt, Miss Laura Heiner, John R. Smith, and Albert Weiss of the Chicago Beach Bridge club placed second in the contest, beaten by only one-half match point. The winners scored 38 match points to a total of 37½ scored by the Chicago team.

The open pair contest for the Cavendish club trophy began last evening with nearly 100 pairs competing for the coveted prize. The final session in this contest will end tomorrow afternoon.

Miniature Room Built for Queen Open to Dec. 15

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

With the present interest in everything which concerns the English royal family, it seems quite appropriate that the Art institute should cling a little longer to something which will shortly belong to Queen Mary. This refers to the miniature Georgian Room which was made by Mrs. James Ward Thorne of Chicago for the queen. The little room will be kept on exhibit until Dec. 15. Its final destination is the Victoria and Albert museum, London.

More than 5,000 visitors already have admired the beautiful piece of craftsmanship which this room is. It is perfect to the least detail. The tiny books really open; there are tiny chessmen on the table that can really be lifted and moved; the rug on the floor was woven by hand. The little hall seen through the open doors of the drawing room is equally perfect.

Every item is in exquisite taste and each is beautifully made. Mrs. Thorne has built up a number of other rooms and several fascinating children's sets, but she has never done anything finer than this Georgian room.

The room is shown under the auspices of the Needlework and Textile Guild in the Antiquarian rooms. There, too, are on exhibit examples of the marvelous needle work the members of the society do. The exhibit is a revelation.

In Gallery H-18 there is a special showing of needlework collected by Miss Elizabeth McCormick of Chicago. There are bags of all sorts, costumes, bonnets, shoes, and, in cases, little vanities and enameled boxes.

In the upstair East wing galleries the American Painting and Sculpture exhibition closes tonight. The sculpture is principally fine and Lorado Taft's bas-relief of the Lincoln-Douglas debate will live long in the memory of all who see it. The paintings are rather indifferent.

Downstairs in the Print Galleries the International exhibition of Etchings and Engravings will continue to Jan. 11. It is a most interesting show with a sufficient variety of good work to meet all tastes.

Lights and Shadows.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Lights and Shadows" has no historical background, and it is within the last twenty-five years that it has appeared as a quilt block. The reason for its title lies purely in the combination of materials which were used in the original design. Yellow, gray, and dull blue form a perfect combination to create the illusion of lights and shadows. The quilt is composed entirely of pieced blocks, each measuring eight inches square. A half inch binding finishes the quilt, and the quilting designs are diamond and clamshell patterns.

"Baking the Perfect Cake," a fifty-six page booklet containing directions and recipes for forty-eight cakes, frostings, and fillings, along with causes and remedies for cake failures, is on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower, for 20 cents. By mail, 23 cents, stamps or coin. Address mail requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

"Certainly I'll need more than a third of a cup of milk in this maple-caramel cake?" inquired a voice over the telephone. The recipe calls for two cups of flour, and it does seem, at first thought, that more liquid would be required.

This is not the case, however. The consistency of the batter is rather thick and fluffy, and that is just the way we want it for this particular cake. Our request corner recipe for today is maple flavored layer cake, made from a standard simple cake pattern and put together with caramel frosting.

Here is our step by step recipe:

Maple-Caramel Cake.

1 cup sugar
2 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup butter or other shortening
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites
1-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon maple flavoring

1. Sift the sugar once to remove lumps and include air.

2. Sift the flour before measuring and spoon lightly into the measuring cup. Level off the top of the cup with a knife. Add the baking powder and salt, and sift the mixture of dry ingredients three or four times to include air in the flour. This, of course, makes for lightness in the cake.

3. Cream the butter thoroughly with a wooden spoon and add the sugar gradually. Beat the two together until the mixture is fluffy. It is almost impossible to overdo this step. The creamier the butter and sugar the fluffier the cake.

4. Beat the egg yolks until thick and lemon colored and combine them with the sugar and butter. Remember that eggs should be allowed to warm to room temperature before they are beaten, as this allows them to incorporate more air.

5. Add the flour and milk alternately, in about three steps for each. Stir vigorously after each addition, and make the last addition flour.

6. Stir for two minutes after all the flour is in. This usually means stirring about 300 strokes.

7. Whip the egg whites until stiff and glossy, but not dry. Fold them quickly but thoroughly into the cake batter with a spatula or wire egg whip.

8. Pour into two nine inch layer pans greased only on the bottom, so that the batter may more easily "climb" the side.

9. Bake at 375 degrees [high moderate] for about thirty minutes. Cool and spread caramel frosting between the layers and on top.

Culbertson's "Gold Book of Bidding and Play"

THE PASS.

A pass is not a bid, yet a pass by dealer [or by any other player when the bidding has not been opened] conveys a wealth of negative information to partner, from which the passing hand can be placed within the following limits:

1. Honor tricks: Maximum three, which is improbable, down to minimum zero, which is equally improbable. Usually from one-half to two honor tricks.

2. Distribution: The greater the number of honor tricks the less the likelihood that the player holds any biddable suit. The pass may also, in first, second, and third positions, be assumed to deny possession of a long, powerful trump suit containing as many as seven or eight winners, for on such a hand a preëmptive bid might be made regardless of honor tricks.

At times it will happen that a player will pass freak hands containing long suits [even up to a thirteen card suit] and honor trick holdings ranging up to three or even slightly beyond, for reasons of surprise strategy. He will do this rarely, and his partner will be wise not to expect any such contingency.

TODAY'S HAND.

The hand shown today is, I strongly suspect, a figment of some bridge wag's imagination. It was sent to me anonymously with the simple question: "How many tricks should West defeat a three no trump contract played by South if he leads his four kings in order of rank and is allowed to win with each one?"

My unknown correspondent did not suggest how the North-South hands might arrive at such a remarkable contract and, considering that neither has even an opening bid, I must confess that I am unable to supply the bidding. So I shall confine myself strictly to the question. The answer is that after West cashes his four kings he cannot defeat the contract at all. It is quite a remarkable hand.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	NORTH
	♥A 9 5 4 3
	♦9 6 5
WEST		EAST
♠K Q 10 9		♠6 5 2
♥K Q 2		♥10 6
♦K Q 10		♦8 4 3 2
♣K Q 10		♣6 5 4 2
	SOUTH
	♠J 7 4
	♥J 8 7
	♦A J 7
	♣A J 8 3

After taking the four kings, as mentioned, West must play into one of the combined North-South tenaces. It does not matter which he selects. Let us suppose that it is a spade. The queen is taken in dummy and a spade returned to South's jack. South now cashes his diamond ace. This is a vital play. He then leads the jack of hearts and, whether or not West covers, the ten dropping from East's hand promotes four heart tricks in the dummy.

The last three cards in dummy will be one heart and the two minor suit nine spots. Declarer keeps the ace-jack of clubs and the jack of diamonds. West, at this stage, has the queen-ten of clubs and the queen of diamonds. On the last heart South discards his diamond jack and West cannot discard anything without scuttling the ship. A diamond discard establishes dummy's nine spot, and a club discard allows South to win both the ace and jack.

I strongly suspect that whoever sent me the hand was trying to pull my leg, but, far from resenting this, I feel only gratitude for an interesting, although obviously homemade hand.

Incidentally, in self-protection, if for no other reason, I had better point out that the contract can be defeated if West, instead of running down the line of his kings, sticks to his spade leads. South never can bring off the Vienna coup unless West helps him.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Is this hand an opening two bid: ♠A 2 ♥A K J 9 7 4 ♦Q J 8 ♣A Q?

Good Morning!

Glorious foolhardiness of the Crimean war! The charge of the Light Brigade!

That unexpected and sweeping onslaught of a company of British cavalry—by whose orders was never known—upon Russian field batteries behind which enemy lines had been reformed, which inspired Tennyson's epic poem, has been turned into grand screen material.

Historical base but fictional pillars has this actionful and terrifically exciting production.

It establishes an unauthentic but completely believable motive for the charge, and rings in a touching romance—which women will like and men will wish had been left out—and brilliantly dramatizes an act of group courage the echo of which will live in memory so long as memory lives.

When the Light Brigade sweeps over the crest of that hill and charges "into the jaws of death," it carries a thrill that beats the one handed you by the land rush in "Cimarron" or the chariot race in "Ben Hur." It is indescribably stirring! It is magnificent! And while the picture shows the charge as a success instead of the piece of heroic madness that it really was, it doesn't veneer the shambles that was the actual result.

Most of the movie's action occurs in India. Here, Surat Khan, deprived of a financial subsidy by England which has automatically been concluded by the death of his father, turns a suavely smiling exterior toward the British, while treacherously treating with the Russians.

Comes—after a period of varied intrigue and crashing incident—the massacre of the British garrison at Chukoti, where a handful of English soldiers and their women and children whom they desperately battle to protect are relentlessly mowed down.

This furnishes the storied reason for the charge. Later, you see, when the Crimean war breaks, Surat Khan joins the Russians at Balaklava. . . . The Light Brigade is transferred to this front . . .!

The picture is acted with power and finesse. Errol Flynn, who made such a memorable screen success as Captain Blood—remember?—is a fascinatingly colorful Vickers. He is virile, electric, intensely dramatic, and withal completely natural.

Patric Knowles is attractive as his brother who [incomprehensibly!] is preferred to Geoffrey by the girl both love. Olivia de Havilland, excepting her poor taste in men, is a delightful creature as the heroine. Henry Stephenson gives a fine performance as Sir Charles Macefield, whose order Geoffrey tampers with.

An outstanding performance is contributed by C. Henry Gordon as Surat Khan. He is one of the most dependable actors in Hollywood. Wherever you put him—there he fits. Nigel Bruce as Sir Benjamin Warrenton and Spring Byington as his chatty, scandalmongering wife are excellent. The entire cast was most astutely selected.

Mass scenes are gripping. Backgrounds have sweep and beauty. Photography is of the finest.

The direction will everlastingly rebound to the credit of Mr. Curtiz.

Have I raved?
I have meant to.
Rather—I have had to.
See you tomorrow.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Hear ye! Hear ye! A pronouncement at last on the opera in English controversy designed to settle the whole question once and for all!

If 50 per cent of the entertainment value of a piece depends on the ability of the audience to follow the thought of the characters, line by line, then the performance should be given in the language of our country. If the proportion falls below that, then the painstaking work of the composer in fitting his music to the sound and sense of the words should not be compromised by a translation into another tongue.

The peculiar value of this solution lies in the fact that it opens up many more questions than it settles, and assures the controversy of an even longer and noisier life than it would otherwise have enjoyed. It comes in handy, however, in a review of "The Bartered Bride," which was sung in English last night by a cast which duplicated in several characters the one which made it the hit of the Metropolitan's spring season last year.

This production is definitly a success. At least 50 per cent of the beauty of the little opera depends on the humor of character, which cannot be satisfactorily realized by pantomime

"The Bartered Bride" in this form is a delight. Its healthy, optimistic music fits English as well as any of the other tongues into which it has been translated. And the worry of pedants over the fancied wrong that has been done to the subtle sense of some aptly turned phrase is more than balanced by the fact that the better quips of the piece brought forth gales of laughter, not the few giggles that a witticism in a language unknown to the majority always produces.

The splendid comedy of George Rasely made a deep impression here, just as it did in New York last spring. The man has a genius for exploiting grotesque Wenzel's every possibility. Louis D'Angelo, playing Kezal, received a friendly welcome upon his entrance, and many a round of laughter later to assure him that Kezal was being adequately played.

Space forbids a detailed report on the cast as a whole. Mention must be made, however, of Wilfred Engelman for his excellent portrayal of Marie's father. The principals, Hilda Burke and Mario Chamlee, made as delectable a boy and girl team as the season has produced.

A paper bound, inexpensive set of booklets, each a fifteen minute lesson in grammar, enunciation and pronunciation, is having marked success among young men and women serious in their desire for self-improvement. The booklets are sprinkled with quotations from famous authors as examples of descriptive writing or narrative, and there are exercises for the improvement of enunciation. We found an intelligent and pretty housemaid in possession of the set, and looking through one of the books, came on an exercise for enunciation that we intend to send on to Bee Lillie. It goes:

"He hit his old white horse a whack with a whalebone whip, and he went down the long white road and the wheels just whizzed."

Also:

My grandmother sent me a new-fashioned, three-cornered, cambric, country-cut handkerchief. Not an old-fashioned, three-cornered, country-cut handkerchief but a new-fashioned, three-cornered cambric country-cut handkerchief."

Remember Theda Bara? Film Favor Turns to Her Type Again

"O, Sweet Dardanella, I love your harem eyes,
I'm a lucky fella, to capture such a prize."

Remember those days of "Dardanella," "The Sheik," "The Vamp"—songs that were tempoed to the vampy movies in which Theda Bara and her imitators tried to outdo one another in torridity? You do? Well, according to dispatches from Hollywood, the movie producers remember them too, and especially do they remember Miss Bara, who was the slinkiest lady of them all.

MARLA SHELTON.

The movie makers, agreeing that all things go in cycles, are considering a return, not of Theda, but of her type. And they think they have found the right party in Marla Shelton, who has that black hair, those deep eyes, and all the basic things a vamp requires. Her charms, however, are more streamlined—so to speak—than were the other lady's. And the producers think this very appropos.

So they have cast her in an M.-G.-M. picture, "Under Cover of Night," a title that might have been thought up for Theda Bara herself. And, while on the subject, a turn through the files brought to light some photos of Theda in her starring rôles. They show pretty well the sort of thing that thrilled us a few years ago, but do not show why.

They went in for fancy headdress a great deal in those days. Theda played in so many Egyptian, oriental, and harem stories and wore so many varieties of headpiece that when, occasionally, she turned up as just a plain, wicked woman, with only her coiffure as a covering, audiences sat through the pictures with a restless feeling something was missing, though often they didn't know just what.

Assembly Ball a Brilliant and Colorful Affair

Decorations Give Spectacle a Christmasy Note.

The Assembly ball, given last night in the Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone, demonstrated again that formality need not be dull nor stuffy for, although the ball, as always, was the most formal affair of the winter, it also was an occasion upon which every one appeared to be having a very good time when this went to press.

The formality was in the decorations of the foyer where the receiving line stood, in the attire of the guests, and in the general atmosphere that the dignity of the Assembly governors, headed by Arthur Meeker, gives to the affair, for the decorations of the ballroom itself were as colorful and informal as those at the Mardi Gras.

From the big crystal chandelier in the center of the room was suspended a huge bunch of red and white balloons and from it to the molding radiated red and white streamers. All around the room were silver posts against shining red backgrounds, and the effect was delightfully gay and Christmasy. Red and white were the colors used by Ambrose C. Cramer in decorating the street café on the floor above the ballroom, where the thirstier guests gathered between dances.

The foyer was a bower of green, palms, and Alabama smilax, with only one elevator in evidence, and the receiving line stood before a tall screen of smilax studded with white chrysanthemums.

Taking turns receiving were Mrs. Meeker, handsome in black panne velvet with pink rose trimmings and a black aigret in her hair; Mrs. William R. Odell Jr., who was lovely in white and gold brocade and who was receiving at an Assembly for the first time, for her husband just was elected to governorship in the organization; Mrs. John A. Stevenson, smart in gray crêpe embroidered in rhinestones, and Mrs. Dexter Cummings, slim and blonde and young, in a full skirted white taffeta gown with a V neckline, and green slippers that matched her green sash.

Also receiving were Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. William McCormick Blair, Mrs. Arthur G. Cable, Mrs. James H. Douglas Jr., Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr. Mrs. Douglas was stunning in a simple gown of flesh color satin with silver and gold thread trimming.

Mrs. Johnston, one of society's most beautiful women, wore an unusual and becoming gown of dark violet silk jersey, made very simply with a square decolletage and a train. The only ornaments were two diamond clips. Stanley Field, John Alden Carpenter, William H. Mitchell, Robert A. Gardner, Howard F. Gillette, and Wayne Chatfield-Taylor also are governors, but their wives were not at the ball because of illness, absence from the city, or mourning. Harold F. McCormick is the only unmarried governor and he is in Hot Springs, Ark.

Mrs. Armour's gown was a dainty one of white lace made with a square neckline and short puffed sleeves and embroidered delicately in an all-over pattern with iridescent sequins. A narrow Burgundy belt and slippers were the only color note. Mrs. Ryerson chose white, too, a gown of filmy chiffon with crystal trimming.

Mrs. Cable was stunning in a gown of dark rose taffeta, simply made, and with it she wore a little gold headband, Russian in style. Mrs.

Prof. Who Labeled Whistlers 'Morons' Tries Hand Again

New York, Dec. 4.—(AP)—After twice viewing the two current Broadway productions of Shakespeare's drama, Prof. Charles Gray Shaw of New York university today proclaimed that what this country needs is "a sprinkling of just such fellows as we see in 'Hamlet.'"

"There is not a man in public life," he said in an interview, "whose personality requires 1 per cent of that which Hamlet's demands. The average citizen is less baffling than the ordinary cross-word puzzle. The humblest shopkeeper or even the newsboy can see through him."

Dr. Shaw is the philosophy professor with the trim gray van dyke and the waggish sense of humor who caused a nation-wide stir a few years ago by remarking in an offhand way that people who whistled were morons. The reaction was so terrific that he still shudders when he thinks about it.

The Man on the Blue

By Luke Short

SYNOPSIS.

Fleeing the law, Shamrock Ireland, arrogant young westerner, reaches Arizona on his Blue, and saves the life of Sherif Lobell, who is about to be shot by a girl, Nancy Hyatt. The Hyatts—Nancy and her brother, Mayo—have lost their ranch, the Double Diamond, to the bank. Mayo, recently paroled, has threatened to kill any man who serves him with a dispossess. Because Shamrock believes it was Mayo who betrayed the man who brought him up, he accepts the dangerous task of serving the papers. A reward is out for Shamrock for shooting a town marshal in self-defense over a card game. Shamrock confronts Mayo Hyatt at his ranch and is shot by Nancy. When he regains consciousness he learns he has misjudged Hyatt, but Nancy scorns him. She tried to shoot Lobell to save her brother, paroled on good behavior, from killing him. Shamrock decides to investigate Lobell's grudge against the Hyatts. He bullies Lobell into appointing him deputy sherif. A stable boy who has changed his name from Maginnis to McKinley, is wanted, according to Lobell, across the border as a killer. With three of his men and Shamrock he plans to arrest him. Shamrock suspects Lobell intends to kill him "by accident" and cleverly outwits him, causing Lobell to shoot one of his own men. Maginnis is jailed. Shamrock is to go with Lobell to the Hyatts' ranch next morning. That night he tries to talk to Maginnis from outside his cell window, but is interrupted by a guard. Shamrock senses that Lobell, for some reason of his own, plans to have the lad shot while "attempting to escape" on the trip next day across the border. He plans to steal the jail keys so the boy cannot be taken out while he's away with Lobell.

INSTALMENT XVIII.

STEALING THE JAIL KEYS.

Stealthily Shamrock made his way across the room, pausing every few feet to listen. When he reached the corridor door, he was less than three feet from the cot, and he could make out Freed's head. Freed was facing the wall, his back to Shamrock, but Shamrock knew when he opened the corridor door more light would be thrown on Freed. It was a small thing, but it might wake him.

Shamrock was casting around for Freed's clothes when his gaze happened to fall to the floor. There in the crack of the corridor door lay Freed's levis.

Shamrock picked them up and, holding the corridor door with one hand, he placed the levis almost against Freed's head, arranging them gently so they would block out all light in case Freed turned over.

Then with infinite slowness Shamrock pulled the steel door back. Cautiously he edged his head through the crack and looked.

The lantern was on the floor, maybe five feet from him. The jail, added onto tne sherif's office, was of triple thick adobe brick, so that the walls were perhaps three feet through.

Pace was immediately to the left of the entrance and Shamrock saw with quiet exultation that he had not moved. He had counted on that. There had not been enough room for Pace's chair in the setback between the doorway and the cells, so that it projected out a little. The back frame that held the keys was free of the wall in plain sight, as were the keys. They could be lifted easily as long as Pace was occupied.

Shamrock looked at the floor for any sand or gravel. He saw none and he put his foot out, letting his weight settle cautiously on the boards. They did not creak.

Then he stepped through the door and flattened himself against the wall. He was holding his breath, every muscle straining for quiet.

Not a sound so far. Cautiously he reached out for the ring. If he could keep the keys from jangling then he would be safe.

CRASH!

Even in that instant of sound Shamrock knew what had happened. The door behind him had slammed!

He kicked out at the light at the same time whipping up his gun in a high arc and lunging for Pace's back.

Pace, in the act of swivelling his head, took the downsweeping barrel square on top of his Stetson as the light went out and the lantern clattered across the floor.

Shamrock grabbed the keys as he heard Pace slide out of his chair and slump on the floor.

Keys in hand, he whirled. If he was quick he could get out before Freed was fully awake.

He felt frantically for the door knob. Where it should have been was smooth, sheet steel.

Then he understood. The inside, of course, had no knob or latch. A safety device to make a jail break harder. That's why the door had been wedged open with the levis.

He was trapped.

Grimly he fought down his panic and listened. Freed would be wakened. Would he understand the truth or would he, fogged by sleep, think a draft had slammed it?

"Pace," a thick voice called from outside. It was Freed.

How did Pace talk? "Yeah. Open up," Shamrock mouthed gruffly.

Then he listened. If Freed had a light he was lost.

He heard a fumbling with the lock. He holstered his gun, put a hand on each doorway wall to brace him, and raised a foot.

The door swung open on a dark room. Freed's body bulked large in the gloom.

"Whatsa'——"

Shamrock put all his weight behind his shoving foot that settled in Freed's belly and kited him off across the room.

Without waiting for more Shamrock streaked through the door, across the office, and out the street door just as he heard Freed crash into some furniture. He ran straight across the street for the alley, and in its welcome darkness stopped.

He saw a match flare in the office. That would be Freed.

Shamrock about-faced and raced down the alley, turning in at the hotel. The rope was still hanging from the window and he pulled himself up hand over hand. In another minute he was in his own room undressing in the dark.

In yet another minute he was in bed, the key ring under his pillow, his twin Colts on the covers.

He waited a long five minutes then he heard footsteps on the stairs.

When the knock came on his door he called sleepily: "Yeah?"

"Open up!"

"Come in careful," Shamrock said warningly, getting out of bed and backing against the wall. The bed was mussed, his hair was tousled, and both his guns were trained on the door when it swung open.

It was Freed, Pace, and the clerk.

"See?" the clerk said righteously to Pace. "He's been here nigh onto two hours."

"What is this?" Shamrock growled.

Pace's pale, shallow eyes glared suspiciously at him then looked at the bed.

"Nothin'," he said.

Shamrock glared back. "I'll give you five seconds to get clear the hell outa' here," he said flatly.

Hurriedly Freed backed out the door, the clerk crowding him. Pace, more sullen, took his time.

The door slammed on Shamrock's mental count of five. He shot once into the door.

As the echo died he heard the receding clamor of footsteps racing down the hall.

He climbed back in bed and immediately went to sleep.

It was the beginning of a perfect spring day when Shamrock stepped out onto the street next morning. It was early, so he was in no particular hurry as he went into Sanford's general store and bought a couple of boxes of .45 shells with which he filled the gaps in his shell belt—six of them. The rest he emptied into his handkerchief and rammed in his hip pocket.

His breakfast at the Chinaman's was leisurely. Halfway through it he looked up to see Freed enter. They glared at each other then Shamrock went on unhurriedly with his meal. Finished, he rolled a cigaret, stepped out into the street, and turned down to the sherif's office.

Gay Week-End Ahead for Buds and Elders, Too

Several Small, Interesting Parties on Calendar.

Klebs of Nyon, Switzerland, who has been here visiting her daughter, Mrs. William Burry Jr., unfortunately will not be here to make the family reunion complete, since she is going east in another fortnight to join Dr. Klebs, and spend Christmas with him and his daughter, Mrs. George Stewart Stanford, in New York. Dr. Klebs is in Boston and it is still undecided whether he will come on to Chicago for a brief visit. Mrs. Klebs' other daughter, Mrs. Rexford Daniels, who also has been visiting Mrs. Burry, is returning east next week. Mrs. W. Paul McBride gave a luncheon for her Wednesday.

It also promises to be an especially merry Christmas for the Harold C. Pynchons. The young James Andrew Drains, who have been living in Brooklyn, N. Y., are coming out to Michigan City, Ind., to live, and they are arriving about the 15th to spend Christmas with the Pynchons before moving to their new home.

Mrs. Pynchon's other daughter, Miss Edith Atwater, has a rôle in the revival of Wycherley's "Country Wife" that opened Tuesday on Broadway, and so she may not be able to get away long enough to come west for Christmas.

Two Sets of Interesting Visitors Leave City.

Two sets of visitors whose presence here has occasioned much entertaining by their Chicago relatives and friends left yesterday. The Robert Hunters and their attractive daughters, Helen and Louise, who have divided their time between the John J. Mitchells and the John Payne Kelloggs, returned to Pasadena, their home.

The Malcolm Moncrieffes returned to their Wyoming ranch after a visit with the Samuel J. Walkers and the John Paul Wellings during which Moncrieffes also exhibited some of their prize sheep at the stockyards show. Mrs. Gerard Leigh, who was visiting the Walkers and the Wellings at the same time, has left for the east and will sail shortly for her home in England.

All their friends are sympathizing with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Russell Platt upon the loss of their infant son, born last Monday at the Evanston hospital. Mrs. Platt is the former Mrs. Patricia O'Gorman Hart.

The Herbert E. Hydes are leaving tomorrow to motor to Tennessee where Mr. Hyde will give an organ recital in Memphis and Mrs. Hyde will visit in Nashville, where she was born and lived as a child.

Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick and Robert Hall McCormick have cards out for a reception next Tuesday at 4:30 o'clock at the Casino. The party is for the officers and artists of the City Opera company.

Foreign Relations Group Will Hear M. Didisheim.

As a sequel to André Geraud's recent discussion of Belgian foreign policy, members of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations today will hear Rene Didisheim speak on "Belgium Between Wars." M. Didisheim, who is secretary of the International Institute of Administrative Sciences and professor of international law at the Ecole Superieure de Commerce at Brussels, will be presented following the first Saturday luncheon of the season at 12:30 o'clock in the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer house.

Among those who will be seated at the speaker's table will be Adlai E. Stevenson, president of the council, and Mrs. Stevenson; Emile Rosier, acting Belgian consul general, and Mme. Rosier; Harry D. Gideonse, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Hume, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Mrs. Bartle Bull. M. Didisheim's address will be broadcast over 20 stations, but there will be no Chicago outlet.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Krumrine, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Mitten, Mr. and Mrs. Menier Sargent, Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Hickey, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene De Staebler, and Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter MacDowell are among those entertaining at dinner before the Winter ball, which the Kenilworth center of the Infant Welfare society is giving this evening at the Drake hotel. Mrs. Claude K. Sanders is president of the group.

Another gay party of the evening will be the Mary Crane league's Snow ball for the benefit of the Hull house nursery to be given in the Grand ballroom of the Palmer house. Among those entertaining at cocktails before the dinner-dance are Mrs. A. W. Peake, Mrs. Robert J. Fellingham, Mrs. M. F. O'Donovan, Mrs. Everett Miles, Mrs. William Haddad, Mrs. H. R. Taggart, and Miss Luella Sippel.

At a tea from 4 until 7 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Charles Deering Memorial library at Northwestern university, several hundred friends and trustees of the university will pay tribute to the memory of the late William A. Dyche, for many years business manager of the university.

During the afternoon Mark W. Cresap, president of the board of trustees, will present a portrait of Mr. Dyche, painted by Frank O. Salisbury, to the university. Dean Ralph B. Dennis will accept the portrait in the absence of President Walter Dill Scott. Edwin S. Mills, Mrs. Edson B. Fowler, and James F. Oates made arrangements for the trustees to obtain the portrait.

HAROLD TEEN—MA IS A BIG HELP

Decorations Give Spectacle a Christmasy Note.

Supper was served from 1:30 a. m. on in the Mayfair room and guests had their choice of consommé or tomato juice, turkey or scrambled eggs and sausage, and for dessert there was Coupé Grand Duke Serge. Coffee, champagne, Scotch and Apollinaris were the beverages on the menu.

Three ex-Chicagoans who are visiting here now and who were belles at the ball were Mrs. Horace Gray of San Francisco, the Arthur Meekers' eldest daughter; Mrs. J. Ross Luce of Gladstone, N. J., the former Lila Hotz, and Mrs. Bartle Bull of London, formerly Rosemary Baur. Mrs. Gray was effective in pale pink satin with wine color trimmings and a feather bandeau of the same rich shade. Mrs. Luce, prettier even than when she was a girl, wore a graceful model of black lace and velvet, and Mrs. Bull, slimmer than when she was Miss Baur, wore net over silver and green lame, tied with a lame sash, and a band of pink rosebuds in her hair.

Mrs. Bull's mother, Mrs. Jacob Baur, was handsome in a gold lame gown with a train. The cowl neckline was lined with deep red carnations, and on the heels of her gold lame slippers were red butterflies. Mrs. Baur's headdress was of brown feathers tipped in red. Mrs. Gray's youngest sister, Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer, was lovely in a bouffant gown of rose pink taffeta. Mrs. John R. Winterbotham, one of society's most distinctively clad women at all times, was stunning in a gown of black Lyons velvet with stylized short leg o' mutton sleeves and a low square decolletage. Her sash and slippers were green.

Mrs. Stewart Harvey had chosen stiff black, too, but her gown was of maline rather than the heavy velvet of Mrs. Winterbotham's. Mrs. Harvey's foundation was of black taffeta and the gown was made with a little jacket heavily beaded in jet. Her sister, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank Jr., wore a blue lame gown made in tunic style. Mrs. Byron S. Harvey Jr. had come from Kansas City for the ball and was lovely in pink and purple georgette.

The junior Mrs. Charles S. Dewey's full skirted pale green taffeta was dotted in darker green. She and Mr. Dewey were among the dinner guests of the Stewart Harveys, among whose other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Rogers, the Daggett Harveys, Mr. and Mrs. Fairbank Jr., Mrs. Harvey Jr., and Miss Helen Bell.

Mittens Reach New Glory in Fashion World

Glorified mittens, dozens of them, claim the spotlight these days. Hand knitted affairs, each stitch smooth and small, have embroidered backs and are ablaze with giddy colors and giddier patterns.

The all white models have gala effects on the back to match the scarfs and socks, and even the fetching little knitted skulls are matched to caps that have an outside band also boasting the embroidery.

Brushed wool mittens in all good, cheery, strong colors, with some outstanding finds in old gold, are perfect foils for dark blue or black outdoor sports outfits. These match sweaters or scarfs or caps, or can be worn just as hand covers.

One sports shop has prize collections of imports from Europe, eye blinding colors and the supersoft hand knits. This shop has also one of the best ideas to date, handsome camel's hair mittens and gloves for drivers or winter sports enthusiasts. The outside is beige camel's hair, the inside of beige toned pigskin. They're guaranteed to be nonskid, so they are slick buys for skiers and skaters, too.

There are all kinds of velour mittens with lether palms, all kinds of short mittens in every known color, and the nice long cuddly affairs that reach the elbow.

Luxurious fur lined mittens can be found in a wide price range. Half and half numbers have the top of fur and the palm of suede or kidskin. And there are mittens of the waterproof gabardine ski suits, made to fit snugly and protectingly at the wrists.

All of these are only a hint of what can be found around the town in the line of plain and fancy mittens. There is nothing newer or more effective for this year of high fashion revival of "woolies."

Four Seeing Eye Dogs.

While Nubia, the seeing eye of Attorney Herbert F. Geisler, was the first trained dog to lead the blind in Chicago, as stated in the society column of Dec. 2, it is not the only one. There now are four other graduates of the school doing daily duty here.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Since this town has followed the example set by those smartie easterners and gone stark raving mad over skiing you probably won't be surprised to know that a "ski cream" and a "ski lipstick" have made their bow. Very swell they are, too—even for those, like ourselves, who wouldn't be caught making a ski jump if a cool million was waiting for us at the bottom.

The cream is one of the best protective makeup base creams we've ever seen. It's like a liquid cream and even a backward child could apply it successfully. Just a tiny bit is rubbed on and in; there isn't a chance of streaking, and the finish it gives is something to admire with fervor.

The skin doesn't have a sheen or look cream laden, but there is a most velvety finish that's a flattering and lasting background for makeup. It prevents chapping and even heals it if you've been rash enough to court it.

It comes in only one shade, a delicate peach. We are frankly quite crazy about it—and recommend it to women who want to protect their sensitive complexions this winter, whether or not they go in for sports.

The lipstick's charms shouldn't be limited to the fearless ones who don skis and those funny looking trousers, either. It's a combination of pomade and lip rouge, very creamy, but not smeary, that does a swell job of keeping the lipskin smooth. This is in three shades—light, medium, and dark—all of them attractive.

These are excellent winter beauty aids, if you ask us. And they're of the highest quality. ELEANOR NANGLE.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Though Amos and Andy are still leading all other quarter hour programs in popularity, according to radio's favorite listener poll, that is not enough to suit them. So last night they began tinkering with the formula that has brought them success for a decade, departing from their serial episodes to put on a minstrel show.

And they put on a good one. They did it in the modern manner with emphasis on the singing and music instead of the jokes—though there were several good laughs, even in the advertising matter. Freeman Gosden and Charlie Correll came to radio from the minstrel business and they demonstrated last night that they can still sing as well as act. Bill Hay was interlocutor, and Joe Gallichio's orchestra supplemented by Noble Cain's chorus [and nifty arrangements] and a colored quartet, called the Vagabonds, really went to town, musically speaking. And Frank Parker, who is just about radios No. 1 tenor, tossed off "Mandy" in his best maner as guest soloist.

The minstrel show was in the nature of a trial balloon. If the customers like it, it will be made a Friday night fixture. Our guess is that everybody who heard it will go for it. It isn't much like Amos and Andy have been heretofore. But it's the best minstrel show we have ever heard on the air.

In presenting Pat O'Malley as a guest on his broadcast the other evening Ben Bernie saluted him as a Britisher who had captured the fancy of America, to which Pat responded: "Thank you. We think it nice, too, that an American lady has made good in England." Those words were put in Mr. O'Malley's mouth by the old maestro. At the Drake hotel he has another little joke or two sly referring to the royal romance.

Privately his sympathies in the affair are with the king and against Mr. Baldwin. "After all, he's a very human sort of person," Pat said yesterday. "If he wants to marry her [and he very certainly does] he will—and why not?"

Pat holds the view that the British masses will accept the king's romance with Mrs. Simpson if they have a little time to get used to the idea. First reaction on hearing the full story, he believed, would be one of shock.

'Playing Dead' for Period of Few Minutes Is Relaxation

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The other night a friend who does an enormous amount of work rushed home, bathed, got into dinner things and arrived at her hostess' apartment all in a dither.

"Goody," she said on arrival, seeing she was among the first to arrive, I've got five minutes to pull myself together!" With which remark she disappeared into a bedroom [not the guest one], flopped into a big easy chair, stretched legs out full length, threw her arms over the chair arms, closed her eyes and "fell apart," as she expressed it. In five minutes she was up all composed and ready for the evening.

I've been hearing a great deal lately about how busy women catch up on themselves in these handy five and ten minutes of "playing dead," as one foreign woman expresses it. This last named person is one of the world's best known milliners and dressmakers. Her day is one mad, hectic rush. Yet, past middle age, she can manage at night to be as vital, fresh eyed, and eager as girls half her years.

Her ritual at home in Paris is fairly elaborate, or so it is reported by her press agent, for which allowance sometimes must be made. The p. a. has the woman "playing dead" for a half hour before dinner nightly in a canoe shaped couch lined with white kidskin, fur mattresses, and other fantastic trappings, which I can't reconcile to the woman's amazing vitality and "go." But she does "play dead" for that period between work and social evening life, that's certain. And as a beauty secret, it has our hearty approval.

It's well nigh impossible to turn on any of our well known charm if you've been going it like the wind all day long. And if you can't turn it on in the evening, when are you going to get a chance to get in your good work? All that tenseness has to be loosened up, or you don't make a charming entrance on a scene. Extreme nerve tension causes the awkward gesture, yes, and the awkward phrase.

But get off in a room alone for a few minutes and pretend you're deader than last year's hat style, letting go of every constricting muscle, and you come up prepared to face friend and foe with an equipment of charm and poise that'll slay them. Try it and see.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Notre Dame, the team that routed the team that whipped Minnesota, arrived in Los Angeles tonight to battle Southern California at the Coliseum tomorrow. The Irish had worked out Wednesday and Thursday in Tucson, Ariz., training base for Notre Dame teams en route to the coast for twelve years.

Notre Dame's brilliant showing against Army and Northwestern in its last two starts has stimulated interest in its eleventh annual clash with the Trojans and ticket officials are predicting a crowd of 60,000. The Notre Dame-Southern California series is the oldest continuous intersectional rivalry on the Pacific coast.

Notre Dame Is Favorite.

For the only time in the history of the series Notre Dame has been installed as favorite by Southern California fans. Early in the season it appeared that the Trojans were far stronger than the Irish, especially after their decisive victory over Illinois. As the campaign moved along, however, Notre Dame came forward apace while U. S. C., plagued by fumbles, poor direction, and inability to capitalize on the breaks, was tied by Washington State and U. C. L. A. and defeated by Washington, Pacific coast conference champion.

Notre Dame, victor in six of the ten games played with Southern California, has opportunity tomorrow to accomplish what no other South Bend eleven, not even in the halcyon days of Rockne, was able to do. A victory for the Irish would make it three in a row. After suffering three defeats in consecutive years, they whipped Coach Howard Jones' athletes, 14 to 0, in Los Angeles two years ago, and last season had the long end of a 20 to 13 count.

Games Are Close.

The series, which began in Los Angeles in 1926, has produced some of the most thrilling games in football history. Three of Notre Dame's six victories were by one point, two of them at Soldiers' field, Chicago, before crowds of more than 100,000.

Tomorrow's game has attracted an exceptionally strong group of gridiron notables. The head coach of every team in the Pacific Coast conference will be in attendance. The last to arrive was Jimmy Phelan, whose Washington Huskies will represent the coast in the Rose Bowl game New Year's day. Phelan flew down from Seattle after a duck hunting trip that followed his team's 40 to 0 victory over Washington State Thanksgiving day. Frank Thomas of Alabama, Bob Zuppke of Illinois, Francis Schmidt of Ohio State, and Bernie Bierman of Minnesota also will be on hand. Zuppke and Bierman are here primarily to scout Notre Dame in preparation for next year's games. Schmidt will be taking notes on Southern California, for the Buckeyes open a two year engagement with the Trojans next season.

Both at Full Strength.

Both Notre Dame and Southern California come up to their seasonal finale with full strength. Any question about the condition of Davie Davis, Trojan quarter back, who twisted his ankle in practice Monday, was removed today when he went through a workout on Bouvard field

Notre Dame-USC. Game to Be Heard on Station W-G-N

W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system will broadcast a play-by-play description of the Notre Dame-Southern California football game from Los Angeles this afternoon beginning at 3:45 o'clock [Chicago time]. Frank Bull, outstanding sports commentator of the Don Lee network, will do the broadcast. W-G-N will be the only Chicago station carrying the game.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The horse is Radio Rhythm, owned by H. Leslie Atlass of Chicago and handled by his capable show ring horseman, Arthur Naylor.

Before yesterday's session started Radio Rhythm had been beaten out of a half dozen blue ribbons at the International show because he could not make his tail behave.

Then for a few brief minutes Radio Rhythm finally got his caudal appendage under control.

Eleven horses were shown in this class, which was open to stallions, mares, and geldings suitable for harness and saddle purposes. The horses were first shown to vehicle, later were unhitched in the ring, and then judged under saddle in three distinct gaits—the walk, trot, and canter.

Tail Is Straight Up.

Around the show ring stepped Radio Rhythm, a big 6 year old chestnut, whitish tail sticking straight up toward the lofty ceiling of the Amphitheater.

Not once did it droop to the right or left as it had been doing in the earlier events of International.

There was no question about his supremacy. The judges nearly fell over one another as they rushed out to pin the blue ribbon onto the bridle of the Atlass color bearer. Short Hills, owned by Moses Faitoute of Short Hills, N. J., was second and Little Colonel, from the Delaine Farm at Glenview, was placed third.

Then His Tail Flops.

Five hours later he made another bow to 12,000 spectators. It was "his public" by this time. A mighty cheer went out for him. His tail still was aimed at the clouds as he trotted into the thick of the fray.

This was a three gaited saddle horse event. Again eleven competed. Around the ring stepped Radio Rhythm in his proudest stride. His tail was behaving as it never had behaved before. Came the canter just before the judges with another blue ribbon in arms were about to rush toward him.

Judges Walk Right Past.

The judges walked right on past him and pinned the blue ribbon on Short Hills, the hoss from New Jersey which had finished second to Radio Rhythm in the earlier event when Radio's tail performed like such a good soldier.

So it doesn't seem possible now that Radio Rhythm will win the $10,000 three gaited championship stake which is to be decided at the show's windup tonight. Still, he might do it if that "Peck's bad boy of a tail" will behave as it is supposed to behave.

The judges put in a most miserable day and night of it at the horse show. More than 20,000 children were guests. Nearly all of them looked on either at the afternoon events or at the other which were present last night. About half the kids agreed with the decisions. The other half booed them, so, all in all, it was the liveliest day of the week at the horse show.

Miss King Still Leads.

Miss Judy King, the southern belle from Atlanta, Ga., enjoyed a comfortable lead in the race for highest horse show honors as the two colorful sessions ended.

Exhibitor.	Blue ribbons.
Miss Judy King, Atlanta, Ga.	14
Nan Su farm, Highland Park	8
Leisure Hour farm, San Antonio, Tex.	5
Spindle Top stable, Lexington, Ky.	5
Happy Way farm, Elmhurst	4
George J. Peak, Winchester, Ill.	4
Miss Ruth Suckoff, Wilmette	3
Delaine farms, Glenview	3

Miss King's color bearers accounted for two ribbons on the seventh day of the show. Knight Bachelor won the ladies' harness horse event for her last night. Miss King was at the reins. During the afternoon session she won the harness tandem event with Killeran Magi and Dufferin Dare.

The horse show winds up tonight after both an afternoon and evening session. The feature tonight will be the world's championship five gaited saddle stake. It will carry an added money prize of $2,500, the richest ever offered at an International show, and one of the richest ever offered in the world. In addition a cup will go to the owner of the winner, which will be recognized by the International

BIG 10 AWARDS OUTDOOR TRACK TO WOLVERINES

Picks May 21 and 22 for Annual Meet.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Western conference athletic directors, meeting at the Sherman hotel yesterday, awarded Michigan the annual Big Ten outdoor track meet which will be held on May 21 and 22 at Ann Arbor. The indoor meet again was awarded to the University of Chicago, which will hold the event in the university fieldhouse March 12 and 13.

The outdoor meet was held last year at Ohio State and Columbus made it the occasion to honor Jesse Owens, the Buckeye star, who in 1934 had broken three world records and tied another in the Big Ten games at Ann Arbor. Owens then continued his spectacular career to win three Olympic titles last summer and anchor the winning 400 meter relay quartet.

Dissatisfied with Evanston.

Michigan had hoped that Owens would return to Ohio State and be eligible for the games at Ann Arbor. That hope has been blasted by Owens' professionalism, but the Big Ten coaches, who long have wished for a change from Dyche stadium, where May weather generally has been unfavorable to track and field, were more than willing to let Michigan have the tournament. Prior to 1934 the outdoor meet had been held in Evanston for several years.

The tennis coaches also awarded their meet to Michigan where it will be held May 20, 21, and 22. The golf tournament again will be staged by Northwestern. In all probability the matches will be played at the Kildeer Country club. The dates are May 17 and 18.

Michigan probably will be host to the conference wrestlers on March 12 and 13. The place is subject to further consideration.

Other Coaches Meet Today.

The gymnastic, baseball, and swimming coaches will meet today at the Sherman and formulate their programs.

The Northwestern quadrangular meet, a fixture for several years, which was cut down to a meet involving Chicago, Northwestern, and Wisconsin, with Ohio State dropping out, has been discontinued. The change in the location of the basketball court in Patten gymnasium will prevent any indoor meet being held by Northwestern.

The Big Ten football coaches met yesterday morning. Since the schedules for 1937 already have been drawn, the coaches spent their hour in replaying the fall's battles. Bernie Bierman of Minnesota, Francis Schmidt of Ohio State and Bob Zuppke of Illinois were the absentees. All are on the Pacific coast to scout the Notre Dame-Southern California game today. The Buckeyes play Southern California next fall. Illinois starts its two game series with Notre Dame, and Minnesota also will face the Irish, which accounts for the business trips of the missing coaches.

Ohio Director Absent.

L. W. St. John of Ohio State was the only athletic director missing from the meeting yesterday.

The ticket managers, who met yesterday afternoon, discussed the problem presented by Minnesota. Numerous commercial photographers have been making pictures of the Gopher games which later have appeared in advertisments. The directors now seek to bar all commercial photographers from football games.

The ticket men also discussed the federal 10 per cent tax. Northwestern and Chicago, private institutions, have paid the tax. The other schools, on the basis that they are supported by state taxes, have withheld the 10

Joe Tinker, Famous Cub Near Death

Orlando, Fla., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Joe Tinker rallied slightly tonight, but physicians held little hope for the recovery of the famous old-time Chicago Cubs baseball player who was laid low by a stroke of paralysis. Tinker was "resting fairly comfortably" but his condition was critical. He became seriously ill several days ago.

JOE TINKER.

The spark plug of the immortal "Tinker to Evers to Chance" double-play combination is 56 years old. The stroke was brought on by diabetes and Bright's disease.

Tinker came to Orlando in 1920 and helped to organize a club in the old Florida State league.

When the Florida boom was getting started, he entered the real estate field. At one time Tinker was reputed to be worth nearly a million dollars, but he was said to have been wiped out in the crash. He and his wife have four children.

Santa Clara, Louisiana Go to Sugar Bowl

New Orleans, La., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Two of the nation's three undefeated major football teams—Louisiana State university and Santa Clara—will clash here New Year's day in the third annual Sugar Bowl game.

Louisiana's Tigers, champions of the Southeastern conference, accepted the Midwinter Sports association's invitation today. Authorities at Santa Clara, only undefeated and untied team in the west, informed the association earlier of their willingness to participate.

Winner "National Champion."

Both Washington and Pittsburgh, who will meet in the Rose Bowl, have been beaten and tied. Sugar Bowl sponsors thus lost no time in declaring the winner of the New Orleans game "would be recognized throughout the football world as the national champion."

Louisiana State's acceptance was subject to approval of the Southeastern conference, but that was considered perfunctory.

When the teams line up in Tulane stadium four weeks from today it will be power vs. power. Records indicated the Southerners will hold an edge offensively, conceding a shade to their western foes on defense.

Rolls up 281 Points.

Louisiana has scored 281 points in ten games, nine of which were with major opponents. It allowed the opposition 32 points.

Santa Clara scored 119 points in seven contests and had its goal line crossed only twice. Santa Clara still has a game to play before completing its schedule. It will meet Texas Christian Dec. 12.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN GROUP LOSES 7 OF ITS 12 MEMBERS

Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 4.—(AP)—A definite split in the Rocky mountain athletic conference and formation of a Big Seven group was announced tonight by officials attending annual conferences here. R. J. Gilmore of Colorado college, secretary of the conference's faculty organization, reported Utah university, Utah State Agricultural college, Brigham Young university, Colorado university, Denver university, Colorado State Agricultural college, and Wyoming had submitted notices of withdrawal. Whether the plan would be put into operation before or after the 1937 football season was not decided.

Indications were Colorado college also would withdraw.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Johnny Layton, the Sedalia, Mo., carpenter who has hammered together seven world's three cushion billiard championships during his career, had a job cut out for him last night in the 1936 ivory and baize tournament at the Hotel La Salle, but went at it with a real workman's determination and thereby took a temporary lead in the big show with four victories and one defeat.

The task at hand was genial Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia, once a winner and twice a defender of the crown. The alert, trigger fingered Otto was presumed to be a rather difficult chore for Layton to dispose of, but Johnny finally boxed up the business of the first evening argument, 50 to 30, in 49 innings.

Hoppe Is Beaten.

Layton's temporary leadership became definitly permanent at 15 minutes beyond midnight, when Arthur [Slide Rule] Thurnblad, the Chicago draftsman, turned on Willie Hoppe of New York, 50 to 46, in a tight 52 inning battle that dropped the Boy Wonder to a .600 percentage with three victories and two defeats. Simultaneously, it brought the sharp eyed Arthur into the .500 class with three and three on either side. Hoppe, the defending champion, thus was in a tie for third place.

This final battle of the day was as tight as the tournament has witnessed. It saw Thurnblad run six in the second inning only to have Hoppe work his way back to a 15-15 tie in the 21st inning. They fought head and head from there until Hoppe dashed off 5-1-3 to win a 27 to 20 lead in the 29th inning, thereby declaring an intermission.

It was 31 to 24 for the champion, leaving the 35th inning, whereupon Art knocked down six billiards again, and tied the score with a double in the 37th for a 32 all tie. Willie went to the front again, 40 to 37 in the 44th, but Thurnblad came running along with a five and a well played safety in the 47th for a 42-40 margin.

Thurnblad Finishes It.

Art picked up four more in the 49th against Willie's two in the 50th. Thurnblad appeared to be set to run out in the 51st, but missed a natural after scoring two. Hoppe made his last stand in this half with a four, Thurnblad rolling home the necessary two in the following inning.

It was well that Layton scored his fourth triumph, for the first afternoon match had brought little Kinrey Matsuyama of Japan his fourth victory against two defeats. The tiny baron from Tokio had already demonstrated that he would be a right annoying pest by the manner in which he had turned on Hoppe Thursday night with a sparkling twelve, the high run of the tournament.

Still another obstacle arose for the favorites in the show in Allen Hall, the Chicagoan, who had begun his campaign by losing four consecutive

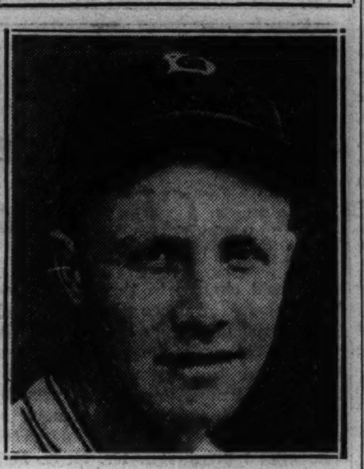
TRADED



LINUS FREY.

Horton Smith Leads Miami Golf Tourney

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill., made it tough today on 200 colleagues trying to take his Miami Biltmore open title and the $2,500 that goes with it.

Although they shot two holes in one at him, the defending champion put together a 31 and 37 for a 68, three under par, in the first 18 holes of the 72 hole route that leads to $10,000 in prizes.

The holes in one were dropped by Jack Forrester of Oradell, N. J., and Abe Espinosa of Shreveport, La., but both of them wound up down in the ruck.

Forrester sank a number 6 iron shot off the 165 yard second tee, but his outward round was two over par and he finished five above with 76.

Espinosa, also swinging a number 6 iron, lofted his in on the 145 yard 14th. He shot 38 coming back. He had a 75 for the full layout.

Smith Putts Well.

Smith took only nine putts on the first nine holes, sinking his approach chip on the seventh.

The unwieldy field, which will be trimmed drastically after tomorrow's 18 holes, could not complete the the first round before dark. Among those unable to finish were Denny Shute, P. G. A. champion, Bill Mehlhorn, Vic Ghezzi, Paul Runyan, and Frank Walsh.

Smith, Shute, and Ralph Guldahl, winner of the Augusta open last week were favorites. Guldahl was bracketed at 70 with Fay Coleman, Dick Metz, and Harold McSpaden.

Sarazen Shoots 69.

Gudahl suffered a penalty on the short 14th when his tee shot landed just off the green and he pulled two clubs from his bag to decide which to use for the chip. As he dropped the club he wanted to discard, it hit the ball. Guldahl sank his approach shot and got his par three, anyway.

GET 24 YEAR OLD SHORTSTOP FROM DODGERS

Brooklyn Also Deals with Pittsburgh.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 4.—Infielder Linus Frey is a Cub; Woody English and Roy Henshaw are Brooklyn Dodgers. It happened this afternoon in a trading orgy put on by Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Dodgers. A few minutes before acquiring the two Cub players Grimes anounced he had obtained Le[illegible] Ralph Birkofer and Infielder Cookie Lavagetto from the Pittsburgh [illegible]rates in exchange for the veteran left handed pitcher, Dutch Brandt.

Manager Charley Grimm announced simply that the move had been made "for the good of the team." He regretted the departure of English, veteran captain, "on a personal basis," but pointed out that Woody is a ten year man with most of his career behind him, whereas he believes Frey, who is 24, has not reached his peak. English will not be 30 until March 2, but the rather frail 155 pounder is considered by Grimm to have given his best efforts to the game.

Frey Bats .279.

Frey, who played 147 games at shortstop for the Dodgers last season, finished with a .279 batting mark, a tie with Bill Jurges, for whose job he will be a candidate. He drove in 60 runs as compared with 40 batted in by Jurges. He led the league's shortstops in total errors, but his boosters contend many of his boots were in going after tough ones that many shortstops would have given a reticent salute.

English played at shortstop and third and appeared in 64 games last season. He was the shortstop in the Cubs' June winning streak of 15 games, but after the streak was broken Jurges, who had been suffering from a chipped bone in his throwing arm, was restored.

Henshaw Mediocre in 1936.

Henshaw, former captain of the University of Chicago baseball team and something of an iron man as a collegian, was with the Cubs all of 1933, played with the Los Angeles Angels all of 1934 and in 1935 returned to the Cubs to pitch the team to 13 victories while losing only five. He beat the Pirates that year in seven games and would have won another, both games of a double-header, if he had been able to get past one more strike with two out in the ninth. One of his Pirate victories was a one hit effort in Chicago.

Last year Henshaw fell off badly in effectiveness. He won six games, half of them in a relief rôle, and beat the Pirates only once. Neither English nor Henshaw has played with a major league club other than the Cubs.

Plans to Use Frey.

AB	R	H	TB	2b	3b	HR	SH	RBI
524	63	146	195	29	4	4	8	60

Grimm estimates Frey is four or five steps faster than English going from one base to another. "I do not consider him a utility prospect," Grimm said. "He will have a chance to supplant Jurges, Stan Hack or Bill Herman. Each of the three, if still with the Cubs, will have to beat out Frey. Then, and only then, will Frey be listed a utility man. And as a utility man he will not have to wait for an infielder to be injured. The slightest bogging down and in will go Frey."

Frey, like Grimm, was born in St. Louis, but Charley lacked five days of being a youth of 14 when Frey arrived on this sphere. He was obtained by Brooklyn after the start of the 1933 season, following engagements in Montgomery, York and Nashville. He batted .319 in 34 games in 1933, .284 in 1934 and .262 in 131 games in 1935.

Heckled in Brooklyn.

Frey's erratic fielding last season was attributed in part to the raucous character of the Brooklyn fans. They indulged in concerted groans every time a grounder left a bat aimed in his direction. Grimm believes that Chicago fans will give the young man a chance to do his best without heckling.

The three players involved in the Pittsburgh-Brooklyn deal all are well known in Chicago. Birkofer won 7 games and lost 5. Brandt, with a bad team, won 11 and lost 13. Lavagetto, the player who precipitated the famous brawl at Wrigley field in April, 1935, when he set off a free for all by socking Jurges, was understudy to Pep Young last season. Brandt will be 32 years old before next season. Birkofer is 27.

Will Continue Dickering.

Grimm said after his transaction that his projected swapping was not over by any means. He said he'd keep dickering, even having a conference or two planned for the train ride to New York tonight. During the major league meetings Grimm and the coterie of Cub officials will be billeted in their regular New York

PACKERS ARRIVE TONIGHT READY FOR CARDINALS

Manager Fears Letdown with Title in Sight.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

Green Bay Packers, the only team to win three consecutive National league football championships and now striving to become the first team to win four titles, will arrive tonight to complete its regular schedule against the Cardinals at Wrigley field tomorrow.

And with them will come Curley Lambeau, the beau brummel among National league coaches, wearing a swanky pinchback suit, $5 cravat, and a worried look. Lambeau, who played full back at Notre Dame beside George Gipp under Rockne in 1919 and has been coaching the Packers ever since, has grave misgivings over tomorrow's assignment.

Overconfidence Is Feared.

Since the Packers returned to Green Bay after last week's victory at Detroit, townspeople have been treating the players like so many Cæsars returning from Gaul. It has all been well meant, but Lambeau fears the result and is going around muttering to himself about overconfidence, poor condition, and failure.

"If they'll only wait eight days we'll give them something real to celebrate, but now we face our biggest task, beating one of the toughest teams in the league with all this back-slapping threatening a letdown in the best spirit we've had since 1929," Lambeau, original organizer of the club, complains.

It was in 1929 that the Packers first won the championship and began the three-year reign which the mighty Chicago Bears of 1932 and 1933 were able to interrupt but not duplicate. Meanwhile Trainer Dave Woodward, who for years conditioned Minnesota squads, has gotten all the Packers in shape after Sunday's bruising game at Detroit. A four day rest and Woodward's massage machines left the Packers in perfect shape physically, according to Lambeau, but even the inventive Woodward has not been able to perfect a machine that will work all the ego out of an athlete's mind.

Cardinals Work Hard.

While the Packers have been resting and feasting, the Cardinals have been working three hours a day at Wrigley field under the direction of Coach Milan Creighton and his assistants, Paddy Driscoll and Phil Handler.

Jimmy Lawrence, the former Texas Christian half back, who went from the college All-Star squad to the Cardinals last August, has been working out this week and appears ready to return to his blocking position tomorrow. Lawrence's presence will strengthen the Cardinals defensively as well as offensively and increases the squad's chances of stopping the Herber to Hutson passing combination.

With Lawrence assisting Mike Mikulak, Mule Dowell and Al Nichelini in the blocking assignments, George Grosvenor will be given the assistance needed to continue his brilliant ground gaining feats. Grosvenor is the Cardinal chief threat to the Packers, who have yet to meet the young man when he is on a rampage.

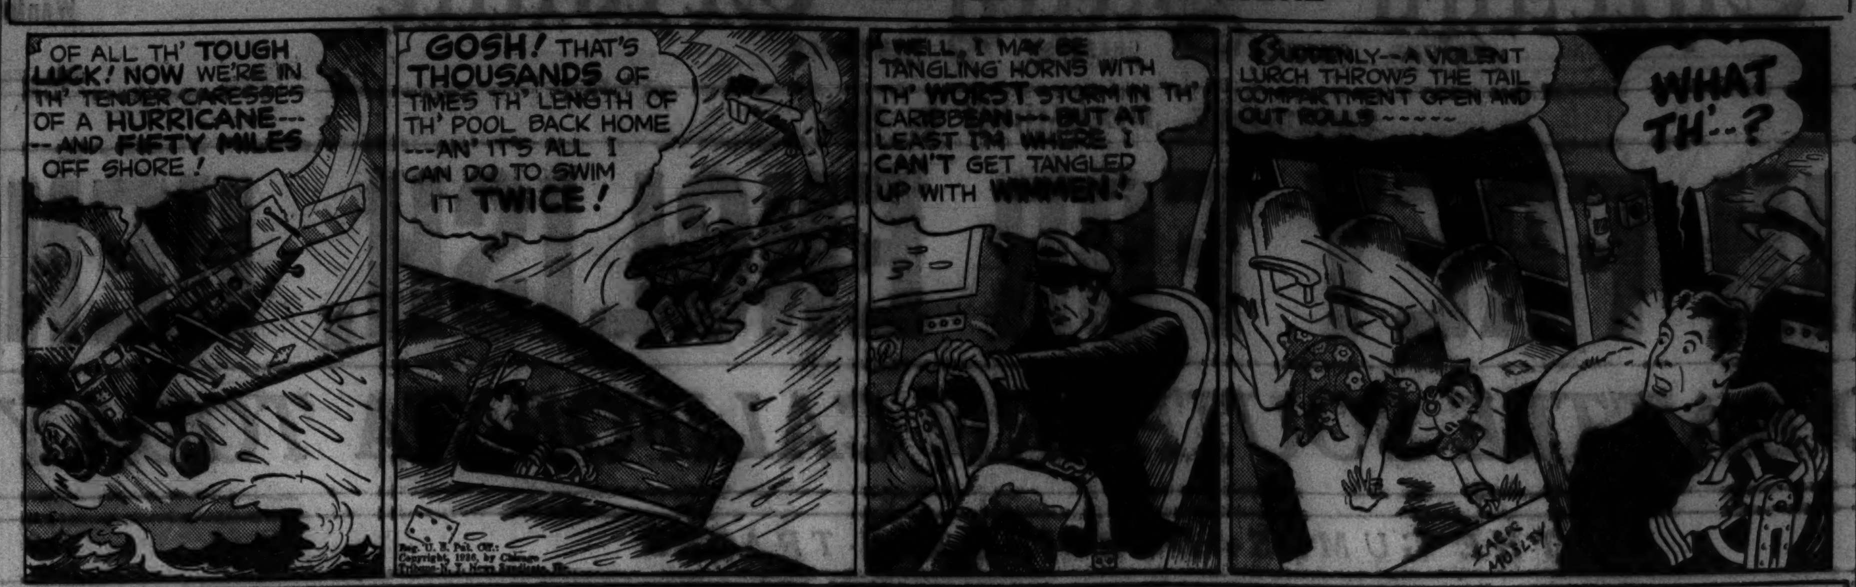
Montreal Maroons Trade MacKenzie to Canadiens

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 4.—(AP)—The Montreal Maroons today traded Bill MacKenzie to the Montreal Canadiens for Forward Paul Runge in a straight exchange. MacKenzie will be in the Canadiens' lineup against Boston at Montreal tomorrow night. Runge will join the Maroons as soon as he is released by the New Haven club, where he was sent for a month by the Canadiens.

SMILIN' JACK—FROM OUT OF NOWHERE



SMITTY—THE SHINING EXAMPLE

Wiebe Hurt; Hawk Defense Line Changed

A rapid change in the Blackhawks hocky team's practice plans was made imperative yesterday by the inability of Art Wiebe, defense man, to skate. Wiebe tore the ligaments in his left hip several days ago and it was discovered that the injury is more serious than was at first suspected. The club's physician, Dr. H. S. Meacham, ordered a complete rest for Wiebe.

A hurried call for practice was sent out by Manager Loughlin because of the necessity of schooling Andy Blair to play at Wiebe's post along side of Earl Seibert in tomorrow's game against the New York Rangers.

Blair Knows His Job.

Playing defense will not be a new experience for Blair, as last season he played the position regularly with Red Horner as a partner on one of the Toronto Maple Leaf lines.

Blair, who is one of the league's tallest players, 6 feet 2½ inches in height, is, because of his reach, the possessor of one of the best poke checks in hocky. At yesterday afternoon's drill he used this defensive bit of stick work frequently in breaking up plays.

Larochelle To Center.

The changing of Blair to a defense spot sent Wildor Larochelle to center on a line that had Johnny Gottselig at left and Glenn Brydson at right. This is the line that Manager Clem Loughlin plans to use when the game opens against the Rangers.

Both the Blackhawks and the Rangers will work out on the Stadium ice this morning. The Hawks will drill for an hour and a half after which the Rangers, who are leading the league, will practice till 1 o'clock.

Northwestern Alumni to Honor Wildcats Tonight

Northwestern University Alumni will honor the championship Wildcat football team tonight at the annual gridiron banquet in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Approximately 1,500 are expected, the largest crowd ever to attend the dinner which is sponsored by the Northwestern University club of Chicago. Coaches Noble Kizer of Purdue and Bo McMillin of Indiana will be the principal speakers. Other speakers include Dean Ralph Dennis of the Northwestern university school of speech and Maj. John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the western conference.

Pyle Sued for Divorce; Wife Charges Desertion

Alleging desertion, Mrs. Effie R. Pyle, 42 years old, of the Southmoor hotel, yesterday filed suit for divorce in Superior court from her husband, Charles C. Pyle, 45 years old, originator of the coast-to-coast running Derby and sports promoter. According to the bill they were married on Dec. 23, 1914.

Illinois Casting Club Will Hold Meet Tomorrow

BY BOB BECKER.

Fishermen and casters who enjoy indoor casting will be given an opportunity for practice and a chance to win a silver trophy tomorrow at the University of Chicago fieldhouse, where the Illinois Casting club will hold a contest in bait casting and dry fly casting.

Trophies presented by THE TRIBUNE will be awarded to the winner of each contest. Casters of all Chicago clubs and fishermen who are not affiliated with clubs are invited to compete. Only regulation fishing equipment will be used. Lines must be ten pound test or heavier. Five-eighths ounce plugs will be used.

The tournament was held last year for the first time. Stanley Bjork won the bait casting trophy, and the dry fly event was won by Frank Steel. To get permanent possession of the trophies it is necessary to win the same event three times.

The fly casting event will be held at 10:30 tomorrow morning, with the bait casting scheduled for 2 o'clock.

Canada, U. S. to Play Semi-Pro Title Series

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 4.—(AP)—An international series between Canada and the United States to decide the semi-pro baseball championship will be established in 1937, it was announced tonight by Raymond Dumont, president of the National Semi-Pro Baseball congress. The Canadian and United States champions will meet in a seven game series starting Sept. 1.

with oldtime speed and agility. Coach Jones said today, however, that he probably would start Ambrose Schindler, who is even more dangerous as a ball carrier.

Notre Dame expects to open the contest with the identical lineup that smothered Northwestern. This means that Kevin McCormick, sophomore right half back, who battled his way from the fourth squad to the first, will be in the starting lineup. McCormick learned football fundamentals at Livermore [Cal.] High school, in the San Francisco Bay district. His development has had considerable to do with Notre Dame's success in recent games. He not only is a good blocker, as all Notre Dame right half backs must be, but he also is a clever ball carrier and is especially adept in grabbing forward passes. His all-around skill gives the Irish another threat in the backfield, which naturally makes Bob Wilke and Larry Danbom, left half back and full back respectively, more dangerous.

Seniors Play Last Game.

Sixteen Southern California seniors will be in uniform for the last time tomorrow. They are Capt. Gil Kuhn, Max Belko, Jim Henderson, Homer Beatty, Bud Langley, Jim Sutherland, Ford Lynch, Don Rodeen, Jim Rorison, Leavitt Thurlow, Joe Preininger, Bob Sanders, Joe Wilensky, King Hall, and George McNeish.

Two special trains, one from South Bend and another from Chicago, brought nearly two hundred Notre Dame supporters to Los Angeles tonight. One was handled by Bill Sheehan of South Bend and the other by Senator George Maypole and Edward Gould of Chicago.

Rain Threatens Manhattan and Texas A. M. Game

Tyler, Tex., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Overcast skies threatening rain and a heavy field greeted the Manhattan college football team when it arrived today for its game here tomorrow with Texas A. and M. A crowd of 10,000 is expected.

Bert Niehoff Is Chosen to Manage Louisville

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—Bert Niehoq, manager of the Chattanooga Southern association baseball club, resigned today to accept the managership of the Louisville Colonels of the American association.

PUBLIC PARKS TENNIS RATINGS ARE ANNOUNCED

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Ranking players in the men's singles and doubles for 1936 in the National Public Parks Tennis association were announced tonight by Joseph F. Suttner, president of the association.

The rankings represent the composite results of individual selections made by a committee headed by William T. Bell of St. Louis, Mo. The list follows:

MEN'S SINGLES.

1—Louis Wetherell, Los Angeles, Cal.
2—Carl Fischer, Detroit, Mich.
3—MacNeil Smith, East St. Louis, Ill.

hotel, which will be American league headquarters. Their own league will have headquarters in the Waldorf-Astoria, several blocks from the Cub camp.

The White Sox, who may be getting a trifle smug about their well being as a result of their success last season, did absolutely nothing again today. There was some talk about the Sox getting Rookie Catcher Joe Becker and Pitcher Lefty Lee from Cleveland in a deal involving John [Pork Chops] Whitehead, but Manager Dykes did all the talking of such a transaction after Manager Steve O'Neil of the Indians had left town.

The Boston Bees today obtained Outfielder Vincent Di Maggio, brother of the Yankee star, from San Diego for cash, Outfielder Ruppert Thompson and Pitcher Jim Chaplin.

The Bees also traded Mickey Haslin, utility infielder, to the New York Giants, for Third Baseman Eddie Mayo, who wasn't given much employment by the Giants.

MINOR LEAGUES REJECT LANDIS PLAYER RULE

First Setback for Commissioner at Convention.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—The minor leagues today rejected Commissioner K. M. Landis' proposed rider to the Baltimore amendment, a day after they had voted, 17 to 14, to adopt the amendment compelling club representatives to file with the commissioner complete information on players recommended by scouts. It was the first time Landis has been beaten on the convention floor since he became commissioner of baseball.

The minor league club owners passed the rider yesterday, but today Dan Hill, president of the Piedmont league, moved for a revote.

Hill was reelected to the executive committee as representative of the class B, C, and D leagues for another three year term. The 1937 convention city will be either Milwaukee or Toledo. The executive committee will make the selection.

The Louisville club of the American association was ordered by the executive committee to pay Bruno Betzel, its former manager, $1,050 in back salary due from his 1934 contract.

Class A—Thirty-three players for first twenty days; sixteen thereafter till Aug. 25.
Class C—Twenty-four players for first twenty days; sixteen thereafter till Aug. 25.
Class D—Twenty-two players for first twenty days; fifteen thereafter till twenty days before close of season.

BADGERS SCORE 38-33 VICTORY OVER BALL STATE

Teachers' Second Period Rally Is Checked.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Wisconsin opened its basketball season with a 38 to 33 victory over Ball State Teachers' college of Muncie, Ind., in the fieldhouse tonight.

Off to a 6 to 0 lead after dropping three out of five shots at the basket during the first two minutes, the Badgers never were headed. They held a 21 to 19 advantage at the half and pulled away to a safe lead in the final minutes after the score had been deadlocked at 29 all, the only time it was tied during the game.

Ball State pulled within a point of Wisconsin near the end of the first half, when the score was 19 to 18, but it was not until midway in the second period that the Indiana team threw its biggest scare into the Badgers. With Wisconsin leading, 29 to 23, the Rudicel brothers, Rex and Max, poured six points through the basket in rapid order to tie the score. George Rooney came back with a side shot and Wisconsin returned to the lead.

INDIANA WINS, 46-13

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Indiana university's basketball team, co-champion of the Big Ten, opened its season here tonight by defeating the Cincinnati university quintet, co-title holders of the Buckeye conference, 46 to 13, before 3,800 fans.

Paced by the sharpshooting of its veterans, Kenney Gunning, co-captain; Bob Etnire, Fred Fechtman, and Sophomore Bill Johnson, the Hoosiers ran up a 28 to 3 count at half time and went ahead to a 34 to 6 advantage before Cincinnati scored its first field goal eight minutes after the intermission on Capelle's shot. Gunning carried off scoring honors with 11 points on three field goals and five free throws. Johnson trailed him with four field shots and a free throw.

IRISH PLAY KALAMAZOO

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Notre Dame opens its 1936-1937 basketball season against Kalamazoo [Mich.] Normal at the Irish fieldhouse here tomorrow night. Johnny Moir, one of the outstanding forwards in the country last season, is the only regular from last season's team who will start for the Irish in the opener, leaving the strength of Coach George Keogan's Ramblers for this season in the conjecture class. Paul Nowak, all-America center last year, will not be available until early in January as he is recovering from a recent appendectomy.

IOWA PLAYS BRADLEY

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—A veteran University of Iowa quintet will open its season here tomorrow night against a fast and rangy team from Bradley Tech of Peoria, Ill.

Following up the Bradley game, the Hawks will play five more practice games before the Christmas vacation, including a road trip to Missouri and Illinois.

Coach Rollie Williams for the first time in years expects to have two teams of almost equal ability. Taking advantage of this, he has emphasized speed and deft ball handling in the hope of gaining consistent performances against Big Ten opponents.

Only one sophomore, Ben Stephens of Cambridge, Ill., is likely to make the starting lineup. Stephens and Walley Gaddis of Dunkerton will be used at the forwards, 6 foot 6 inch Jack Drees of Eau Claire, Wis., at center, and Capt. Ken Suesens of Burlington and Joe Van Ysseldyk of Muscatine at the guards.

MAROONS VS. MARQUETTE

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—With sophomores expected to play the principal rôles, the Marquette university basketball team will open its season against the University of Chicago quintet in the Hilltop gymnasium tomorrow night.

Coach Bill Chandler's cagers lost a pre-season game to the alumni last Monday, but showed promise in the reversal.

The Marquette lineup is expected to include one veteran, Charles Eirich, center, and four sophomores, although there are seven letter men on the squad. The sophomores who have fought their way to the varsity are Sparky Adams and Milt Graf, forwards, and Dave Quabius and George Hesik, guards.

Coach Nels Norgren of Chicago has five letter men available and is building around Johnny Eggemeyer, sharpshooting forward, as a successor to Bill Haarrow. Marquette has won seven out of nine games with the Maroons since 1931.

matches. After doing in Reiselt on Thursday, following Otto's two straight victories and a defeat, Allen returned yesterday afternoon to throw enough cold water on the title hopes of Jay Bozeman, youngest man in the event, by beating the bespectacled Detroit redhead, 50 to 49, in 54 innings.

Lookabaugh Is Beaten.

Matsuyama had more than a deal of trouble in making it four in a row yesterday in a 44 inning 50 to 40 decision over Earl Lookabaugh of the Illinois Athletic club. Kinrey had a high run of six, Earl of five. The latter sprinted into a 21 to 14 lead at one stage, but the little Japanese star came back with a 4—4—2 trio, and eventually took the intermission lead, 25 to 22. Lookabaugh fought back until he trailed his foe by only 30 to 32, but Kinrey then tossed in his six, and the Chicagoan never could catch up.

The Hall-Bozeman match was a fight most of the way. Allen took a 28 to 18 half time edge, but Jay dashed off eight billiards in the 36th inning, and finally took a lead of 44 to 43. They were tied at 44 all, and again at 46 all. Hall ran two, but Bozeman replied with a three, only to miss a bank shot which would have ended the game. Allen then stepped up and batted out the necessary two.

Reiselt and Layton also waged a snug race through the first eighteen innings, at which time Otto led, 13 to 12, but Johnny came back with a neat six in the 19th, and was never headed thereafter, taking the intermission lead, 27 to 19, with a string of five. From there on they went into a puttering gait as far as scoring went, with Reisel getting few, if any, shot making breaks. In the 45th Layton scored a billiard on a scratch which sent all on the premises, including himself, into chuckles. Johnny promptly sent the cue ball flying off the table on a foul which cost him the first billiard. Reiselt rane three in the 47th, to make it 43 to 29, but Layton got the same in his half, and then ran out with a four in the 49th.

In the Wake of the News

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR Wake: Referring to the horseless carriage mentioned by Helper Dan of Evanston, I can outdate that. In 1894 I helped to exhibit in a vacant store what was probably the first steam carriage, invention of a Lynn, Mass., man.

It consisted of a mere frame with a seat at the peak and the boiler hanging like a large milk can between the rear wheels. I was allowed to drive it alone on the last day of the exhibition. When I stopped after a half dozen laps at the amazing speed of one mile per hour I was astonished to find that my partner, fearing disaster, had been dragging on the rear and shouting in a vain attempt to counterbalance the steam power and the noise of the exhaust. Incidentally the loss on the week was $1.75, showing the intense interest in horseless carriages.

Now about political torchlight parades, also mentioned in this column. In 1876, at the age of 7, I marched in a parade for Hayes and Wheeler. In 1880 most of the Lynn, Mass., High school boys marched in a torchlight parade for Garfield and Arthur. The Democrats took part, too, on condition the Republicans would reciprocate in the Democratic parade the following night. The Republicans, however, showing a sad lack of responsibility for their promises, failed to appear. Helper Z. Y. X.

In territory tributary to Chicago in the '70s and '80s homes and stores were lighted with kerosene lamps. In most sitting rooms, hanging from the ceiling was a large lamp with a large fancy decorated globe, from which dangled glass spangles which glittered and jingled as the lamp was lowered or raised.

In the evening this lamp was pulled down over a table, around which the family gathered to read or study. The large globe threw an abundance of light on the table, but the rest of the room was in semi-darkness. During the day the lamp was pushed up out of the way near the ceiling.

Do You Remember Way Back When: Young men between 20 and 30 years old wore a mustache with ends curled up [1890]?—Mort S. A., Elgin, Ill.

Millikin and Bradley Drop Ill. Wesleyan

An agreement among nine conference schools which will outlaw certain colleges not operating under the freshman rule, came to light yesterday at the annual winter meeting of the Illinois intercollegiate conference.

Harry Bell, athletic director of Illinois Wesleyan, was notified Wesleyan will not be scheduled in football by Bradley and Millikin in 1937. The notification revealed the agreement reached last spring by Knox, Monmouth, Bradley, Lake Forest, Wheaton, Illinois college, North Central, Augustana and Millikin.

They agreed they would not make any new athletic schedules with conference members with male student enrollments of 175 or more and which permit freshmen to compete. The agreement does not affect schedules previously made.

Knox, Monmouth, Bradley and Lake Forest operated under the freshman rule in 1935 and Wheaton, Illinois college, North Central, Augustana and Millikin accepted the rule in a meeting last spring in Peoria.

The conference faculty members, coaches and athletic directors decided a transfer student carrying 12 hours of work at his previous school shall become eligible one calendar year following the date of withdrawal from that first institution.

John Schommer, athletic director of Armour Tech at Chicago, made application for Tech's admission to the conference. It will be considered by the commissioners.

Track Meet to Central.

All officers were reëlected. They are: V. F. Sawin, Bradley, president; F. W. Phillips, Northern Illinois Teachers, vice president; E. E. Domm, North Central, secretary, and L. M. Cole, Millikin, treasurer.

The indoor track meet was awarded to North Central and will be held either on March 20 or April 3, with decision to be made by North Central authorities.

Select Sites for N. A. A. U. Tournaments

Houston, Tex., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Despite indications of a last ditch fight for the presidency between two New York lawyers, Jeremiah T. Mahoney and Maj. Patrick J. Walsh, the forty-eighth annual convention of the Amateur Athletic union opened today with factional forces concentrating on a harmonious adjustment of differences, which at one time threatened to rip the organization apart.

A conference late today between the retiring president and Olympic chieftain, Avery Brundage of Chicago, and Mahoney paved the way for consolidated action on everything except the rivalry for office.

Reports that the spirit of compromise would prevail, in spite of the strong personal animosities involved, were spiked by Brundage's statement he would maintain his support of Walsh for the presidency.

Marquette Gets Track Meet.

Meantime the delegates, numbering 168 and registered from all parts of the country, paved the way for the award of all major 1937 championship competitions and moved to save the metric system of measurement from being discarded entirely by the United States in track athletics.

Boston, which hasn't staged the event in three years, was voted the national boxing championship tournament in preference to St. Louis.

Marquette university of Milwaukee, with a $6,000 check to back up its bid, was awarded next year's national outdoor track and field championship meet, probably in July.

Basketball to Denver.

Denver won the national men's basketball tournament, for the third straight year, while the women's basketball committee recommended that its title event go to the Missouri Valley association with the likelihood that Wichita, Kas., again will be designated as the site.

The track and field committee sprang a surprise by coming out in favor of retaining the metric system, at least for the national indoor and outdoor championship meets. The resolution provided for local option otherwise on the use of the metric or yardage system of measurement. It probably will be debated on the convention floor.

The records committee approved a long list of American and championship performances, including eight outdoor track and field exploits, but rejected an application on behalf of Jesse Owens for a new 100 meter record of 10.2 made at Chicago last June. The track, Magee, said, was found to be several inches short.

Two Teams Tied in Six Day Race After Many Jams

New York, Dec. 4.—[Special.]—An evening of almost continuous jamming, during which 68 laps were stolen, ended with the reconstructed team of Gerard Debaets and Alvaro Georgetti tied with Torchy Peden and Bobby Thomas for the lead in the 61st international six day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden. They had a one-lap margin over the seven teams that were tied in second place.

Although a rapid pace was maintained, there were but two spills. The first found Marcel Guimbretiere going down when he lost control of his bicycle. He was badly shaken up, but resumed after 15 minutes. Olmo and Piemontesi went down together when Olmo's front tire exploded. Neither was hurt and both continued riding.

Garrison and Buddy Baer Open Drills

Buddy Baer, 240 pound boxer from Fair Oaks, Cal., and Jimmy Garrison, lightweight challenger from Kansas City, Mo., opened training yesterday afternoon at Trafton's gymnasium in preparation for two of four bouts at ten rounds at Chicago Stadium Wednesday. Baer is booked to fight Patrick Michael Barry, giant from Ireland, and Garrison will clash with Joe Connolly, fiery little battler from Scotland.

Buddy arrived in the morning from Sacramento on one of the new streamlined trains, accompanied by Manager Ancil Hoffman, while Garrison alighted from an airplane at Municipal airport Thursday night.

Hoffman and his California protégé, who were making their first trip on the ultra modern train, and Garrison, who traveled by air for the first time, were more excited over the high speed which their respective conveyances maintained than anything else...

Winner, b. f., 2, by Transmute-Charlotte R. Owner, A. B. Letellier. Trainer, O. Dobbins. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:04. Start good. Won driving; place same.

MISS CANARY was much the best, recovering after being shuffled back at the start, and, coming with a rush, she wore down KITTY'S RIVAL. The latter broke fast, set a good pace and fought it out gamely, but could not withstand the winner. SALLY QUICK, a keen factor from the start, lost some ground entering the stretch, but held on gamely. OFFSIDE had early speed but weakened. RIGOROUS closed well. LINNIE KATE saved ground. MYRON tired.

FOURTH RACE—Mile and one quarter. Three year olds and up. Purse, $600. Net value to winner, $450; second, $90; third, $40; fourth, $20.

Owner, Mrs. E. Haughton. Trainer, E. Haughton. Went to post at 4:28. Off at 4:29. Start good. Won driving; place same.

GANNONNIC was allowed to take his time first half mile, began bettering his position and, continuing with a fine rush, passed between horses in the last furlong and won going away. LAURA KIEV, far back early, closed with a cyclonic charge in the last furlong. CUMBERLAND set a good pace under rating and held on with good courage. HEY FLIRT, well up all the way, saved ground and held on gamely. DEARZIN showed a good effort. FANDAN weakened when put to a drive. LAW MAKER stopped. BARCARDI SWEEP was never prominent.

J. Chambers. Trainer, L. L. Chambers. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:58. Start good. Won handily; place driving.

ACAUTAW, away well, kept close to the pace set by ZULU LAD and, standing a hard drive, took command in the stretch and held ZULU LAD safe in final drive. ZULU LAD set the pace under rating and fought it out in an improved effort, but was not good enough. BROPHY outrun early moved up stoutly under punishment and might have been dangerous with stronger handling. KAPENA made a menacing move entering the stretch, but hung in the drive. COMING BACK tired. The others were outrun.

INFIDOX was much the best, improving his position rapidly after the start and finishing with a great rush through the stretch he ran over ODD BLUE. Latter moved up fast entering the stretch to take the lead from EPERNAY and BEDIGHT and held on gamely, but could not withstand the winner. LOVELY SPY also finished fast from a slow beginning. IDLE WAY, slow to get going, closed with a rush in the stretch. BEDIGHT, EPERNAY, and HONORED SIR tired badly. WATERCURE was outrun.

SISKO saved ground and finished well after being cleverly rated. POMPOHONE weakened in the stretch. BRILLIANT MISS showed a good effort. LESTER P. ran an even race and will improve. JIM ORMONT made up ground. DUG IN tired. LUKE COMMONER always was far back.

CASSEL CIGAR CO., 1423 South Halsted St., Chicago, Distributors

Mr. L. W. Tiedt had two planes for sale. Ads in aviation magazines seemed like a good idea, except that results were nil. Then he tried the want ad section of another Chicago newspaper.

Miss Ford, Tribune Want Ad-Viser, saw his offer—called to ask what luck he'd had—was told there wasn't a nibble.

On a purely just-once-more basis, Mr. Tiedt was persuaded to try a three-line flyer—this time in the Tribune want ad section's Aviation column.

Response was both immediate and ample enough to produce $1,400 in sales on Mr. Tiedt's modest advertising investment. He not only sold the plane offered, but got a prospect for his other plane, also.

DR. FRANK RATES COLLEGE SPORT 85 PCT. AMATEUR

Warns Against Emphasis on Bad Features.

Intercollegiate athletics are about 85 per cent genuine in adherence to professed standards of amateurism and only about 15 per cent are in need of policing to root out hypocrisy, evasion, and bootleg professionalism. Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, told alumni of Western conference universities at a joint banquet at the Interfraternity club last night.

"The real problem," he said, "is to be sure that we are making the best of the clean, honest, and authentically amateur 85 per cent of college athletics as an organic part of the total university enterprise."

Griffith Introduces Frank.

Dr. Frank was introduced by Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten commissioner of athletics. Others at the speaker's table were Prof. Frank E. Richart, faculty representative, University of Illinois; Wendell Wilson, acting director of athletics at Illinois; Robert L. Hunter, chairman of the banquet committee; Leslie J. Sorenson, president of the Interfraternity club; Harry Stuhldreher, athletic director, Wisconsin; Fielding Yost, athletic director, Michigan; K. L. Wilson, Northwestern; Dean George A. Works, University of Chicago, president of the Faculty Advisers association, and Thomas N. Metcalfe, athletic director at the University of Chicago.

"We have gone far in the direction of clean sport since the days of brazenly bought teams and the tramp athlete," Dr. Frank said. The struggle to divest intercollegiate football of bootleg professionalism and ground it in honest amateurism has been, in essence, the same fight that enlightened doctors, lawyers, and business men have waged for decency of standards and practice in their fields.

Attacks Buying of Athletes.

"The furtive buying of athletes for score board results is, of course, unworthy of any self-respecting university. The segregation of football from the educational process, the deliberate if camouflaged adjournment of academic requirements to keep a lad in school solely to play on the gridiron, is, of course, indefensible and, worst of all, sows the seeds of dishonesty and evasion in the lad himself. "These and like practices which violate what must be elementary in any code of athletic practice, should by now be beyond the stage of argument. That American intercollegiate athletics suffer, in some degree, from such fruits of hypocrisy and evasion cannot be disputed. It is this that makes up the undesirable and troublesome 15 per cent.

Asks Clearer Perspective.

"Let's tighten the police cordon around the culprits, but let's not spend all our time, and energy, and thought on this segment of the problem. Let's not assume that football and allied sports are alien to the university enterprise and that our major problem is to keep them from interfering as little as possible with the educational process. If such an assumption were sound, as I do not think it is, then football and related sports should be thrown bodily out of our universities. The real problem, I repeat, is to be sure that we are making the best of the clean, honest, and authentically amateur 85 per cent of college athletics as an organic part of the total university enterprise.

"Football, honestly administered, played by intelligent young men, under clean and competent leadership, can be made quite as effective an instrument of moral and intellectual discipline as any enterprise the American university fosters."

per cent levy. The funds have been deposited in escrow.

The faculty committee met last night at the University club. The discussion, as usual, turned to the recruiting and subsidization of athletes. The members declined to comment on their discussions.

This morning Prof. Robert L. Reynolds of the University of Wisconsin, who proposed that Wisconsin shall hold a free summer school of six weeks for Wisconsin high school students and athletes and award a $400 scholarship to each who passes this test, will appear before the faculty committee. It was conceded last night that the Reynolds plan could not be considered by the faculty committee because it conflicted with the present Big Ten rule on aid to athletes.

Michigan Out of Relays.

Michigan's track team has arranged a dual meet with California for April 17. This means the Wolverines will not compete in the Drake or Pennsylvania relays on April 23 and 24.

The Central Intercollegiate track meet will be held again in Milwaukee on June 4.

Ohio State's proposed track meet with California probably will not be held since Jesse Owens has withdrawn from the university.

Did You Know?

Sherry contains more iron in solution and other ingredients which help build up the body than any other wine.

Sherry is known as a versatile wine, as it can be served throughout the meal, from appetizer to dessert.

Oloroso is a rich-flavored, full-bodied wine of a deep color and much sweeter than Amontillado. Oloroso is quite heavy when old and makes a fine dessert wine.

The present strife in Spain has resulted in the destruction of many of the finest vineyards, including those of the Marquis del Merito. We, therefore, cannot guarantee the future supply of these superb wines.

New York, Dec. 4.—Second grade railroad bonds led a moderate advance in a more active bond market today. Turnover was $16,508,000.

A demand sufficient to bring about gains of a point or more developed in Chicago and Eastern Illinois 5s, Central of Georgia 5s, Camaguey Sugar 7s, Colorado Fuel 5s, Denver 4s of 1935, Hocking Valley 4½s, and New York Dock 5s. Even sharper advances were recorded in International Hydro 6s, Richfield 6s, and Pan-American 6s. The buying of Richfield bonds was a result of court approval of the merger plan.

Treasury List Quiet.

Not much trading developed in the market for treasury bonds, this quiet spell reflecting a disposition of traders to mark time until the government announces on Monday its December 15 offering. However, closing prices were higher.

High grade corporation bonds remained firm as dealers throughout the country worked on the secondary distribution of the recent large volume of new offerings.

Some Issues Lower.

Some of the prominent issues to close lower were International Telephone 5s of 1955 at 75½, Studebaker 6s at 114½, New Haven 6s at 48, Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3½s at 131¼, Republic Steel 4½s at 125⅛, and Postal Telegraph 5s at 40⅛.

Foreign bond prices displayed a mixed movement with most changes confined to fractions. Mexican and Argentine bonds were firm. Colombia 6s rose a point. German and French government issues were slightly lower.

United Stockyards Corporation.

Investors' Guide: I shall appreciate information on United Stockyards corporation as an investment.—W. P. H.

Answer: United Stockyards corporation was incorporated in Delaware in May, 1936, to acquire from Swift & Co. and others the controlling interests in eight stockyards in the United States and Canada.

Funds to make the purchase were obtained from sale to the public of $4,500,000 of 4¼ per cent collateral trust bonds due in 1951, 310,000 shares of no par preferred stock, and 224,000 shares of $1 par common stock. Total common stock outstanding after the public offerings Oct. 28 consisted of 308,125 shares. The bonds are secured by the stockyard securities acquired. The preferred shares are entitled to 70 cents annual dividends, have a stated value of $10.50, and are callable at $13.50.

Net income of the underlying stockyard companies was $986,000 in the first ten months of 1936, compared with $659,000 in the corresponding 1935 period. The amounts applicable to this corporation's holdings in the underlying companies were $526,000 and $355,000, respectively. The 1936 figure is equal to $144,000, or 46 cents per common share. The common is starting out on a 50 cent annual dividend basis.

The bonds are considered a business man's risk. The preferred is considered medium grade. The common is speculative.

Real Estate.

Investors' Guide: I am holding bonds on a building and have just received a notice from them to send in the bonds, for which they will issue stock. I feel that my bonds will eventually be worth more than the stock, and am asking if I can retain my bonds without being wiped out on same.—A. C.

Answer: The minority dissenting real estate bondholder usually is in an unhappy position with reference to reorganization. If the reorganization is effected through the federal bankruptcy laws, any plan approved by two-thirds of bondholders and confirmed by the court is binding on all bondholders. If the reorganization is effected through foreclosure and approved by the court, bondholders whose bonds are not on deposit with the committee or who dissent from a plan and withdraw their deposited bonds are entitled only to receive their share of proceeds of the foreclosure sale—usually only a few cents on the dollar.

HIGHER PANAMA TOLLS URGED TO AID MIDDLE WEST

Low Water Rates Prevent Rail Competition.

Establishment of toll rates for the Panama canal that will make the waterway self-sustaining as to operation and maintenance was urged in a statement of the Illinois Manufacturers' association filed yesterday with the committee on Panama canal tolls and vessel measurement rules at Washington, D. C. This action was proposed mainly to aid middle west industry.

The association charged that inability of the railroads to meet waterway competition is drying up interior industry, and that the middle west is not sharing in the development of consuming markets on the Pacific coast in the same proportion that it is affording bigger market outlets for products from the west coast.

Water Carriers Win Trafic.

The association charged that a tremendous amount of trafic had been diverted to intercoastal water carriers from interior manufacturers.

"The water rates from the Atlantic coast," said the statement, "are materially lower by way of the Panama canal than railroad rates from Illinois and other midwestern states to the Pacific coast or the Atlantic seaboard. As a result of the preferential rates by water Illinois and other midwestern states have lost a large part of the business that formerly went to the Pacific coast, South America, and the orient."

As an example of the rate discrimination the association cited the all-rail rate on iron and steel from Illinois to the Pacific coast, which is $1 per hundred pounds, compared with 35 cents by water from the east coast. The rate on hoisting machinery from St. Paul, Minn., to San Francisco is $1.83 by rail, compared with a boat rate from Baltimore of 75 cents.

Long Haul Rule Is Barrier.

The association said that as a result of the fourth section of the interstate commerce act, which prohibits railroads from charging less for a long haul than for a short haul between the two points, railroads have been deprived from competing for the expanding business to the Pacific coast. It estimated that transcontinental tonnage to the west coast increased 47 per cent since the opening of the canal, but that railroad tonnage of this class declined 21 per cent during the period.

The statement urged rate increases to make the waterway self-sustaining "in the interest not only of Illinois and the middle west but of the entire United States."

SLOAN DEFENDS AUTO FINANCING INTEREST CHARGE

New York, Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of the General Motors corporation, in a statement regarding complaints brought by the federal trade commission against the 6 per cent time payment plan of twenty-one automobile and financing companies in Washington on Thursday, said it is "highly desirable that the public get a proper understanding of the facts and circumstances."

About a year ago, Sloan said, the General Motors Acceptance corporation evolved what was styled the "6 per cent time payment plan."

"The consumer immediately benefited on two counts," he said. "First, the cost of financing was again lowered, and second, the cost could be determined by anybody who could multiply. The greatest care had been exercised to distinguish between 6 per cent as a multiplier, and the possible assumption on the part of some purchasers that the 6 per cent mean 6 per cent true interest."

SUGAR

COTTON PRICES IRREGULAR WITHIN NARROW LIMITS

Cotton futures held within narrow price limits yesterday. Selling by spot houses was offset by trade buying, with some speculative support on reports indicating the Lancashire strike might be avoided. Closing trades on futures in Chicago were 3 points higher to 5 points lower. Other American markets were 3 points higher to 8 points lower. [A point equals 1-100 cent a pound or 5 cents a bale.]

A cotton crop of 12,197,000 bales was suggested by the E. H. Miller-Shields & Co. report, compared with 11,896,000 bales indicated a month ago. The government's November estimate was 12,400,000 bales. The average guess of 100 members of the New York Cotton exchange was for a crop of 12,337,000 bales. The government's December estimate will be issued Tuesday.

Spot cotton closed unchanged to 5 points lower with New Orleans at 12.55 cents; New York, 12.65 cents; Houston and Galveston, 12.35 cents a pound. Prices follow:

LARD CLOSES IRREGULAR AFTER AN EARLY ADVANCE

Lard futures advanced moderately early yesterday on scattered commission house buying, part of which was attributed to closing of spreads with grain. Hedging sales by cash interests and profit taking caused a recession, with the close 2½ cents higher to 5 cents lower. A slow demand was reported for cash lard while meats sold freely.

Clear bellies [salt pork] closed unchanged to 15 cents higher. Cash lard was quoted at $12.57½; loose, $11.95; leaf, $11.62½, and clear bellies at $16.50 per 100 pounds. Prices follow:

Egg futures declined ½ to ⅝ cents on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday with December contracts closing at 29¼ cents a dozen, a new low on the current movement. Sales were 428 cars. A decline of ½ to 1 cent in the cash market, heavier receipts, and a slower out of storage movement were responsible for the loss. Trade in butter futures was fairly active. The close was unchanged to ⅛ cent higher with December at 31⅞ cents a dozen. Changing from the December to February delivery was a feature of the trading. Sales were 165 cars. Potatoes declined 2 cents on sales of 26 cars. January closed at $2.85 per 100 pounds. Prices follow:

RFC 'CONTROL' OF CONTINENTAL BANK TO BE LESS

Stockholders Asked to Amend Charter.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Amendments to the charter of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company providing for lessening the nominal control exercised by the Reconstruction Finance corporation in the affairs of the institution will be voted on by stockholders at the annual meeting Jan. 8.

W. J. CUMMINGS.

Notice of the proposed amendment and certain other changes defining the terms on which dividends are to be paid and retirements effected on the $45,000,000 of preferred stock now held by the RFC was given yesterday by Walter J. Cummings, chairman, following a meeting of directors.

Will Retire More RFC Stock.

Under the proposed amendments, which have been approved by the controler of currency and the RFC, the present three per cent dividend rate on the preferred stock will be maintained providing the bank retires a certain specified amount of the stock each year. The bank has retired $5,000,000 of the original $50,000,000 issue sold to the RFC in December, 1933, and is expected to continue retirements at a rate in excess of the minimum specified by the present agreement. Directors will decide at their January meeting the amount to be retired Feb. 1, the next regular retirement date. No indication was given yesterday of the amount to be retired next month.

The present provision of the bank's charter giving the RFC power to pass on the eligibility of directors and the salaries of officials of the institution will be modified under the proposed amendments.

Power Depends on Default.

The government agency could exercise such power only in case the bank defaults on two semi-annual dividend payments on the preferred stock.

The Continental was the first of the country's large banks to sell stock to the RFC and the requirements made by the government agency were more rigid than were laid down in subsequent agreements entered into with other banks. The present amendment in effect revises the terms of the Continental's contract so that it will conform in general with the standardized form of agreement which other banks have.

The provisions dealing with dividends on the preferred stock are already in effect but their incorporation in the bank's articles of association will put them in more permanent form.

Dividends to RFC Reduced.

The original agreement with the RFC called for payment of dividends of 5 per cent on the preferred stock. Three reductions in the rate have been made. The last cut was made last Oct. 1, bringing the rate down to 3 per cent.

To maintain the present rate the bank must retire $500,000 of preferred stock each year until 1940 in addition to the $2,500,000 yearly minimum provided for in the original contract. Beginning Feb. 1, 1940, the bank will be required to retire $1,000,000 of stock in addition to the minimum. The additional retirements are made from funds saved the bank by the reduction in the dividend rate paid to the RFC.

PLACE INDICTED OIL OFFICIALS ON TRIAL NEXT WEEK

Madison, Wis., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone today announced before recessing court for the week-end that preliminary hearings for the more than eighty defendants, charged in federal grand jury indictments with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act in the oil industry, will be held here next Monday. Originally set for last Monday of this week, general counsel for the defendants obtained a week's postponement.

The federal grand jury, which went into session last May and is still probing alleged unfair trade practices in the oil industry, returned two blanket indictments, one on July 28 and the other on Nov. 6. The indictments list as defendants eighteen major oil companies, five subsidiaries, three trade journals, and fifty-eight individuals.

Officials of Utilities Power could not be reached yesterday for comment on the latest action nor as to the successors to Clarke and Gosling.

CRUDE OIL PRICE IN MIDCONTINENT FIELD INCREASED

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Announcement of an "unprecedented" increase in the purchase price of crude oil brought enthusiastic expressions tonight from midcontinent producers and conservation officials, who long have struggled with the petroleum industry's bogey of overproduction.

Continental Oil company's president, Dan Moran, made the first announcement of a horizontal advance to producers of 17 cents a barrel on all crude grades, effective Jan. 4. After momentary hesitation, occasioned by the fact that such predated announcement was unprecedented, three other companies fell into line and met the increase. Indications tonight were that other major purchasers would follow the Continental with similar increases.

The Barnsdall Oil corporation, the Globe Oil and Refining company, and the Derby Oil and Refining company matched Continental's advance, bringing the total production affected by the new prices to approximately 60,000 barrels daily. The new prices will range from a minimum of 97 cents a barrel in the shallow fields of New Mexico to $1.35 for the best Oklahoma and Kansas crude oil. Texas oil men predicted a further price advance for Texas.

The price advance, Moran said, reflected the "drastic declines in crude inventories, the splendid coöperative spirit exemplified among compact states [members of the interstate oil compact] in their proration proceedings, and the unusual competitive demand for pipeline connections."

BROKERS NEED NOT REGISTER AGAIN, SAYS SEC

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Brokers and dealers transacting business in the over-the-counter securities markets will not be required to renew their registration at the end of the year but must file any new information supplementing their old statements, it was announced today by David Saperstein, director of the trading and exchange division of the Securities and Exchange commission.

The commission had been deluged with inquiries, since the rules for regulation of over-the-counter markets promulgated by the SEC under the act of 1934 provided for termination of registration on Dec. 31, 1936. Saperstein pointed out, however, that the amendment to the act contained no such provision.

Consideration is being given to adjustments for salaried workers earning less than $5,000 annually, the company said.

The increase was tentatively accepted by employé representatives. If it is officially accepted by employés it will be retroactive to Dec. 1. The company said unanimous approval is expected.

Another 10 Per Cent Boost.

B. U. Shriner, president of French, Shriner & Urner, manufacturers and retailers of men's shoes, operating retail stores in the principal cities, announced a 10 per cent increase in wages for all employés in both the factory and the retail stores, effective at once.

A revised service annuity plan for employés of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, intended to equalize pensions with returns under the social security act, will become effective Jan. 1. After that date annuities for service will be computed by multiplying the average wage received during such years of service, by 2 per cent for each year. Under the present system the highest wage for any five year period is multiplied by 1½ per cent to arrive at the pension. Benefits provided under old age provisions of the security act will be deducted from the total.

5 to 7 Per Cent Increase.

The Prophylactic Brush company, Florence, Mass., announced a 7 per cent increase in hourly wages and a 5 per cent boost in weekly rates for its 450 employés. A Christmas bonus, of an unstated amount, also will be paid.

It is expected the plan will become effective for 1937.

LIMIT DELIVERY OF STEEL UNDER PRESENT PRICES

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 4.—(AP)—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation tonight placed a Dec. 31 deadline for delivery of unfinished steel at existing prices and Jan. 31 for finished products. Thereafter, the corporation announced, consumers must pay the recently announced increased prices of approximately 10 per cent for the first quarter of 1937.

Steel circles declared this one of the most tangible evidences of a shift in the market from a "sellers" to "buyers" category. Since the depression began to be felt in 1930, they said, the major companies have granted a quarter's grace to purchasers who placed orders to be delivered at convenience to the operator.

Observers saw this also as further indication of a mounting backlog of orders, which have been pouring in during the last fortnight.

Rebuffs Lawyers in Middle West Suit.

Judge James H. Wilkerson in federal District court here yesterday denied two petitions for rehearings on fees granted in connection with reorganization of the Middle West Utilities company into the Middle West corporation. The pleas had been filed by Lewis Jacobson, council for petitioning creditors, and Irving H. Flamm, attorney representing noteholders with $26,000 in notes.

Jacobson asked fees amounting to $225,000 for his work in connection with the case. Last Sept. 29 Judge Wilkerson allowed him $51,500. Flamm asked $37,500 and was allowed $7,500.

Petitions for rehearings on fees filed by several other legal participants had been previously withdrawn and appeals taken directly to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Fees Due Before Christmas.

The court asked William J. Froelich, attorney for Daniel Green, trustee for the former Middle West company, to bring in an order Monday for payment of legal fees in connection with the case, and indicated the disbursements would occur before Christmas. Total claims allowed by Judge Wilkerson thus far for fees amount to $380,000 and for expenses $104,000.

The court voiced sharp criticism of division C-9 of section 77-B of the amended bankruptcy law, which deals with compensation for legal services. Quoting from an opinion of Federal Judge Evan A. Evans in the 211 East Delaware Place Building corporation case, he said:

"This entire section is unfortunate in its wording and is the origin and support of many duplicated and excessive charges."

Judge Criticizes New Act.

"It is particularly unfortunate in that its language has been interpreted by a portion of the bar to permit an attorney to enter the case for a creditor or stockholder, spend an unlimited amount of time in studying the case, attending court, and working on plans, and then file a bill out of all proportion to the interests of his client, without showing either that the client has paid a fee or is under obligation to pay it if it is not allowed by the court.

"There is nothing in the statute, however, which warants a departure from the basic rule that an attorney cannot have a standing in a suit other than that which he obtains as a representative of clients or by designation by the court. The policy of the law should be to relieve the client from expenses actually incurred by him which have contributed to the reorganization.

Defines Rights of Attorneys.

"The statute gives to every creditor the right to be heard. An attorney may not claim the right to speak for a creditor who has not authorized him so to speak, but, on the contrary, has employed some other attorney to speak for him.

"An attorney may not appropriate to himself the task of representing those who have selected another to represent them. He may speak for his clients, and if what he contributes is of value his clients may be relieved in whole or in part from paying what otherwise they would be obliged to pay for his services.

"One of the elments which cannot be overlooked is the value of the service to the client. An attorney may not come into a case and spend time out of all proportion to the interests which he represents, and then ask the court to pay him many times what the client would have paid if there were no provision in the statute for allowance from the general fund."

The hearing will be held at the regional office at 105 West Adams street and was termed by the commission as "necessary for the protection of investors."

Court Continues Hearing on Rock Island Payment

Hearing on a petition by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway for instructions as to whether or not the road should pay part of the defaulted principal on $11,000,000 of equipment trust certificates was continued yesterday to Dec. 16 by Judge James H. Wilkerson in federal District court here. The carrier is undergoing reorganization under section 77 of the amended bankruptcy act.

Gets Big Rail Job

Fitzpatrick Is Given Place of VanSweringen

New York, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Herbert Fitzpatrick, vice president and general counsel of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway company, was selected tonight to become the new head of the former Van Sweringen railroad empire.

A statement by George A. Ball, Muncie, Ind., glass maker, and George A. Tomlinson, Cleveland ship operator, controlling interests of Midamerica corporation, present top holding company of the Van Sweringen system, announced Fitzpatrick's appointment as president of Midamerica and as director to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late O. P. Van Sweringen.

Financiers' Statement.

"It is our intention to conserve these properties and to carry forward the conservative and constructive policies which under the guidance of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, established them at a mark of efficient public service well recognized in the railway and financial world," the joint statement said.

Of the newly selected chief of the vast system, Ball and Tomlinson said: "We shall expect him to even more closely coördinate the widespread activities of these varied interests, although realizing fully the great loss the properties have sustained in the passing of both the Messrs. Van Sweringen.

"He is the only member of the organization holding office in both the eastern and western lines in which the organization has investments," the statement said. "Obviously he is most fully informed and fitted by experience to guide their affairs.

Attended "4 Party" Parley.

"He took a leading part with the Messrs. Van Sweringen in the so-called 'four party' conferences which resulted in the general accord for four balanced railroad systems in the eastern region, one of which is to be created from the properties represented in Midamerica. This gave him a broad acquaintance with the problems facing transportation."

Eastern railroad circles, noting that Tomlinson and Ball had mentioned Fitzpatrick's participation in the "four party" conferences, immediately put their finger on the fact that the statement had said one of the systems "is to be created" from the Midamerica properties.

They considered this highly significant as indicating the possibility the two midwestern capitalists were determined to carry out the Van Sweringen dream of creating a fourth coast-to-coast rail link.

Fitzpatrick's Background.

Fitzpatrick's offices with the various railway lines represented in Midamerica are vice president of the Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, New York, Chicago and St. Louis, Missouri Pacific, Texas and Pacific, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico, and international Great Northern companies. He is also director of the Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, and Nickel Plate.

The newly appointed rail magnate is 64 years old and a bachelor. He was educated at Washington and Lee university, of which he is a member of the board of trustees. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Until 1922 he was actively engaged practicing law at Huntington, W. Va. and had as clients many large business organizations. In 1922 he left law practice to become vice president and general counsel of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway company.

SECURITY TRADE FACES FURTHER FEDERAL RULE

SEC Chief Assails Speculation.

BY HOWARD WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Interpreting the Roosevelt victory in the election as a mandate to the securities and exchange commission to clamp down even more strongly on private finance, Chairman James M. Landis of the SEC today warned delegates to the convention of the Investment Bankers association of America that the securities business faces more, not less regulation.

JAMES M. LANDIS.

"You cannot forget that the last recovery was your recovery and that it almost destroyed you," he said, emphasizing the word "your." "Fairly or unfairly, you became the scapegoats of a bewildered and discouraged people.

Responsibility on Business.

This new recovery—certainly in its initial stages—will also be your recovery. Its responsibilities are now yours. How long you will discharge them is first your concern. How well you will discharge them is first your challenge. The direction of administration depends upon your answers upon these questions and the answers must be clear, unequivocal, and free from hesitation.

"If the mandate of last November means to us that we must not fail, more clearly does it mean to you that you dare not fail."

A hint that the SEC may use its powers in an attempt to place a ceiling on stock prices if they should rise too fast in proportion to corporate earnings was seen in this remark by Landis:

"Of one thing we can feel sure, that when price has no relationship to earning power, present or prospective, a mechanism that will permit maintenance of values of that character has lost its justification. Every aspect of trading must therefore be adjusted to operate against the potentiality of such a condition.

Uses Determined Tone.

The determined tone of Landis' remarks—at times approaching belligerency—as he criticised not only investment bankers but stock brokers, accountants, public utility operators, and investment counselors held the close attention of every one of the hundreds of bond men who jammed the auditorium for the big event of the convention.

As he wound up with the "you dare not fail" challenge the audience rose to its feet applauding. Immediately thereafter, however, the room buzzed with the varied comments of the bankers.

The majority opinion seemed to be that Landis had stirred up a lot of issues, but had given no definite clew as to what solutions the administration might have to offer.

Favors Self-Discipline.

That this impression was justified was shown in Landis' answers to questions from the floor after the formal address. In reply to one inquirer he said that the general policy of the SEC would be to permit the securities dealers themselves to try to work out plans of self-discipline under SEC supervision before initiating additional regulatory programs. He cited the investment bankers' code set up in 1934 under the NRA as pattern.

"If you can handle the job of self-discipline through a mechanism of that sort, God bless you," he said.

While Landis was poking his investment banker audience with challenges and mandates, however, he was seizing the occasion for a caustic attack on business and financial groups outside the bond business. The stock brokers and utility men came in for a sharp lacing.

He again made clear the administration's disapproval of speculative trading and scoffed at the brokers' arguments that speculation is necessary to preserve liquidity of the market for the holdings of investors. The present recovery, he said, could not be permitted to follow the pattern

SELLING FLURRY CANCELS EARLY RISE IN STOCKS

General List Irregularly Lower at Close.

New York, Dec. 4.—Selective buying pushed a number of stocks to new high levels today, while the general list worked irregularly lower. Losses at the close in the general list ranged from fractions to more than a point.

Frequent cross currents reflecting week-end adjustment of speculative positions appeared throughout the session. While enough buying took place in early deals to lift values from fractions to as much as a point, a burst of late selling toppled prices from their highs of the day and converted many of the advances into losses.

Volume of trading held around the average for the week, with the total number of shares changing hands approximating 2,150,000 shares.

Leaders Little Changed.

Pivotal industrials experienced difficulty in establishing a higher level, steel shares met pressure in the waning moments of the session, and rails finished slightly below the previous closing. On the other hand, buying of aircraft issues and oil shares, especially the latter, appeared in volume, with consequent advances running to more than a point.

The rise in the petroleum section was explained by the announcement of Continental Oil that prices for crude would be jacked up with the advent of a new year. Other companies are expected to follow the lead. Standard Oil of California leaped ahead 1¾ points on the news and gains in excess of a point were registered by the Standards of New Jersey and Indiana, Continental and by the volatile Amerada, which shot ahead 5¼ points.

Airplane Issues Strong.

Airplane issues found incentive to soar on advices of increased passenger trafic by the major sky lines. Douglas set the pace with a rise of 1⅝ points, Wright climbed over a point, and Curtiss-Wright issues were active.

Traders for the most part seemed to ignore the drop in car loadings last week, as rail shares held fairly well.

An early gain in Atchison was converted into a small loss, New York Central hardened, and Great Northern dipped slightly. Utilities failed to attract much attention. Rail equipments softened.

Metals, foods, mail orders, farm implements, chemicals, motor accessories followed the trend. Steel shares started off well, but finished under a cloud. U. S. Steel lost more than a point and Bethlehem lost a large fraction. Gulf States rose easily 6¾ points. Motor issues were in the background.

of the boom of the late 'twenties, but he did not say how the alteration of the business cycle and flattening out of the peaks and valleys of depression that he proposed would be brought about.

Speaking of the stock exchanges he said: "Our problems there are even more clearly those that spring not from the depths of depression, but from the appearances of recovery. That recovery cannot [emphasizing "cannot"] follow the traditional cyclical patterns.

Against "Shallow Prosperity."

"Any interpretation of our national aims as looking for the return of the shallow prosperity of boom days is false. I know that some financial circles still see the country as one that wants a repetition of the late twenties. But those financial circles have already earned the reputation as poor prophets of the tempo of America's desires. "The atmosphere of the board room is a poor litmus test of the hopes of our national life.

"Instead of the common concern that one constantly hears about the difficulty of liquidating at a moment's notice huge blocks of securities in the markets, should not the real concern be with the causes that place strains and stresses of this character upon the financial mechanism?.

"If these strains spring from useless speculative desires the answer is plain. Instead of trying the hopeless task of constructing a mechanism that will absorb the huge pressures of that type, effort must be directed toward closing the investment machinery to the play of irresponsible forces of such a character.

"Investment rarely seeks the board room. It rarely follows the hunches of talkative customers' men or the advice of ignorant investment counsel, whose recent rise presents a problem of national consequence."

Assails Utility Men.

Of the heads of big utility companies which are fighting in the courts recent legislation affecting the utility industry, he said:

"The responsibility that should lodge in the hands of men who wish to do and to act has moved strangely into the hands of men who had no vision but that of the past, and of men whose political hatred for the direction of American life made them believe that through some abracadabra of legal learning they could turn it backward.

"Where yesterday we saw the tragedies of irresponsible action, today we are face to face with the tragedies of selfish and irresponsible inaction. In this contest of power between a handful of men and a nation, no longer lethargic but vocal and tense, there can be no question as to the final outcome.

"And if this handful again seeks a verdict, to the charges of the past will be added this refusal to think in terms of adapting an industry to the needs and social aims of the people.

What's the trend in REAL ESTATE?

How long will real estate be available at present prices? Will prices take an upward leap in the spring?

In Chicago one long established method of figuring the trend in real estate is to consult the real estate columns of the Tribune want ad section.

For more than twenty years the Tribune want ad section has reflected the ups and downs of interest in real estate. Today, as for nearly a quarter of a century, the Tribune prints more real estate want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper.

If it can be sold

SUBURBAN BANK STOCK HOLDINGS LITTLE CHANGED

Families, Small Groups Retain Control.

Changes in stockholdings among investors in suburban banks during the year ended April 1, 1936, were largest in the State Bank and Trust company of Evanston, the Oak Park Trust and Savings, the Avenue State Bank of Oak Park, and the First National of Cicero, according to the list made public yesterday by County Assessor John S. Clark. In most cases throughout the county, however, changes were few and insignificant, with families or small groups of investors retaining control.

The report of the State Bank and Trust in Evanston showed that Sewell L. Avery, head of Montgomery Ward & Co., had disposed of 237 shares since the preceding report of April 1, 1935. This reduced his interest in the bank to 175 shares. Arthur Anderson, of the accounting firm bearing his name, had 14 fewer shares with a total of 349. Scott Brown of Pasadena, Cal., reduced holdings by 96 shares to 160.

Some Increase Holdings.

On the other hand a number of others increased their interest in the bank. Foremost of these was C. H. Poppenhusen, a director, who acquired 762 shares, giving him the largest individual holding at 990 shares. Ward T. Huston doubled his shares at 40. Mrs. M. K. Scheidenhelm gained 17 shares to a total of 188.

George C. Williams, who succeeded the late William A. Dyche as president, continued to hold 17 shares. Dyche had held 368 on April 1. F. J. Scheidenhelm, chairman, also showed holdings unchanged at 279 shares.

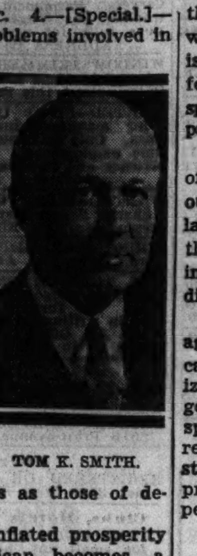
Bankers' Chief Warns Boom Perils Equal Depression's

New York, Dec. 4.—[Special.]—Warning of the problems involved in another boom was sounded here today by Tom K. Smith, president of the American Bankers' association, in an address before the thirtieth annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.



TOM K. SMITH.

Asserting that there are many indications that a period of economic expansion is starting, Smith said a boom presents problems as complex and serious as those of depression.

"In a period of inflated prosperity the average American becomes a gambler and is no longer satisfied with insurance or conservative savings habits as a means of attaining financial security. In such a period he thinks of himself as a Napoleon of finance and by assuming unsound risks he hopes to acquire great wealth quickly.

Demands Cash in Panic.

"At the onset of panic which results from the boom he loses faith and demands cash on his life insurance and cash from his savings account. He is no longer satisfied with the instruments of credit but thinks only of biting the coin.

"The securities act and sections of the new banking legislation dealing with the control of credit give promise of restraining the speculative fever to some extent, but unsound speculation cannot be prevented by passing laws.

"It is true that a large proportion of the people alive today were seriously injured in the collapse of the last boom, but whether the memory of their injuries will prove a restraining influence of sufficient force it is difficult to state."

Smith urged government lending agencies to relinquish such work as can be performed by private organizations, inasmuch as the last emergency is past. He recalled that responsible federal agents have said repeatedly that they were willing to step aside when it became clear that private credit machinery is able to perform the task.

Investments Ample.

The executives were told by Guy W. Cox, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance company, that a survey of life insurance portfolios over the last 30 years shows that life insurance investments are unimpaired, ample, and safe. The survey, he explained, was based on data of 49 companies with assets representing 92 per cent of the total of all United States legal reserve companies.

Seaborn T. Whatley, vice president of the Aetna Life Insurance company, Hartford, Conn., said 75 per cent of the world's life insurance is in force in the United States and Canada.

WHEAT DECLINES AFTER REACHING NEW HIGH MARK

Heavy Profit Taking Wipes Out Early Upturn.

The price of wheat soared early yesterday for the tenth consecutive day, and new high levels for the season were established in all of the world's leading markets. December wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade sold at $1.26⅝ at the extreme, the best price posted on the blackboards of the exchange since July, 1933.

Heavy profit taking developed on the bulge, and the close on wheat futures in the Chicago market were ⅛ to ½ cent a bushel lower. All deliveries of rye were in new ground since 1933, and closed ⅜ cent lower to ¼ cent higher. December rye touched $1.01¾ at the extreme.

Several Factors Cause Advance.

An advance of more than 2 cents a bushel in the Liverpool wheat market, continued uncertainty regarding the European political situation, uneasiness over the lack of subsoil moisture in parts of the American and Canadian wheat belt, and continued heavy buying of cash wheat by importing countries were responsible for the early bulge.

Importing countries in Europe were yesterday estimated to have bought as much as 4,000,000 bushels of cash wheat, of which Italy was said to have taken 1,500,000 bushels, including 750,000 bushels from Canada, 250,000 bushels from Australia and 500,000 bushels from Jugo-Slavia. Germany purchased 250,000 bushels of Argentine wheat.

Winnipeg Advance Lost.

Removal of hedges against the export sales of Canadian wheat was reflected in an early advance of more than a cent a bushel in the Winnipeg futures market. The bulge there was checked by selling attributed to the wheat board, with closing trades practically unchanged.

There was little in the news to account for the heavy profit taking in wheat futures on the Chicago Board of Trade other than that the market had had a sensational advance lately, rising nearly 10 cents a bushel from the low point of Nov. 22.

Closing prices on the December delivery of leading grains on the Board of Trade, with comparisons, follow:

	Yesterday.	Thursday.	Week ago.	Month ago.
Wheat	$1.24¾	$1.25⅝	$1.18½	$1.14¾
Corn	1.07⅞	1.07½	1.04	1.00⅛
Oats	.46½	.46	.45¼	.42⅝
Rye	.99½	.99⅞	.95	.85⅝
Soy beans	1.34½	1.35	1.33	1.25⅝

BREAK IN HOGS HALTED; SUPPLY FALLS ABRUPTLY

The break in hogs that started Thursday after prices had touched new highs for the winter season was halted late yesterday as receipts fell abruptly at most of the principal packing centers.

Top sales for full carloads dropped to $10, the lowest since Tuesday, as compared with $10.25 early the previous day, but this price was fully steady with the close of Thursday. While losses up to 25 cents were cited in comparing with early Thursday, final quotations were steady to slightly higher.

Only a meager run of sheep and lambs arrived yesterday and sold quickly at fully steady prices. Local packers ran into a little more eastern competition, order buyers bidding the top up to $8.90. Packers obtained most native lambs at $8.50 to $8.75.

Yesterday was cleanup day in the cattle alleys, and the purchase of the scant supply offered was made at prices showing the week's full upturn. The top for full load lots at $11.25 was paid for hefers, a few head of steers bringing $12.10. Steady prices were paid for beef sows, hefers, canners, cutters, calves, stockers, and feeders. Bulls sold a little higher.

RAIL EARNINGS RUNNING 32 PCT. ABOVE LAST YEAR

Decline in Freight Trafic Less Than Seasonal.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 4.—(AP)—The Association of American Railroads today reported net railway operating income was running 32 per cent ahead of last year.

Complete reports from class 1 carriers, which showed a net income of $89,851,409 for October, brought their ten months' total to $524,627,844, compared with $396,656,269 for the same period last year. The association observed, however, that the current figures were far behind 1930, when class 1 carriers reported a net operating income of $759,038,637 for the first ten months.

Gross operating revenues of these carriers through October, this year, were placed at $3,321,921,613, compared with $2,852,818,220 last year, an increase of 16.4 per cent. Operating expenses this year were listed as 12.8 per cent higher, amounting to $2,423,814,173, compared to $2,149,914,981 in the same period of 1935.

REPORT CAR LOADINGS

A less than seasonal decline in railroad freight trafic occurred in the week ended Nov. 28, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday. Car loadings totaled 679,984, a decrease of 109,516 cars, or 13.9 per cent, from the preceding week.

The loss was occasioned partly by one less business day resulting from the Thanksgiving holiday. Compared with last year the week's total represented an increase of 108,106 cars, or 18.9 per cent, and a gain of 191,799, or 39.3 per cent, over the same week two years ago.

All Classes Show Lost.

Every classification of freight showed a decrease from the preceding week but an upturn over the 1935 period. The smallest loss was in coke shipments, which declined 85 cars. A gain of 3,432 cars was registered over 1935. The largest decrease was shown in miscellaneous freight, which slumped 46,231 cars, but climbed 50,580 over a year ago.

Shipments of less than car lot merchandise, which with miscellaneous freight usually indicate the tempo of industrial activity, declined 24,183 cars for the week but gained 7,898 for the year.

COCOA

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—[Special.]—A rush of general buying lifted cocoa futures as much as ⅜c a pound at the extreme today. Reports indicating there would be important defaults in filling Bahia contracts had considerable effect on the market. Commission house profit taking caused a reaction from the top, but the close was 36 and 39 points higher, with all deliveries in new ground since 1930. Sales, 1,027 lots, or 15,405 tons. CENTER OF WORLD ATTENTION AS ENGLISH KING AND GOVERNMENT MINISTERS CONTINUE BATTLE—Three pictures of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the American woman to whom King Edward VIII. clings despite defiance of governmental leaders who have made the throne the issue at stake. At left Mrs. Simpson is shown as she left London hairdressers' recently. The portrait in the center is a new one sent from London yesterday by radio and wirephoto. At right is a picture posed recently for magazine use. Mrs. Simpson has fled to France to await developments in situation.
